MAYOR FISK'S MESSAGE

Second Annual Address to the Common Council Shows What Has Been Done.

HE MAKES GOOD SUGGESTIONS.

Terse Review of the First Year of His Administration—Some Timely Advice Is Given.

Following is the second annual message delivered by Mayor Charles J. Fisk to the Common Council last night:

"To the Honorable Common Council, City of Plainfield.

"Gentlemen:—To the members of your Honorable Body and to all the Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, I extend herewith a most cordial greeting and wishes for a happy and prosperous New Year.

Office a Public Trust.

"One of our most prominent public men, several years ago said, 'A Public Office is a Public Trust.' This statement has been repeated many times and there was never a truer word spoken. Public officials are not elected to carry out their own pet schemes, or to promote their own interests or the interests of any particular party, but to conduct the public business for the public good and in the interests of all the people. The Mayor and members of the Common Council stand in the position of the president and board of directors of a large corporation, and the residents and voters of the city are the stockholders. To conduct the business properly we must take all the people into our confidence and decide, to the best of our ability, what is best to do to promote and protect the interests of the greatest number of our citizens, and having reached that decision proceed to act promptly in their behalf.

"The annual message of the Mayor should not be considered only as an address to the Common Council; but as a report to the people of the condition of the city, a review of what has been done, and recommendation of what, in his opinion, should be done during the coming year to best carry out the public policy and secure the best results for all. I therefore trust the citizens will so consider it, and that any citizen will feel free to meet me at my office and talk over any matter of public interest, or write me in regard to the same assuring all that I shall be pleased to meet or hear from them and will give all communications prompt and careful attention and consideration.

Annonymous Communications.

"While the newspapers are very convenient means of communication and the editors at times make some very timely and good suggestions, as a public official I draw the line at anonymous communications in the papers, or anonymous letters sent through the mail, and I ask all citizens to try the experiment of bringing their suggestions or complaints direct to the proper officials. For a full report of the present condition of the city, and a review of what has been done during the past year, I suggest that you carefully read and examine the reports of the various heads of departments, as I shall only attempt to give an outline touching upon what I consider the most important points.

Finance.

"The summary of the treasurer's report shows that the excess of assets over liabilities at the beginning of the year for general purposes was $83,325.25, while at the close of this year the balance is $93,415.74, showing an increase in available assets of $10,090.49.

"In the Fire Department the balance at the close of the year 1906 was $1,302.17, and at the close of the year 1907, $1,504.17, showing an increase of $201.99.

"In the Poor Department the balance for the year 1906 was $342.25 and at the close of the year 1907 was $462.19, showing a decrease of $80.06.

"This would show a net increase of the available assets of the city of $10,211.82.

Floating Indebtedness.

"The only floating indebtedness consists of two notes, one for $5,000 borrowed in anticipation of taxes for the fire fund; and one of $1,000 borrowed in anticipation of taxes for the poor fund, exclusive of the sewer improvements and brick pavements.

"During the year $4,000 has been paid off on the sewer bonds, leaving the amount outstanding $121,000. In addition to this, work has been completed to the amount of $68,000, for which bonds must be issued, and new work is now in process of construction and nearing completion to the amount of about $51,700, on account of sewer extension and South Side sewer, a portion of which will be paid back from a direct assessment and the balance will be pro-

HOLD UP APPOINTMENT

Borough Council Fails to Confirm James K. Arnold for Clerkship.

FRANK ROWLEY THE FAVORITE.

Woolston Made President of Body—Committees Are Appointed By Mayor Townsend.

Voting against James K. Arnold for borough clerk, four of the six members of the North Plainfield Common Council refused to endorse Mayor Samuel Townsend's appointment at the organization meeting of the Council yesterday noon. Those who refused to endorse Mr. Arnold to take Borough Clerk Frank Rowley's place were Councilmen McGee, Nichols, Waldron and Van Arsdale. Councilmen Smith and Woolston endorsed the Mayor's appointment. Of the two new members of the Council, Mr. Nichols voted against the endorsement and Mr. Woolston supported the Mayor's appointment.

Representative members of both parties were present at the organization meeting, which was held at noon. After a brief caucus with his Council and former Mayor Newton B. Smalley, Mayor Townsend came into the Council chamber and took the Mayor's chair. In an informal address at his retirement, after Mr. Townsend had taken the oath of office, Mr. Smalley thanked the Council for the support given him in the work during the past term. He urged the widening of Somerset street at the upper end, and touched on the question of sewers, which he said was an important issue which faced the borough fathers. He concluded by wishing success to the undertakings of the new government and urging the same support of Mayor Townsend as had been given him. He said that, although he was out of office, he would be zealous in his support of the best interests of the borough and would oppose any measures against the public welfare of the North Plainfielders.

At the conclusion of his remarks, Mayor Townsend spoke briefly in greeting to his Council. He said that he realized that there was hard work before him as Mayor, and asked for the support of the Council in furtherance of the best interests of the borough.

Lemuel B. Woolston was elected president of the Council. Charles A. Reed was again chosen corporation counsel; George Weiss, chief marshal; Howard Woolston, chief of the fire department, and Pope, Keller and Kernan, marshals.

These committees were announced: Public health, B. R. Waldron and M. C. Van Arsdale; fire, water and lamps, E. P. T. Smith and Van Arsdale; licenses and marshals, Van Arsdale and Smith; auditing and finance, C. W. McGee and C. L. Nichols; laws, ordinances and taxation, McGee and Nichols; stationery and supplies, L. B. Woolston and Waldron.

GEORGE H. ROBINS DEAD.

Was Pioneer in Business of Cotton Transportation in the Port of New York.

George H. Robins, vice-president of the lighterage firm of Robins & Wright, of 130 Pearl street, New York, and for several years a resident of this city, died Tuesday night at his home on Norwood avenue. He had been ill a long time. Mr. Robins was in his fifty-sixth year and was one of the pioneers in the business of cotton transportation in the port of New York. He is survived by his wife, who will retain his interest in the lighterage business; a daughter, Mrs. Francis K. Anderson, and two sons, Harold S. Robins, associated with the Robins & Wright firm, and George Stanley Robins.

The funeral will be held at his late home Friday night at 8 o'clock.

Salvation Army Christmas.

The celebration of New Year's Day was a great success in the Salvation Army Hall last night. The hall was crowded and the program rendered by the children much enjoyed by all present. Captain A. Hopkins made the annual presentation of prizes to the pupils of the Sunday-school, after which Santa Claus appeared upon the scene and began the distribution of toys, candies and gifts from the huge Christmas tree heavily laden with all kinds of gifts which had been provided for the children present. Many little ones were made very happy indeed last evening, and Captain Hopkins sincerely thanks all the friends who assisted to make the occasion the success it was.

Funeral of Pine Yetman.

The funeral of Pine Yetman, colored, who died Monday, was held at the Mount Olive Baptist church this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. E. E. Jackson, former pastor of the church, officiated. The interment was at Hillside cemetery.

CONFIRM APPOINTMENTS

Only Surprise for City Fathers is Nomination of A. F. Randolph for Assessor.

THE UNANIMOUS APPROVAL.

With One Exception Lucky Candidates Were Announced in Advance—All Are Good Men.

With one exception Mayor C. J. Fisk's appointments at the first meeting of the Common Council for 1908, last night, were made as predicted in advance. The one exception was that of the assessor in the Second ward to succeed Charles H. Hand, who has held the office for a number of years. Mr. Fisk appointed as Mr. Hand's successor Asa F. Randolph, who was a "dark horse" in the contest. His name was not mentioned publicly and the selection can said to be one outside of what is known as the "organization."

Mr. Randolph has had considerable experience in treating with property values and is now in charge of several properties, including the management of the Babcock building. He is a practicing lawyer. The appointment was in the nature of a surprise as but a very few know of the choice of the Mayor.

In making a change in the Board of Assessors, Mayor Fisk did not give an explanation publicly, but it was understood that as the Second ward members of the City Republican Executive Committee could not or failed to agree on a candidate for the position, Mr. Fisk decided to make a choice on his own responsibility.

The Board of Assessors as appointment for the next three years at a salary of $400 per annum, the same not to be changed during term of office, is as follows:

First ward, H. C. VanEmburgh, to succeed himself; Second ward, Asa F. Randolph, to succeed Charles H. Hand; third ward, William T. Kirk, to succeed Joseph A. Hubbard; Fourth ward, H. C. Runyon, to succeed himself. Eash appointment was confirmed seperately, without a dissenting vote.

C. A. Marsh was reappointed corporation counsel for the term of three years and F. W. Dunn and Dr. T. S. Davis were reappointed members of the Board of Health for the term of two years. Overseer of the Poor Alexander D. Ayres was reappointed for the term of three years, and the following special policemen were appointed for one year to do regular duty: Daniel McDonald, John Payne, Frank Sweeney, Cornelius McCarthy, Earl Smith, Thomas J. Burns, Tobias Nolan, Thomas Flaherty and Richard I. Birmingham. All of the appointments were confirmed without dissent.

"OPEN HOUSE" AT HOPE CHAPEL N W YEAR'S DAY

Returning to a custom in vogue for many years but dropped some time ago, "open house" was kept at Hope chapel yesterday. The members and their friends were in attendance through the afternoon and beginninf at 4 o'clock dinner was served to all who called until shortly after 7:30. During the time intervening about 300 persons were served.

Yesterday marked the twentieth anniversary of the chapel's organization and in the evening the event was marked by an informal "reunion" and social time. Rev. L. R. Howard was in charge and incidentally gave an anniversary address. Miss Try Mattox recited and vocal solos were given by Thomas Hendry, Miss Edna Eckert and Harold Bonnell. The formal observance of the twentieth anniversary will be held at the chapel Sunday.

The women of the chapel prepared and served the dinner yesterday and the arrangements were made by a committee composed of Mrs. L. R. Howard, chairman; Mrs. Thomas Hendry, Mrs. William Gray, Mrs. Harry Corless, Mrs. James Herron, Mrs. Frederick Weber and Mrs. Donald McInnis.

Summoned As Talesman.

Dexter O. Tiffany, formerly of this city, but now of New York, is one of the ninety-nine talesmen summoned to appear before Justice Dowling in the Supreme Court, Criminal Branch, New York, on Monday, when Harry K. Thaw will be put on trial for the second time for the killing of Stanford White.

—U. G. Pierson, the butcher, has removed from East Fifth street to 426 Watchung avenue. ***

Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Clarke, of Sandford avenue, spent New Year's day with relatives at Flatbush, L. I.

FREEHOLDERS INCREASE COUNTY PHYSICIAN'S PAY

The Union County Board of Freeholders met at the court house in Elizabeth, yesterday noon, and reorganized for the coming year. All the members were present with the exception of J. Hervey Doane, of this city, who made a mistake in the hour for assembling and showed up after adjournment.

Benjamin King, of Clark township, was again elected director and Dr. F. W. Westcott, of Fanwood, was appointed county physician with an increase in salary of $150, making it $900. It was explained that this action was decided upon because of the added work that now devolves upon the incumbent. In the past year the number of cases for investigatiton has increased from 248 to 364, and at the old salary they were paid for at a rate less than that charged by a physician for an ordinary call.

The names of J. W. Fink, of Westfield, and Owen Farrelly, of Elizabeth, were presented for appointment as road inspector. Fink is the present incumbent and was nominated by the Republicans while Farrelly as brought forward by the Democrats. The Republicans stood solid for Fink but the minority was equally as firm for their candidate. As it requires a majority of the board to elect Freeholder Wilbur made a motion that the matter be laid over until the next meeting and it was carried.

W. L. HETFIELD JR. COUNSEL FOR DUNELLEN

The Dunellen Borough Council convened at 12 o'clock yesterday for organization, when Mayor Harry J. Swackhamer took his seat and announced the various appointments for the coming year. Although there was some discussion as to the right of Mr. Swackhamer to do so, he settled the dispute regarding the tie vote at the last election when John VanMiddlesworth and Henry Bambach each received the same number of votes for the office of councilman. He decided in favor of Mr. VanMiddlesworth and he took his seat.

John Moynihan was reappointed street commissioner and Joel DeGroff was retained for another year as borough clerk. W. L. Hathaway was appointed recorder to succeed David Campbell. These persons were appointed members of the Board of Health: John R. Campbell, Wilson Frederick, Dr. Daniel C. Main and Wesley Blaine.

One of the most important changes in the borough government was the appointment of Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., as counsel to succeed Judge vonMinden. This caused surprise as many believed the latter would be reappointed. Mr. Hetfield received official notification today of his appointmemnt. His term is for two years.

Upon taking his seat as Mayor, Mr. Swackhamer did not make any remarks, but the retiring executive, William Wyckoff, spoke briefly, thanking the members for their support during his term. The new members of the Council are Lewis Churchill and John VanMiddlesworth.

LARGE GATHERING AT ELDON SMALLEY'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Eldon G. Smalley, lieutenant in the borough fire department, whose death occurred last Monday afternoon after an illness with typhoid fever, was held at his mother's home in Linden avenue this morning. It was attended by a large gathering that included Mayor Samuel Townsend and delegations from the paid and exempt firemen of the borough, the latter being in full uniform and led by Lambert Bodine.

The service was in charge of Rev. H. N. Jordan, pastor of the Seventh Day Baptist church at New Market and was very simple. In the course of his remarks the clergyman took occasion to pay a warm tribute to the young man, having known him for a long time.

There were many floral tributes, among them being pillows of carnations and roses from the exempts, the paid firemen and William G. Holton Council of Juniors at Dunellen. Burial was made at Hillside. The pall bears were J. J. Stahl and David Allen from the exempts; William Gaub and William McCullough from the regular department, and two members of Holton Council.

Overcoat Lost Or Stolen.

Thomas Lyness, Jr., of West Second street, reported to the police last night that his new black overcoat had been either lost or stolen. It was placed by him in a rig at New Brunswick and on his arrival here it had disappeared. The police believe it dropped out of the vehicle on the way over.

MISS MAY WARING WEDS

Daughter of O. T. Waring Becomes the Bride of Theodore F. Reynolds.

ON NEW YEAR'S AT HIGH NOON.

Dean Rodman and Canon Knowles Officiate—To Reside in Orange After Trip South.

The first social event of the New Year in this city was the marriage of Miss May Waring, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Waring, of Park avenue, and Theodore F. Reynolds, of Orange and New York, which was celebrated at noon yesterday at the home of the bride's parents. The affair was a very quiet one, those present not numbering more than fifty, including the relatives and intimate friends of the couple.

The bride, gowned in white lace net and carrying a bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley, was attended by her sister, Mrs. Humphrey, wife of Capt. Chauncey Humphrey, as matron-of-honor. Her gown was also of white lace and she carried red roses. Mr. Reynolds had for its best man, J. D. Harrison, of Orange.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, rector-emeritus of Grace church, and a life-long friend of the bride's family. He was assisted by Canon Knowles, of New York. The wedding march was played by Austin's orchestra, while the bridal party descended the broad staircase and entered the large parlors were the officiating clergymen and the company of guests were in waiting. An informal reception followed the ceremony, after which a wedding breakfast was served by Sherry. During the afternoon the bride and groom left on a wedding trip through the South. Upon their return they will reside in New York.

The Waring home was simply, but very effectively decorated for the occasion, the arrangement in the parlors and dining room being especially attractive with Southern smilax and roses which was used in profusion.

The bride was the recipient of a wealth of wedding gifts from relaties and a host of friends. She has been prominent here in the younger society set and has been a favorite and leader in many social functions. The groom is also well known socially both in New York and at Orange, where he has a handsome home. He is a graduate of Princeton, Class '97, and is a member of the University and Racquet Clubs, of New York. He is a member of the New York Stock Exchange and has been very successful in business.

MAYOR FISK HOLDS ANNUAL RECEPTION

More than 200 city officials and citizens in private life attended the New Year's day reception held yesterday afternoon by Mayor Charles J. Fisk at his office on North avenue. The hours were from 1 to 5 o'clock and everyone who called was given a cordial greeting and there was an exchange of best wishes for success and happiness during the coming year. Among the callers were the heads of the various city departments; also a majority of the policemen and firemen, as well as other employes of the city.

Most of the officials called early in the afternoon so that they were able to take the 2:31 train for Elizabeth, where they attended the annual receptions held by Congressman Chas. N. Fowler and United States Senator John Kean.

Not to be outdone by the hospitality of Congressman Fowler and Senator Kean, Mayor Fisk arranged to serve refreshments at his reception. After a cordial handshake with the Mayor, callers were invited to another room where a large punch bowl and an abundance of turkey sandwiches were the attractions. Tax Collector William R. Townsend and Overseer of the Poor Alexander D. Ayers assisted in serving, the former attending to the punch and the latter passing the sandwiches. There was also plenty of good cigars for all who smoked.

The genial Mayor and a good word for everyone, especially the officials and city employes. He congratulated them upon their good work in the past and expressed the confidence that the same high standard would be maintained in every department during the coming year. His Honor was given every assurance on the part of one and all that they would do their best to keep the city up to its present high state of efficiency and good repute.

Miss Gertrude L. Hunter, a student at Bernard College, is spending the holidays at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Hunter, of West Fourth street.

CITY FATHERS ORGANIZE

R. I. Tolles, Unanimously Chosen President, Announces His Committees.

MR. BUXTON FINANCE HEAD.

No Changes Made in Chairmenship of Street, Fire, Light and Public Affairs Committees.

The Common Council for 1908 held its first meeting last night for organization. Councilmen W. S. Tyler and Henry D. Hibbard were the only two members absent. Those present were Councilmen Herbert Buxton, Robert E. Hall, Frederick E. Mygatt, Ralph I. Tolles, Frank DeWitt Randolph, Charles C. Randolph, Francis L. Montgomery, H. B. Suydam. Mayor Charles J. Fisk and Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh were also present as interested spectators.

The first business of the new body was to elect a president. Mr. Gloak nominated Mr. Tolles and he was elected without a dissenting vote. He was escorted to the chair by Councilmen Suydam and Mygatt. In accepting the honor, Mr. Tolles thanked the members and expressed the hope that all would work together in peace and harmony for the city's interest. He impressed upon the members the importance of being present at every meeting promptly at 8 o'clock and urged that economy be followed throughout the year, that all think twice before voting away the people's money and that if possible an effort be made to reduce the tax rate.

"I thank you very much," said Mr. Tolles, "for the honor conferred upon me. I consider it a great honor to be chosen president of this Council, and I hope we will work togther in peace and harmony and unity to promote the city's interests this year, as well as we ever have; better if possible.

"I would like to impress upon every member of the Council the importance of being here every meeting night, with the work of the various committees done when you come here, and be here promptly so that we can call the Council together to do business at eight o'clock; and in everything we do this year I would like to have each member be as economical as possible for the best interests of the city. Think twice before we vote away the city's money. Let us make the tax rate lower if it is a possible thing, and, at the same time, accomplish all that we possibly can to make the city prosperous and the people happy. I thank you."

Jacob C. Dunham was re-appointed janitor for the coming year and on motion of Mr. Buxton the rules of the Council for 1907 were adopted as the rules for the coming year. He also gave the customary notice that at the next meeting he would move that the rules for 1908 be adopted as the bylaws. At this time President Tolles announced the standing committees for the year as follows:

Finance—Herbert Buxton, chairman; Henry D. Hibbard, Frank De Witt Randolph, Frederick E. Mygatt, Robert E. Hall.

Streets and Sewers—William L. Gloak, chairman; Charles C. Randolph, William S. Tyler, Herbert Buxton, Francis L. Montgomery.

Fire and Buildings—Henry D. Hibbard, chairman; Herbert Buxton, Charles C. Randolph, Robert E. Hall, H. B. Suydam.

Public Affairs—William S. Tyler, chairman; Frank DeWitt Randolph, H. B. Suydam, Frederick E. Mygatt, Francis L. Montgomery.

Police—Frank DeWitt Randolph, chairman; William L. Gloak, Robert E. Hall.

Light and Trees—Francis L. Montgomery, chairman; Henry D. Hibbard, William S. Tyler.

Alms—Charles C. Randolph, chairman; Frederick E. Mygatt, H. B. Suydam.

License—H. B. Suydam, chairman; W. L. Gloak, Frank DeWitt Randolph.

Auditing—Frederick E. Mygatt, chairman; H. B. Suydam, Robert E. Hall.

After the announcement of the committees Mr. Tolles said that he hoped the members would be pleased with the arrangement, as he tried to follow the selection of his predecessor and not make any changes. The most important changes are that of making Mr. Buxton chairman of the finance committee in place of Mr. Tolles. W. L. Gloak is returned to the chairmanship of the street committee, which work he is familiar with. Mr. Hibbard is retained as chairman of the fire and building committee, and Frank Randolph is also retained as the head of the police committee, as is also Mr. Montgomery as chairman of the light committee and Mr. Tyler as chairman of the public affairs committee. Mr. Suydam is given the chairmanship of the license committee and Mr. Mygatt

KEPT WEDDING A SECRET

Thomas E. Clarkson Tells of His Marriage to Miss Estelle Eick on May 12.

GROOM SINCE BADLY HURT.

Suffered Amputation of a Leg Following Accident in New York and Barely Escaped Death.

Returning home from Bellevue Hospital, New York, where he had lingered for many months between life and death, Thomas Edgar Clarkson, of Elm place, today forwarded a statement to The Daily Press that he has been a benedict since last May. On the twelfth of that month he and Miss Estelle Eick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Eick, of Dunellen, were married in Newark by Rev. Dr. William H. Morgan at his home on Park street. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Ford, Mrs. Ford being Miss Nellie Clarkson at the time.

The young people kept the wedding a secret and about a month afterward Clarkson met with a serious accident in New York city while driving a vacuum cleaning auto through Lexington avenue, the machine was struck by a surface car and he was thrown from his seat, falling to the tracks. He became caught in the wreckage and was dragged almost 100 feet. When extricated it was found that he was badly hurt and his removal to Bellevue was ordered.

He had been at the hospital a few weeks when blood poisoning developed in his wounds and one of his legs was amputated. The trouble continued, however, and for a long time it was thought that there was no possible chance of his living. He underwent all manner of excruciating pain and difficult operations and on several occasions his family was summoned in the belief that death was inevitable. Despite the ordeal a strong constitution stood by him and he finally recovered sufficiently to be brought to Plainfield a few days ago and he is now at the home of his parents.

Mrs. Clarkson, the former Miss Eick, is bookkeeper for a local grocery firm and has a host of Plainfield friends. Her home has always been at Dunellen.

LAUGHS WERE PLENTIFUL.

"Mrs. Temple's Telegram" Made Lots of Fun for New Plainfield Theatre Audiences.

In "Mrs. Temple's Telegram," presented at the New Plainfield theatre yesterday as the New Year's afternoon and night attraction, local playgoers had the opportunity of witnessing one of the cleverest and most laughable comedies ever seen in the city. In expressive but inelegant language, it was "simply a scream" from start to finish and both audiences laughed uproariously through the greater part of the three acts. The entire plot hinges on a telegram sent by Mrs. Temple after her husband has been out all night and she refused to believe the excuse he gave for it, the complications following making the fun.

The cast was headed by William Morris, who has played the part of Frank Fuller since the comedy was originally produced at the Madison Square Theatre, and his acting was faultless. Ivan Simpson, as a "hairdresser," and Miss Caroline Greenfield as "Mrs. Brown," were capital in their respective parts.

P. S. C. MAN'S GIFT.

Conductors and Motormen Remember Mr. Luhr.

George Luhr, supervisor of trolley lines for the P. S. C. in the central division, was given a happy New Year's Day surprise yesterday morning, when the motormen and conductors running on his division presented him with a handsome open-faced gold watch as an evidence of esteem. The presentation was made at the West Dunellen barns yesterday morning by David Carroll, chairman of the committee, and Mr. Luhr was completely surprised. He thanked one and all for the gift and expressed the hope that during the coming year there would be harmony among the employes and officials of the company and that success would come to every man. The other members of the committee who arranged the gift were W. D. Davenport and A. E. Smith.

Garrison—Lawson.

Herbert R. Garrison and Miss Harriet A. Lawson, both of New Brunswick, were married at the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church parsonage, on West Front street, last night, by the pastor, Rev. J. T. Diggs. The couple will reside in New Brunswick.

vided for by a further issue of bonds.

Permanent Pave Cost.

"The cost of the permanent brick pavement will amount, when completed, to about $40,000, over $12,000 of which will be paid by the Public Service Railway Company, and the balance, about $28,000, provided for by assessment on property directly benefited and an issue of street bonds.

"From the above it will be seen that the finances of the city are in very good condition. For further details in regard to this matter I would refer you to the report of the city treasurer.

As to Taxes.

"The taxes for the years 1905 and 1906 on real estate have practically all ben collected and with the help of a contingent fund every department of the city has received the full amount due from the levy of these years.

"While not at this time recommending a general increase in salaries, I would suggest that the Council, and I think it will meet with the approval of the taxpayers of the city, that they increase the treasurer's salary to $1,500. The city is fortunate in being able to secure the services of a man in this department like the present treasurer, Mr. William F. Arnold. The work of this office is increasing continually and the amount of money handled is very large, the treasurer asks for no assistance in the detailed bookkeeping necessary and in my opinion the present salary of $75 per month, or $900 a year, is totally inadequate.

Taxes and Assessments.

"This is a matter that interests every property owner and every citizen in the city of Plainfield. I recommended and requested your Honorable Body in my message of January 1, 1907, to appoint a committee from your members to assist me in making a full investigation into this important matter and determining and seeing for ourselves that the interests of the citizens were fully protected. I again make this same recommendation and request, while I have today nominated and recommended, with your approval and consent, the appointment of four assessors, whom I think will fully, faithfully and justly perform their duty in regard to making assessments, while these assessors are paid and are officially responsible for their own acts, they are appointees of the Mayor and Common Council and I feel that we should not shirk our duty and responsibility. We are elected by the voters as trustees to see that every interest is protected and we should either do our duty in this respect or resign our office and let some one else take our place.

Publish Delinquents.

"While all the taxes on real estate have practically been collected, there is a large amount of personal taxes outstanding, I would suggest that the Council pass a resolution directing the tax collector to prepare a list of all unpaid taxes, personal, prior to 1907, that are unpaid January 21, and to publish the said list in the official papers and within two weeks after the publication of this list, if the taxes still remain unpaid, to proceed to collect same by levy or otherwise as the laws of the case may provide.

"I would also recommend that after the assessors have completed their work, the city publish in pamphlet form for distribution a complete list of all assessments. In this way one taxpayer would be able to compare his assessment with the assessment of his neighbor or others holding similar property, and in my opinion will do more to bring about an equal taxation of real estate than any other method might adopt.

Police.

"The Police Department of the city now consists of 26 uniformed men, chief, captain, sergeant, detective-sergeant, roundsman, twenty patrolmen and a doorman. These men have all been selected with a great deal of care and the discipline of the force is now excellent.

"During the year they have made some very important arrests, maintained good order in the city and every man, with few exceptions, has tried to perform his full duty and obeyed orders promptly and cheerfully.

"The salaries in the police department, particularly of the superior officers, should be revised and I would suggest that the men be divided into grades, one, two, three, four and five years and the rules amended so that for especially good service an officer could be advanced one or two grades without waiting for a full year's service, giving the younger men in the department an incentive to do their very best work. In this way, instead of taking five years to advance to a full paid officer, a very energetic and efficient officer would have a chance to advance to a full paid officer in a much shorter period.

"The present building occupied now as police headquarters and station house has been sold and it will be necessary for the city to find a new location.

"The present owner of the building has agreed to buy the stable, which the city erected in the rear of their present location, for $600, and to pay for moving expenses to the extent of $200 or $300, provided the city will give possession by March first. This is therefore a matter that will have to be taken up very early in the year.

Fire Department.

Since my last message, certain improvements have been made in the various houses, No. 1 on West Second street and No. 3 on West Fourth street. The chief of the fire department in his report recommends a still further improvement to the West Second street house, by removing the partition and the old brick tower, also new walk in front of the house. I fully concur with him in his recommendations in this respect and also in the recommendation to place a water heater in the No. 2 engine house to keep the water at all times warm in the steamer.

"The other recommendations made by the chief of the fire department in reference to the equipment and some arrangements for more water pressure, should receive your most careful attention.

"In regard to the salaries paid to the permanent employes, while not advocating any great raise, I think that this schedule should be gone over carefully and an adjustment made, in order that the men should receive their fair and equitable compensation for the work required of them."

"An examination of the report shows very plainly that the men have all done good, prompt and efficient work and it is due to a very large extent to their strict attention to duty, the good discipline of the department, to the prompt and quick response to the alarms of fire that the city has been so well protected and there has been so little loss from fire during the past year.

"At any time in a city of this size we may have large fires and the fire department must prepare for what might happen rather than for what really does happen. The committee on fires and buildings should not only see that every piece of apparatus is in the very best order but that the department is fully equipped with the very best apparatus and everything that is necessary, as far as possible, to handle large fires and to protect life and property.

"While the expenses of the fire department, about $30,000 may seem large, it is small when compared with the amount of property there is to be protected and a good, prompt, well equipped and efficient fire department is one of the best assets and cheapest insurance for our citizens.

"I would particularly call attention to the report of the building inspector and suggest that some prompt action be taken in regard to his recommendation for a revision of the building ordinance. The present building ordinance was most excellent at the time it was adopted and up to the present time has been a great benefit to the city but what was all right twelve or fourteen years ago today needs revision to bring it up to date and keep pace with the improvements and new conditions in the building line.

"One matter that should be provided for is to prevent the erection on the roofs of buildings of large display signs that are not only very unsightly but dangerous in case of fire or high winds.

Streets.

"The departments of streets and sewers, in charge of Andrew J. Gavett, street commissioner and engineer, has had a very active busy year. The report is very complete and a careful examination of this report will well repay the members of the Council or any of the citizens that may be interested.

"While all streets generally are in a very good condition, there are a number of places that will need attention as soon as the season and weather will permit. The brick pavement was unfortunately started too late in the year and for this reason has been left in an unfinished condition, this, however, will be remedied as soon as the weather opens in the spring and when completed will be one of the best improvements ever made in the city in this line.

"The committee calls attention to the sidewalks in certain parts of the city on some of our principal streets. These sidewalks, as stated in the report, are a disgrace to any city and if the owners of property have not pride enough to put them into proper condition, the city should take some steps immediately to having this work done. In justice to adjoining property owners, in all cases where property owners have failed to comply with the notice to flag and curb in front of their property, the city should take the necessary action under the ordinance to compel them to do so.

"In general I concur in all of the recommendations of the street committee, but in order that the same mistakes may not be made another year and the bad weather late in the season find a number of our streets in an unfinished condition, repeat my recommendation made in the message of 1907 that no new work should be begun after the month of June and that no ordinance should be introduced later than the March meeting.

Shade Tree Commission.

"The shade tree commission, consisting of Elliot T. Barrows, Andrew J. Gavett and Miles Roberts, was appointed in accordance with a resolution of the Council, provided for by the statutes of the State of New Jersey. This commission under the law has full charge of all the trees in the streets and also of all public parks.

"The commission although appointed very late in the season, has done excellent work and I fully concur to the recommendations made in their report and recommend that the Council give them prompt and favorable consideration.

Lighting.

"A committee, consisting of the Mayor, President of the Common Council and Counsel to the corporation, was appointed at the November meeting of the Common Council to procure from the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey the best offer to contract obtainable for street lighting.

"This committee reported to the Common Council at the meeting held Monday, December 30. In that report it stated that it had had numerous sessions bith in Plainfield and Newark and conferred with the president, vice-president, counsel and experts of the Public Service Corporation and had the assistance of F. A. C. Perrine, and filed with this report a draft of the proposed contract, and a report of the condition of the wires and other matters in regard to the lights, prepared by F. A. C. Perrine.

"The main points in this contract provide first that the Public Service Corporation is to remove all overhead high tension, that is wires carrying a current of over 5,000 volts now in the streets and place same in underground conduits; that all of the wiring now in the streets and all new wires to be put up hereafter are to be constructed in accordance with the rules of the National Board of Fire Underwriters and that all new regulations are to be conferred to.

"Also the contract provides for certain tests in regard to the lamps and that should lamps fall more than 20 per cent below the candle power agreed upon, that certain reductions shall be made in the price per annum.

"Also gives the city the option to install an arc light system under certain conditions, the price for incandescents of 25 candle power are to be $15 per annum and arc lights, if installed, to be $85 per annum for less than 50 and $80 per annum for 50 or more, or as commercially known as a 2,000 candle power light.

"Also that city may install and operate in the Public Service Corporation lighting station such self recording instruments as may be required to record the electrical energy on the various lighting circuits.

"The committee tried to secure a contract for one year, this the Public Service Corporation absolutely refused and after a great deal of negotiating finally agreed on a three year term for the incandescent lights and on a five year term for arc lights, in case the city exercised their option in this respect.

"In my opinion, taking into consideration the concession, which the committee was able to secure, from a business point of view, I think all terms as to length of contract are fair and I have no hesitancy in recommending the Council to adopt it.

"This matter of contract with the Public Service Corporation has been now pending for over a year and should be taken up carefully, considered and acted upon promptly.

Poor.

The report of the Overseer of the Poor shown at the present time that the Industrial Home has twenty inmates, fifteen males and five females. These inmates are not only absolutely destitute but in many cases very old and helpless.

The Industrial Home is in charge of Mr. and Mrs. I. D. TenEyck. Mr. TenEyck himself is not physically able to do very much work and Mrs. TenEyck, a most excellent woman, has had more than she could attend to. In order to relieve the matron and give to the old, decrepit and helpless persons in the Home the necessary attention, the alms committee has secured Mrs. Seabner as an assistant to the matron.

The overseer of the poor, A. D. Ayres I have recommended and nominated for reappointment for three years. Mr. Ayres is a most painstaking official and I think it would be very difficult to find a more honest, conscientious and efficient man for this position.

His report will give you all the statistics and show the amount of work that has been performed and money expended during the past year.

City Physician.

The report of the City Physician should be taken as a part of the poor department and an examination of this report will show that Dr. Lufburrow has fully earned his salary of $400 a year.

There are certain people on the poor list that are receiving regular services and the summary shows that the city physician has made during the year 414 visits to the poor people alone and supplied necessary medicine and attendance.

As surgeon of the police department, for which he receives $200 a year, he has made 23 examinations of applicants for appointment, made 64 visits to the police station for emergency calls and inspected and examined three circus companies to see that there were no contagious diseases brought into the city.

Licenses.

In regard to the liquor licenses, I would make the same recommendation that I did a year ago, that the Council make public at once that it is not the policy of this administration to increase the number of saloons or amend in any way the present districting ordinance.

We have had less trouble in regard to liquor licenses in Plainfield than in any other city probably in the State. The regulations are not only very fair but satisfactory and the officers in charge see that they are strictly enforced.

We have all the saloons that are needed, the present owners are fair, law abiding citizens and I sincerely hope that the Council will see this matter in the same light that I do and take a positive stand that the number will not be increased.

Auditing.

The auditing committee of the Common Council can be made one of the most important commitees of your honorable body. This committee in addition to checking up the regular monthly bills, should take charge of the auding of the books in the various departments making a written report at each monthly meeting. For this purpose they should be authorized to secure a clerk, the ordinance now provides that the city clerk cannot perform this duty. But his duties as auditor should be more definitely defined, instead of simply examining the extensions and footings on the bills, trusting to the approval of the head of the department for the prices, quantities, etc., the system should be adopted whereby he could prove for himself that everything in the account was as it should be.

In addition the footings of the collector's cash books and reports, posting of entries of the treasurer's books, in fact of all the various departments, should be examined and certified to by the auditor and the auditing committee should be held responsible to see that the work is properly done. This matter is very important in order to protect the interests of the city and the taxpayers.

Board of Health.

The board of health is one of the most important departments of our city government. This department is in charge of Health Officer Leon R. Thurlow, who is recognized by the authorities to be one of the best health officers in the State.

A very full report has ben submitted by the Board of Health and should be carefully examined, in order tht you may become familiar with the large amount and very important work that has been done.

The health officer in his report makes the following statement:

There has been very few cases of communicable disease during the year, and the majority of these were contracted, probably, from mild, unrecognized cases.

Tuberculosis has been one of the chief causes of death, and arrangements are being made to obtain the services of a nurse who will visit all cases of tuberculosis for the purpose of instructing the patient or family in regard to the precautions which should be taken in order to prevent the spread of the disease.

The routine work of the board has greatly increased within the past year. More complaints of nuisances were received, more specific attention given to the milk supply and milk analysis, than ever before.

We have had a great deal of trouble with the garbage collectors who do their work very irregularly, expensively, and in an unsanitary and unsatisfactory manner. Complaint after complaint has been received of the failure of garbage men to collect from their regular customers. I would strongly urge that some definite steps be taken to have the garbage collected by the city; either under the direction of some department of the city government, or by contract. The time has come when Plainfield must do this.

I would call particular attention to the work accomplished on the milk supply. A great improvement has been made and we hope for still more improvement.

Some of the work which we expect to take up this coming year, will be the completing of the house-to-house inspection, the revision of our sanitary code, particular attention being paid to the articles relating to milk and garbage, the abolishing of nummerous mosquito-breeding ponds on the outskirts of the city, the establishing of a laboratory for the examination of various cultures, and the expansion and improvement of the department generally.

I again call your attention to the matter of the collection and disposal of garbage and ashes. This being the second time as Mayor, as well as four previous occasions, as President of the Board of Health, asking six times in six years in succession that I have called your attention to this great menace to the public health. The conditions are growing worse every year and still the Council has never taken any definite action. I again urge your honorable body not to put off the matter any longer but to take at once the definite and necessary action, to remedy this disgraceful condition of affairs in our city.

I understand the Board of Health have petitioned your honorable body for an increase in their appropriation by asking to be allowed to retain for their own use the fees now collected, which amount to about $1,000. This is a right raise in the appropriation asked for during the last two years but it is absolutely necessary if we are to keep up the efficiency of this very important branch of the city business.

Schools.

Since my last message in regard to public schools, I am very much pleased to find that the Board of Education have acted in accordance with my recommendation and increased the salaries of the teachers.

As the superintendent states in his report, "This has been one of the most important events in the year," it is particularly gratifying to me and I think no doubt was received with great satisfaction and appreciation by the teachers.

In regard to new school buildings, the conditions have not changed and I am of the opinion still that we should not only have a new school building on the property at Essex street and Darrow avenue, fire proof, modern and up-to-date in every way, even at some slight additional cost.

Also that we should have in mind the erection of a building at no great distant date in the Fourth ward at the West End, somewhere near Clinton avenue.

The superintendent's report shows that there are now enrolled 3,136 and average membership of 2,565 and an average attendance of 2,392, an increase of 127 over last year. The pupils range from four years of age to nineteen years.

The city is constantly growing and, while it is the duty both of the Board of Education and the Common Council to act with the great judgment and not try to progress too rapidly, we must look ahead to the future and provide the necessary accommodations for the care and education of the rising generations.

Consolidation of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

In the early part of the year 1907 a commission was appointed known as "The Bi-Municipal Consolidation Commission, consisting of Alexander Gilbert, Floyd T. Woodhull and Mason W. Tyler, of Plainfield, and Charles F. McCutchen and Elston M. French, of North Plainfield.

On May 6, 1907, this commission submitted a very full report in which they say in conclusion, "There is unquestionably a strong growing movement in both communities in favor of the consolidation, and while the commission has no desire to hinder or discourage this movement it has reached the conclusion that consolidation without annaxation is impracticable. * * * The recommendation of the commission, therefore, is that your honorable body cause to be prepared a bill for submission to the next session of the Legislature which shall provide for both consolidation and annexation, to take effect only after a majority of the legally authorized voters of both municipalities shall have voted in favor of the same at a regular or special election for that purpose."

By courtesy of the commission, I was present at every meeting, heard all evidences and examined all the papers and documents, which were submitted to them and I fully agree and concur with them.

The Common Council of the city of Plainfield and the Mayor and Common Council of the borough of North Plainfield passed similar resolutions referring this matter back to the commission and requesting them to prepare a bill to be submitted to the next session of the Legislature in accordance with the recommendations in this report.

I have no doubt that the members of the commission have given a great deal of thought to this matter and will at proper time have such a bill ready. It might be well, however, for the Common Council to call the atention of the Commission to the fact that the time is growing short and that the next session of the Legislature will convent at Trenton on the 14th day of January.

Water Investigation Committee.

The committee appointed early in the year to investigate the question of municipal water supply has gone into a very exhaustive and thorough examination and hopes to be ready to report early in the year.

Display Signs and Bill Boards.

Some immediate action should be taken to regulate the building of display advertising signs and the erection of bill boards for posting of paper advertisements throughout the city.

This is a matter that has grown to such an extent that it is becoming an almost unbearable nuisance.

The average heighth of these bill boards is ten feet, they are covered with all sorts and kinds of advertising matter. In many instances they are so erected that they are very unsightly and when erected at the corners of the streets, they obscure the view making it very dangerous. They make hiding places for undesirable people and when erected on tops of buildings are not only unsightly in appearance but also very dangerous in case of fire and high winds. While it may be necessary to have such signs in the city for legitimate purposes, they should be erected under proper rules and regulations and a license fee charged large enough to keep out all undesirable parties and there should be a severe penalty for posting or displaying undesirable or objectionable matter.

As the statutes of the State of New Jersey give the Common Council all the power necessary, there is no reason why this matter should not be acted upon promptly.

Recreation Playground.

Another matter that I would call your attention to, would be the improvement and using of any vacant property now owned by the city for the purpose of parks and recreation grounds for the children. This might be done by making an appropriation for that purpose and putting them in charge of the Tree Commission, or where located near the public school buildings, could be turned over to the school bord to be used for these purposes.

Conclusion.

In conclusion I would recommend the Common Council to first take up and complete all the work that they now have under contract and in deciding upon new work on streets or expenditures in other departments, go slow and give every matter requiring the expenditure of, very careful consideration.

Owing to the unsettled condition in the financial world, I do not consider this to be an opportune time for the Common Council to undertake any great expenditures in the line of new improvements.

The city's finances are in excellent condition and by careful attention and economical expenditure of money, we should be able to go ahead and keep every department up in good condition and the streets in good repair and at the same time further the interest of our taxpayers and citizens by keeping the tax rate down to a reasonable figure.

Respectfully submitted.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

William Corry while riding his wheel on Front street, Plainfield, yesterday morning, was thrown from the wheel, cutting a deep gash in his head and bruising himself considerable about the body. The ambulance was called and he was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital for treatment. Several stitches were taken in the wound and he was able to be brought to his home here in the afternoon.

Adam Muff entertained his friends at a rabbit supper at "The Inn" New Year's Eve. Fully 100 friends took advantage of the landlord's hospitality and spent the old year around the festive board enjoying rabbit, stewed and broiled.

The New Year started yesterday with an ideal day. No special events were scheduled, the residents spending the day very quietly. In the morning a number of the trap shooters held a clay bird shoot on the Brookside grounds.

A number of the young people of the borough and Plainfield danced the old year out at the New Year's dance held in the Fanwood fire house. The affair was one of the most enjoyable dances of the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Muir and son, of Newark, were the guests yesterday of Mrs. Muir's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Meyer, of Park avenue.

The New Year here was ushered in Tuesday night very quietly, but little of the noise and racket of former years being heard.

Mr. and Mrs. William Hull, of Westfield avenue, entertained relatives over New Year's.

Fanwood B. & E. Co. held its regular monthly meeting last night, in the company's rooms.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Foremost among the successful musical plays of the season is the big production of "The Boy With the Boodle," which has been put out this season by its author, Howard Hall, and which is one of the brightest and most tunefully delighted productions of its kind extant, is booked for the New Plainfield theatre this evening. The scenic effects are elaborate, among them being a reproduction of a mirage as seen on the western deserts. There is a large and ample chorus, handsomely gowned and well qualified in singing and dancing.

The kings of laugh producers, McIntyre and Heath, who have been stage partners longer and more congenially associated than any two professionals known to the world, will appear at the New Plainfield theatre, Saturday, afternoon and night, in their world-famed musical novelty entitled "The Ham Tree." To the thousands and hundreds of thousands and a few more who have seen these two inimitable negro impersonators no recommendation is required. These two artists have been closely allied on and off the stage for nearly thirty years. They are so familiar with each other's acts, movements and thoughts that their performance which is so perfect might be classed as a perfect machine.

Plainfield, N. J., January 2, 1908.

THE MAYOR'S MESSAGE.

As he says in his prefacing remarks, "The annual message of the Mayor should not be considered only as an address to the Common Council, but as a report to the people of the condition of the city, a review of what has been done, and recommendation of what, in his opinion, should be done during the coming year to best carry out the public policy and secure the best results for all."

View in this light, the message in question reflects great credit upon its author, Charles J. Fisk, for it gives a satisfying account of his stewardship for the first twelve months of his administration as chief executive officer of the city. So far as the detail work of the various departments of government are concerned, the readers will not be burdened, for his honor very rightly refers the taxpayers to the regular yearly reports filed by the heads of these departments, devoting himself purely to what has been accomplished by the administration and what it intends to do during the new year.

General approval should be given the mayor's recommendation that the salary of the city treasurer be increased to $1,500. The present emolument, it is submitted, is most inadequate and no time should be lost in following the recommendation for a recognition of the work performed. His suggestion also regarding the proper means of enforcing the collection of delinquent personal taxes is likewise most timely. Publicity will insure the required result as it invariably has done in such cases.

Revision of the pay roll of the police department, as advocated, is as much desired as is his suggestion that the fire department be equipped with the best sort of apparatus. It is a matter of regret that the mayor has not seen fit to urge the city fathers to have a fire house erected in the East End, where better fire protection is sorely needed. To prevent such botches as is seen in the pavement pave work, the suggestion is made that no street work of the sort be begun until spring. Another matter of this nature is his reference to the deplorable condition of many pavements, a condition that reflects seriously on the city.

Again, the mayor asks that the municipality renew its policy not to grant additional liquor licenses and it is safe to say that the city fathers are just as zealous in this regard as he is. Deserving tribute is paid to the work of the health officer and thanks are extended to the Board of Education for raising the public school teachers' salaries.

Still other valuable suggestions is his recommendation that the Bi-municipal consolidation commission get to work to have a referendum bill passed by the incoming Legislature to attain the objects of its formation and his request that an ordinance be passed for the regulation of bill boards.

COMMITTEE APPOINTMENTS.

No disappointments are to be found in the make-up of the committees announced by President Ralph I. Tolles. As one of its senior members and as a councilman who was returned by the most flattering vote polled, Herbert Buxton had just claims to preference for the chairmanship of the finance committee. The reappointment of William S. Tyley to the chairmanship of the public affairs committee is a happy selection for the vigilant Third warder has shown a marked interest in that feature of the councilmanic work.

the chairmanship of the auditing committee. The new members were pretty well taken care of in the makeup and no complaint was heard of the selections made.

After the various petitions referred from last year's Council were passed over to the new committees, the annual report of the Board of Health was received and filed. The new electric light contract, together with specifications for construction lines, repairs and the report of Dr. F. A. C. Perrine, the electrical expert, w erepresented and referred to the light committee. A motion offered by Mr. Montgomery and adopted, expressed the thanks of the Council to the special committee for work performed in making the new contract.

Three petitions were received from the Board of Health, one asking for the regular appropriation of $5,000 for the year, and in addition an extra $1,000, the amount received from fees, etc., to meet the increased work now being done in this department, a second one asking that $1,000 from the regular appropriation be given to the board to carry the work on until the regular sum is appropriated, and a third communication requesting that all fees passing through the health department and given to the city treasurer hereafter be appropriated for the work of the department. All the communications were referred to the finance committee. Later on motion of Mr. Buxton $1,000 was voted for the use of the board until the regular appropriation is made.

A number of resolutions were offered by Mr. Buxton and adopted as follows: Appointment George B. Wean official stenographer, salary $5; appropriation $3,000 for the street department until regular appropriation is made; authorizing the city treasurer to have published 300 copies in pamphlet form the Mayor's message, reports of city treasurer, chief of police, chief of fire department, streets and sewers' committee, alms' committee, shade tree commission, and Board of Health; authorizing the city clerk to have committee cards and roll call slips printed; appointing The Daily Press and Courier-News as official newspapers for the city.

When adjournment was taken it was to meet on Monday night, January 6, when a number of matters referred to committees will be taken up and other business of the new year considered.

After the announcement of the standing committees for the year by President Tolles, City Clerk J. T. MacMurray stated that Mayor Fisk was in waiting and desired to present his annual message to the Council. He was given the privileges of the floor while he read the document which was listened to with evident interest by every member.

At the conclusion of the reading of the message, Mr. Fisk made a few informal remarks right to the point. He said that there would be a great deal of work to be accomplished this year and he earnestly hoped that the members would keep in close touch with one another. He did not think it sufficient for the members of the committees to depend solely on the chairmen, but that each had an individual responsibility.

"What we need is good clean work," continued Mr. Fisk. "Have a regular time for meeting and be there promptly at the hour set. Your committee meetings should be held after the regular session of the Council. I don't want to plan your work, but merely suggest a few things for consideration. Arrange your work in advance and be prepared to present it at the proper time. The fire committee should meet at least twice a month and not after obligations have been made and paid for. That will hold good in the other departments.

"There is the streets and sewer committee. We have an efficient city engineer, but don't hold Mr. Gavett responsible for everything. The committee should confer with him, help him and all should act together. Don't come to a meeting five minutes before the session is called and then hurriedly say: 'Yes, that street should be macadamized; I think it is a good thing and pass upon it without full knowledge of the matter.

"Many things have been referred to you from the Councils of 1905, 1906 and 1907. I would suggest that you disuose of them at the earliest possible date. Don't keep petitioners in suspense. If the petition is a worthy one, grant it, but if not say so and give the petitioners your reasons for not granting their request. Try to have a clean slate at the end of the year. Now in conclusion I would invite you to call on me at any time. I am at your service. The only committee of which I am a member, ex-officio, is the police board, and I would suggest that the board meet with me tomorrow night as there is much business of importance to be considered at once."

WANTS HIS FRIEND MARTINE MADE DELEGATE TO DENVER.

In a letter to the Newark Evening News, William W. St. John, formerly of this city, suggests that James E. Martine be made a delegates to the Democratic Presidential convention at Denver. Mr. St. John writes from Bath, N. Y.:

"Would it not be a graceful act for the Democrats of New Jersey, when their convention assembles for the election of delegates to the national convention to be held in Denver, to names James E. Martine as one of the delegates-at-large to represent their State? The fact cannot be gainsaid that Mr. Martine is the only New Jersey Democrat of considerable prominence and influence who has been consistently and enthusiastically an admirer and supporter of Mr. Bryan and his policies since the Nebraskan came to the front as a national figure in 1896.

"Other New Jersey Democrats of prominence and influence have either been for or against Bryan as the exigencies of practical politics seemed to require. Contrawise, Mr. Martine has been ardent and energetic in behalf of Bryan and the latter's policies before election, after election and between times, since 1896.

"No less an authority on the political drift of the nation than the News' Washington correspondent (and I rate him as among the best) has said without qualification of any sort that Bryan will be the next Presidential nominee of the Democrats. This being so, why wouldn't it be the part of wisdom for the New Jersey Democrats to get in line without a lot of geeing and hawing? And how can this be done to any better advantage or with greater honor to the party than by selecting Mr. Martine to be one of the delegates-at-large?

"In 1904 Mr. Martine was elected one of the delegates-at-large to the Kansas City convention, but he, or rather his friends, had to fight to get that honor. Let it come without opposition in 1908."

MORE TYPHOID IN TRENTON.

Health Officers Making House-to-house Canvass.

Two additional cases of typhoid fever were reported to the health authorities at Trenton yesterday, making the total number ninety-seven since December 1.

Under the direction of United States Judge William M. Lanning, chairman of the new typhoid fever committee, a house-to-house canvass is being made, in an effort to ascertain the local causes for the epidemic. Many doctors contend that the polluted Delaware river supply is not entirely to blame for the disease, and on this account efforts are being made to locate other sources of infection.

Health inspectors are touring the city, asking questions as to milk supplies, raw oysters consumed, and the general sanitary surroundings of houses in which typhoid fever exists. The information thus secured will be turned over to the committee, and in turn will be submitted to the Common Council, when the committee will request an appropriation for a further scientific investigation of the typhoid epidemic.

This request for funds will be made at an early date.

HIGH WALL RESPONSIBLE FOR ANOTHER ACCIDENT.

Mr. and Mrs. N. D. Lancaster, of New York, accompanied by their niece, Miss Helen Cruikshank, of Belvidere avenue, were riding along West Seventh street, yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, in a Packhard touring car, when a horse and buggy coming through Central avenue, toward town, suddenly loomed in sight from behind the high brick wall surrounding A. H. Atterbury's residence.

Mr. Lancaster was driving his car and through quick presence of mind he escaped hitting the other rig by sending his car into the curb on the right side of the road, wrecking one wheel. The occupants of the car were not injured. A telephone message brought assistance from a local garage and the machine was taken there for repuairs.

This, it is said, is not the first narrow escape from collision at Seventh street and Central avenue. Many autos are constantly passing through Seventh street, and the occupants are not able to see other vehicles on Central avenue until the corner is reached because of the wall on Mr. Atterbury's property, which extends on Seventh street as well as Central avenue.

PUBLIC SERVICE FINED.

Convicted in One Case Under No-seat-no-fare Law.

Police Judge Frank J. Higgins, of the First Criminal Court, at Jersey City, yesterday, acquitted the Public Service Corporation on one charge of violating the no-seat-no-fare ordinance in overcrowding a Greenville trolley car on November 23 and adjoudged it guilty on another charge of carrying so many passengers on another car between the hours of 5:30 and 7 p. m., on November 25, from the Pennsylvania Railroad terminal, that a detective from whom a fare was demanded was unable to get a seat.

The company was fined $50, the penalty provided for in the ordinance, William D. Edwards, counsel for the company, announced that the case will be taken to the Supreme Court.

The condition of Dennis F. Kilbride, Sr., of West Fourth street, who has been ill for several weeks, has become very grave and his chances for recovery are slight.

CITY'S HEALTH REVIEW

President Hedges and Health Officer Thurlow Make Annual Report.

ASK SANITARY IMPROVEMENT.

Board of Health in Its Yearly Report Again Urges Municipal Collection of Garbage.

The Board of Health has filed with the Common Council an exhaustive report of the sanitary conditions in Plainfield during the past year and coupled with its plans for the new year.

In part it follows:

The report of President B. vanD. Hedges follows:

"During the past year, the health in the city has been remarkably good, and in this connection we would call your attention to the very small number of communicable diseases; the number of cases of typhoid fever being especially low, only thirteen having been reported throughout the entire year, and the majority of these being traceable to outside sources. We believe that this is due, in a large measure, to the fact that our water supply comes from deep, diven wells, and is absolutely free from all danger of pollution or contamination.

"The supervision of the milk supply has become one of the most important branches of the work of this department, and during the past year it has been so systematized that the dairy inspections and milk analyses are more thorough than ever before, and this has resulted in a marked improvement in the quality of milk sold in Plainfield. Although much progress has been made, we hope to obtain still better conditions during the coming year.

"We would again call your attention to the unsightly, unsanitary and unsatisfactory methods employed in the collection of garbage. Other cities have grappled successfully with this problem during the past few years, and there is no reason why Plainfield should delay any longer in taking action on this most important matter.

"The detailed workings of this department are fully set forth in the report of the Health Office which is attached and herewith respectfully submitted as the report of the Board of Health for the year 1907."

Following is a report of the treasurer, F. W. Dunn: Receipts—Balance December 31, 1906, $133.60; appropriation from Common Council, $5,000; fees collected, $971.67; total, $6,105.27; disbursements—General expenses, $5,131.06; fees paid to city treasurer, $971.67; balance December 31, 1907, $2.54; total, $6,105.27.

"I would particularly call attention to the work accomplished on the milk supply. Much effort has been made toward systematizing the work along this line, and today better results are being obtained, and the work is being done more thoroughly and efficiently than ever before. During this coming year, we are in hopes of making a still greater improvement.

"The most serious question with which we have to deal, has been and still is, that of garbage collection. Plainfield has now reached the size when the only satisfactory solution of this problem is a collection of the city's refuse under municipal control. More nuisances arise from accumulations of garbage, than from any other cause. Complaint after complaint has been received of the failure of garbage men to collect from their regular customers. Besides the irregularity in the collections, the work is done in an expensive, unsanitary and unsatisfactory manner.

Work to Be Done.

"Some of the work we expect to take up this coming year will be: The completing of the house-to-house inspection; the revision of our sanitary code, particular attention being paid to the article relating to milk and garbage; the abolishing of numerous mosquito-breeding ponds on the outskirts of the city; the establishing of a laboratory for the examination of cultures from contagious disease patients; and the improvement of the department generally.

Vital Statistics.

"We have estimated the population of Plainfield for the year 1907, as 19,722, basing such estimate on the figures obtained by the census of 1900 and 1905.

Deaths.

"Three hundred and forty-four deaths occurred during the year, which gives a rate of 17.44 per thousand population. Fifty per cent. of these deaths were of persons over forty years of age. The following table gives the comparison of the death rate for the past eleven years:

Year.	Pop.	Deaths.	Rate.
1899	15,020	229	15.25
1900	15,369	284	18.48
1901	15,990	255	15.94
1903	17,230	261	15.15
1906	19,100	298	15.60

Births.

"The number of births recorded in 1907 was 415, representing a birth rate of 21.04 per thousand population. Births by sexes—Female, 219; male, 196; total, 415.

Marriages.

"One hundred and eighty-three marriages occurred during the year, representing a rate of 9.28 per thousand population. Of this number, 156 of the contracting parties were white and 27 colored.

Scarlet Fever.

"Fifty-one cases of scarlet fever occurred during the year, with no deaths. These cases were scattered all over the city and in but very few instances, could the source be traced. The majority of the cases were undoubtedly contracted from mild, unrecognized cases. At all times, cases of scarlet fever, diphtheria and other communicable diseases, probably exist in the city, which a physician never sees, the disease being of such mild form that the patient is not even confined to the house.

Diphtheria.

"There were a few more cases of diphtheria this year than last; 36 were reported, with one death. What was said of the source of contagion in cases of scarlet fever, may also be said of diphtheria.

Typhoid Fever.

"There were but 13 cases of typhoid fever in Plainfield during 1907, none of which resulted in death. This number was decidedly below the normal for a city of the size of Plainfield. Two of these were brought from out of town to Muhlenberg Hospital, for which Plainfield was in no way responsible. In four cases, the source was definitely traced to cities where there was considerable typhoid fever. In the remaining seven cases, it was impossible to determine the source of infection. Two cases were infants, one, twenty-two months and the other, two and a half years of age, who has never been out of the city.

Communicable Disease.

"The number of cases of communicable disease occuring during the year, while a slight increase over that of 1906, is very low. There were 187 cases with 32 deaths. The different diseases and the resulting deaths are shown by the following table:

Disease.	Cases.	Deaths.
Scarlet Fever	51	0
Diphtheria	36	1
Typhoid Fever	13	0
Tuberculosis	41	30
Measles	10	0
Chicken Pox	34	0

Tuberculosis.

"Tuberculosis is, as it always has been, one of the chief causes of death in Plainfield. Forty-one cases were reported and thirty deaths. This number probably does not represent all the cases which developed in Plainfield during the year, as all the physicians are not as careful as they should be, to report cases coming under their care, and it is probable that there are many cases existing where no physician is in attendance. Disinfection after death, or removal of patients suffering from tuberculosis, was continued through the year.

"During 1907, the Plainfield Society for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis was formed. The purpose of this society was to spread information in regard to tuberculosis and to take such steps as was possible to check the disease. Under the direction of this society, the State Tuberculosis Exhibit was shown in Plainfield for one week. The exhibit demonstrated, by means of charts, photographs, models of tenemtn house rooms, tents, shacks, etc., the manner in which tuberculosis may be prevented and cured. The result of the exhibit was very gratifying, 3,500 people in all, attending. This method of presenting the subject appealed to the people, and for the first time, a large number seemed to realize what tuberculosis was, that it was preventable and often curable. By co-operation with this society this coming year, we hope to obtain the services of a competent nurse to visit all cases of tuberculosis and instruct the family how the patient should be cared for to cure the disease, if possible, and to prevent its spread. By this means, we can do a great deal toward lowering the mortality from tuberculosis.

Plumbing.

"This branch of the work of the department has become a very important one. A total of 934 tests and inspections were made and 231 plumbing permits issued during the year 1907.

Ice Supply.

"The ice supply for Plainfield for the year 1907 came from two different sources: Watchung Lake and Seeley's Pond. Hygeia, or artificial ice was not manufactured in the city this past year.

Milk Supply.

"Much progress has been made this year in the improvement of our milk supply. At the present time, 111 dairies supply the milk sold in Plainfield. These are situated within the limits of the city itself to a distance of thirty miles. About 1,300 cows supply the 10,850 quarts of milk sold daily. This milk is sold or distributed by 88 dealers who hold permits; of this number 37 retail by means of a wagon, 18 sell only a few quarts, and 33 sell milk from stores.

"Four hundred and thirty-one samples of milk were analyzed during the year, 31 of which were brought to the office.

"We have had little trouble with the adulteration of milk for during the year but seven samples were found to be watered, and none to contain a preservative. Our principal work has been to reduce the bacterial count. The average for the year of all the samples collected—90,911 per cubic centimeter—is very good for a market milk, but we are in hopes that this coming year will show even greater improvement.

Water Analysis.

"The following analysis of a sample of city water, taken from the tap in the laboratory, shows the public supply to be of excellent quality. The sample was analyzed on December 11, 1907:

Analysis—Parts per 1,000,000.

"Color	0.
Odor, cold	0.
Odor, hot	0.
Turbidity	0.
Total Solids	164.
Loss on ignition	59.
Mineral residue	105.
Nitrogen as ammonia	.000
Nitrogen by permanganate in solution	.028
Nitrogen as nitrites	.002
Nitrogen as nitrates	.88
Chlorine	4.00
Alkalinity	101.00

"Appearance on ignition, no darkening; B. coli communis, absent.

"A number of samples of water from wells in various parts of the city, were taken and analyzed during the year. In cases where the water was found to be polluted, the wells were ordered closed."

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Mary Burns.

Mrs. Mary Burns, widow of John Burns, died yesterday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Arthur Mathews, of Pearl street, following an illness brought by a fall four weeks ago. While at the home of another daughter, Mrs. Sylvanus Hoffman, of West Front street, she experienced a serious shock and a broken arm by falling. Complications followed and her death was the result. Mrs. Burns was sixty-seven years old and had been a resident of Plainfield since 1870. Besides Mrs. Mathews and Mrs. Hoffman she is survived by one other daughter, Mrs. Nellie Murray, of West Fifth street. The funeral will be held at St. Joseph's church Saturday morning at 9 o'clock and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Patrick Wallace Spillane.

Patrick Wallace Spillane, aged forty-five years, died this morning at the home of his sister, Mrs. Thomas Clacey, of Orchard place. He had been ill with pneumonia. Besides Mrs. Clasey he is survived by one other sister, Miss Margaret Spillane. The funeral will be held at St. Mary's church Saturday morning at 9 o'clock.

David Doyle, Sr.

David Doyle, Sr., of East Fifth street, died at his home last night following a long illness. He was fifty-seven years old and came to Plainfield from Hampton Junction, Hunterdon county. He leaves a wife, one daughter, Miss Anna Doyle, and three sons, John, David and Thomas Doyle. The funeral will be held in St. Mary's church Saturday morning and burial will be at Hampton Junction.

HATE WASTES MAN'S LIFE.

In Chain Gang 21 Years for His Enemy's Crime.

Charles Franklin, once a well-to-do resident of Macon, Ga., is dying at Cincinnati, Ohio, as the result of twenty-one years' drudgery in Georgia chain-gangs.

Franklin tells a tale as strange as any ever penned by a Dumas or a Verne, involving an almost superhuman hate. Through the testimony of a former employe, Fred McKnight, Franklin was convicted of the murder of Mitt Bryan, a well-known character of Macon, and sentenced to death.

He sent his entire fortune in securing a commutation to life imprisonment, and only a short time ago secured his liberty, when McKnight confessed on his death bed that he was guilty of the murder he had laid at Franklin's door.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Jan. 5: "Secret prayer and the informing power of the word."—Matt. vi, 5-15; Ps. cxix, 105-112. (For the morning watch covenant.)

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

The general subject for the present year in the league prayer meetings will be "The Christian Life." For the first quarter the special topic under this will be "The Prayer Life," for the second quarter, "The Protected Life," for the third quarter "The Surrendered Life" and for the fourth quarter "The Directed Life." This plan gives a connection and a unity to the study of the Bible which is a decided advantage and an improvement over the method of previous years.

Secret prayer—Jesus emphasizes the thought of the internal and spirit element in prayer. The external form of public devotions had in His times assumed an importance entirely undue and wrong in the esteem given it popularly. Men loved to make ostentatious display of their praying and charitable gifts. It came from no particular regard for God or sympathy for the suffering, but almost wholly from the desire for popular praise. Men loved prominence and made their religious exercises an occasion for winning applause and reputation for sanctity.

But this is not the purpose of prayer, and he who indulges it degrades the outward form and destroys his inner power for real prayer. The outward form has its place and is of great value. The prime consideration, however, is the inner spirit of communion with God.

Too often the idea gains possession of the young Christian that prayer is asking for things, and when the things asked for do not come there is questioning why God does not answer prayer. It is to be feared that the larger part of prayer, both private and public, is merely the requesting of things. There is much general and misty petitioning for blessings, the blessings of the Holy Spirit, and a great deal not so specific, asking but simply, "O Lord, bless us, bless us, bless us now," with no clear conception in the mind of the one who prays or in the mind of any one else, for that matter, as to what blessing is desired.

It is just here that the great value of the Lord's Prayer is found. Too often this is repeated as a convenient form in which the public can join, with no higher thought of its meaning and no deep soul desire breathed into its words. Prayer is the deep unutterable desire of the soul as it comes into union with God. It is confidence and trustfulness. It says in the depths of the heart, "Our Father who art in heaven"—not the faroff place nor the faroff time, but the present, near and now, heaven. Our holy Father, loving and true, I adore thee! "Hallowed be thy name." It is the interchanging of loving confidences in highest reverence. It is frequently prayer without words, but never words without prayer as that which Jesus rebuked often becomes.

This kind of prayer is fed by the Word of God, and the spirit life grows strong by means of it. It feeds on Him who is the Bread of Life in the inner depths of the soul, where no other than God and self can enter. It is not desirous that other eyes shall see. Rather it seeks the secret trysting place and meets Him who loves and is beloved.

Freedom From Guilt.

Nothing can produce so great a serenity of life as a mind free from guilt and kept untainted not only from actions but purposes that are wicked. By this means the soul will be not only unpolluted, but not disturbed; the fountain will run clear and unsullied, and the streams that flow from it will be just and honest deeds, ecstasies of satisfaction, a brisk energy of spirit which makes a man an enthusiast in his joy and a tenacious memory sweeter than hope, for as shrubs which are cut down with the morning dew upon them do for a long time after retain their fragrancy so the good actions of a wise man perfume his mind and leave a rich scent behind them. So that joy is, as it were, watered with these essences and owes its flourishing to them.—Plutarch.

Seed Wrapped in Opinion.

Truth is a seed wrapped round in opinion. It grows, it swells, it bursts its successive rinds, yet each one inclosed the last, like the bark of a tree but all the former are rejected because the ever living sap of life has overflowed their bounds. Let us cling to truth, nor pause and falter in the demand for it—it is literally our life; but let us realize that our present opinion is never ultimate. But if we are true and free by and by we shall lay it aside and it will be to us an appearance only from which the reality has gone forth to seek new form. The manna must be gathered every day. Woe to them who think to feed on the morrow with the food of the past. This conviction may serve to banish all bigotry, all conceit.—Eliza T. Clapp.

Accumulated Blessing.

God is good when He gives, but better when He keeps back in order to give an accumulated blessing, heaped, pressed down and running over into the bosom of His child in whom patience had her perfect work.—F. B. Meyer.

My Task.

To love some one more dearly every day,
To help a wandering child to find his way,
To ponder o'er a noble thought and pray
And smile when evening falls.

To follow truth as blind men long for light,
To do my best from dawn of day till night,
To keep my heart fit for His holy sight
And answer when He calls.

—Maud Louise Ray in Harper's Magazine.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 5, 1908.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Songs of the heart: I. What is true blessedness?—Ps. 1; Matt. v, 3-12. (A New Year's consecration meeting.)

The New Year has just passed, and the world has rung with salutations from man to man. The one desire above all others, mutually expressed, has been for happiness. How many times in the past few days men have saluted each other with "A happy New Year!" But the mere wishing of happiness to one another will not accomplish it. It depends upon more than words. And when all is said and done the truly happy man is the one who lives in a right attitude toward God, who has a part in His kingdom, is most deeply interested in his fellow men and enjoys the happiness of heart and soul expressed in portions both of the Old and New Testaments and especially in what are commonly called the beatitudes of Christ, so named from the word beati, the opening word of each verse. Beati means more than happy. It is correctly translated "blessed." Happiness may come from earthly things, but blessedness from God alone. Earthly happiness is temporal and uncertain. Happiness that has attained to blessedness is "a permanent state of spiritual felicity." It begins on earth. It finds its fullest fruition in heaven.

The beatitudes of Christ have never been surpassed as a summary of true blessedness. 1. The poor in spirit win heart; the humble are blessed. Conscious in its wants and needs, the humble heart comes to God and finds in Him what it needs. The proud heart is self satisfied, finds its satisfaction riches, position and fame. But no one is so unhappy as a proud man. He is naturally sensitive, and his pride is continually getting a fall. Pride keeps us from God, and the proud man feeds his heart upon husks. 2. The mourning ones are blessed. They are the spiritual mourning ones. They mourn over their sins, and God, through Christ, comforts them with a comfort of which the world knows nothing. 3. The meek, the gentle, the mild and tranquil, not agitated by passionate ambition of those seeking advancement in a temporal kingdom—they shall inherit the "land," Canaan, the type of all blessings. In many cases the prophecy is literally fulfilled, but it refers, primarily to the inheritance of blessings in the kingdom of God. 4. Then follow those who hunger and thirst after God's righteousness, who have the joy of being filled; the merciful, who shall receive mercy from God and in many cases from men; the pure in heart, those who possess inward purity from God, who are blessed in seeing Him, not only hereafter, but also in this life; the peacemakers, who shall from that disposition be recognized as the sons of God; those who are "persecuted for righteousness' sake," whose reward in heaven will be great.

Truly such blessings as Christ here describes would bring to the most discouraged soul the perfection of blessedness. And they are free—free to all who fulfill the conditions necessary to their position. With such opportunities for true blessedness before us for the new year, shall we turn aside from them and try to feed our souls upon material things and thereby obtain blessedness?

BIBLE READINGS.

Gen. xii, 1-3; Ps. ii, 12; xxxii, 1, 2; lxv, 1-4; lxxxiv, 1-12; cxix, 1-8; Isa. xxx, 18; Matt. xxv, 31-46; Luke vi, 20-23; Jas. i, 23-27.

God's Special Answer.

The Christian Endeavor movement seems to me to be God's special answer to the daring attacks of certain ecclesiastics and others upon the simple but glorious gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. While these misguided leaders are discouraging prayer and tearing the Bible to shreds this Endeavor movement pledges its 4,000,000 members to reverence the Bible, to read it every day and daily to pray to its divine author. And the young Endeavorers of today will be the fathers and mothers of the next generations to witness for God and His truth. So "let us not be weary in well doing." Let us not lose heart amid abounding unbelief. God will take care of His church.—Christian, London, England.

Loyalty to the Church.

The religion taught and practiced by Christian Endeavorers is not a dreamy, introspective, hermit-like religion. The society believes in doing as well as praying, in practicing as well as preaching, but all our efforts will count for naught without loyalty. You would better cut loose from every tie that binds you to Christian Endeavor and remain loyal to your own church than attempt to be loyal to the cause of Christian Endeavor and forget in which church you have a home and to which you owe allegiance. Let us be a noble army of young men and women of whom our church and pastors may have reason to be proud.—C. C. McNeil in Jamaica Christian Endeavor Gem.

Its Supreme Work.

I have just returned from a long and arduous pioneering journey in the "neglected continent"—neglected to the last by Christian Endeavor as well as by other Protestant forces—but I have found that there, among the Andes and on the pampas, in the busy cities of this continent of opportunity, a far better name for South America as well as where Christian Endeavor has been known and prized the longest, there as well as here and everywhere else, I say, the supreme work of the society is training the church of the future.—Dr. Cook.

The Fighting Chance.

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS.

Copyright, 1906, by the Curtis Publishing Company.
Copyright, 1906, by Robert W. Chambers.

What is a woman profited if she shall gain wealth and social leadership, even the ermine that decks the queen of the smartest of "smart sets," and lose the desire of her heart? To the decision of this momentous question came the heroine of our present tale of love and fashion and "high finance." How the young woman, graced beyond the ordinary with health and beauty, permitted her inborn desire for wealth and power to swerve her from the path plainly marked out for her by love and natural fitness, is told vividly, graphically and powerfully. Of minor characters, in whom may be discerned the many types that go to make up brilliant, fashionable, sordid Society, there is no lack. Not minor, however, but drawn in bold, clear lines, is the man who offered to the girl of his choice all he himself had—a "fighting chance" of life and love and happiness.

CHAPTER ONE

THE speed of the train slackened. A broad tidal river flashed into sight below the trestle, spreading away on either hand through yellowing level meadows. And now, above the roaring undertone of the cars, from far ahead floated back the treble bell notes of the locomotive. There came a gritting vibration of brakes. Slowly, more slowly, the cars glided to a creaking standstill beside a sun scorched platform gay with the bright flutter of sunshades and summer gowns.

"Shotover! Shotover!" rang the far cry along the cars, and an absent-minded young man in the Pullman pocketed the uncut magazine he had been dreaming over and, picking up gun case and valise, followed a line of fellow passengers to the open air, where one by one they were engulfed and lost to view amid the gay confusion on the platform.

The absentminded young man, however, did not seem to know exactly where he was bound for. He stood hesitating, leisurely inspecting the flashing ranks of vehicles—depot wagons, omnibuses and motor cars—already eddying around a dusty gravel drive centered by the conventional railroad flower bed and fountain. The long train moved out through the September sunshine amid clouds of snowy steam.

The young man, gun case in one hand, suit case in the other, looked about him in his good humored, leisurely manner for anybody or any vehicle which might be waiting for him. His amiable inspection presently brought a bustling baggagemaster within range of vision, and he spoke to this official, mentioning his host's name.

"Lookin' for Mr. Ferrall?" repeated the baggagemaster, spinning a trunk dexterously into rank with its fellows. "Say, one of Mr. Ferrall's men was here just now. There he is over there uncratin' that there bird dog!"

The young man's eyes followed the direction indicated by the grimy thumb. A red faced groom in familiar livery was kneeling beside a dog's traveling crate attempting to unlock it, while behind the bars an excited white setter whined and thrust forth first one silky paw, then the other.

The young man watched the scene for a moment.

"Are you one of Mr. Ferrall's men?" he then asked in his agreeable voice.

The groom looked up, then stood up.

"Yis, sorr."

"Take these. I'm Mr. Siward—for Shotover House. I dare say you have room for me and the dog too."

The groom opened his mouth to speak, but Siward took the crate key from his fingers, knelt and tried the lock. It resisted. From the depths of the crate a beseeching paw fell upon his cuff.

"Certainly, old fellow," he said soothingly. "I know how you feel about it. I know you're in a hurry, and we'll have you out in a second. Steady, boy! Something's jammed, you see. Only one moment now! There you are!"

The dog attempted to bolt as the crate door opened, but the young man caught him by the leather collar, and the groom snapped on a leash.

"Beg pardon, sorr," began the groom, carried almost off his feet by the frantic circling of the dog—"beg pardon, sorr, but I'll be afther seein' if anny of Mr. Ferrall's men drove over for you."

"Oh! Are you not one of Mr. Ferrall's men?"

"Yis, sorr, but I hadn't anny orders to meet anny wan."

"Haven't you anything here to drive me in?"

"Yis, sorr. I'll look to see"—

The raw groom, much embarrassed and keeping his feet with difficulty against the plunging dog, turned toward the gravel drive, where now only a steam motor and a depot wagon remained. As they looked the motor steamed out, honking hoarsely. The depot wagon followed, leaving the circle at the end of the station empty of vehicles.

"Didn't Mr. Ferrall expect me?" asked Siward.

"Aw, yis, sorr, but the gintlemen for Shotover House does ginerally always coom by Black Fells, sorr."

"O Lord!" said the young man. "I remember now. I should have gone on to Black Fells Crossing. Mr. Ferrall wrote me!" Then, amused, "I suppose you have only a baggage wagon here?"

"No, sorr—a phayton," he hesitated.

"Well, isn't a phaeton all right?"

"Yis, sorr, if the yoong lady says so—beg pardon, sorr—Miss Landis is drivin'."

"Oh-h, I see! Is Miss Landis a guest at Shotover House?"

"Yis, sorr, an' if ye would joost ask her—the phayton do be comin' now, sorr!"

The phaeton was coming. The horse, a showy animal, executed side steps. Blue ribbons fluttered from the glittering headstall. A young girl in white was driving.

Siward advanced to the platform's edge as the phaeton drew up. The young lady looked inquiringly at the groom, at the dog and leisurely at him.

So he took off his hat, naming himself in that well bred and agreeable manner characteristic of men of his sort, and even his smile appeared to be part and parcel of a conventional ensemble so harmonious as to remain inconspicuous.

"You should have gone on to Black Fells Crossing."

"You should have gone on to Black Fells Crossing," observed Miss Landis, coolly controlling the nervous horse. "Didn't you know it?"

He said he remembered now that such were the directions given him.

The girl glanced at him incuriously and with more curiosity at the dog. "Is that the Sagamore pup, Flynn?" she asked.

"It is, miss."

"Can't you take him on the rumble with you?" And to Siward, "There is room for your gun and suit case."

"And for me?" he asked, smiling.

"I think so. Be careful of that Sagamore pup, Flynn. Hold him between your knees. Are you ready, Mr. Siward?"

So he climbed in. The groom hoisted the dog to the rumble and sprang up behind. The horse danced and misbehaved, making a spectacle of himself and an agreeable picture of his driver. Then the pretty little phaeton swung northward out of the gravel drive and went whirling along a road all misty with puffs of yellow dust which the afternoon sun turned to floating golden powder.

"Did you send my telegram, Flynn?" she asked without turning her head.

"I did, miss."

It being the most important telegram she had ever sent in all her life, Miss Landis became preoccupied, quite oblivious to extraneous details, including Siward, until the horse began acting badly again. Her slightly disdainful and perfect control of the reins interested the young man. He might have said something civil and conventional about that, but did not make the effort to invade a reserve which appeared to embarrass nobody.

A staccato note from the dog, prolonged infinitely in hysterical crescendo, demanded comment from somebody.

"What is the matter with him, Flynn?" she asked.

Siward said, "You should let him run, Miss Landis."

She nodded, smiling, inattentive, absorbed in her own affairs, still theorizing concerning her telegram. She drove on for awhile and might have forgotten the dog entirely had he not once more lifted his voice in melancholy.

"You say he ought to run for a mile or two? Do you think he'll bolt, Mr. Siward?"

"Is he a new dog?"

"Yes, fresh from the kennels, supposed to be house and wagon broken, steady to shot and wing." She shrugged her pretty shoulders. "You see how he's acting already."

"Do you mind if I try him?" suggested Siward.

"You mean that you are going to let him run?"

"I think so."

"And if he bolts?"

"I'll take my chances."

"Yes, but please consider my chances, Mr. Siward. The dog doesn't belong to me."

"But he ought to run"—

"But suppose he runs away? He's a horridly expensive creature. If you care to take the risk"—

"I'll take the risk," said Siward, smiling, as she drew rein. "Now, Flynn, give me the leash. Quiet! Quiet, puppy! Everything is coming your way. That's the beauty of patience—great thing, patience." He took the leader. The dog sprang from the rumble. "Now, my friend, look at me. No, don't twist and squirm and scramble. Look me square in the eye—so. Now we know each other, and we respect each other, because you are going to be a good puppy and obey. Down charge!"

The dog, trembling with eager compression, dropped like a shot, muzzle laid flat between his paws. Siward unleashed him, looked down at him for a second, stooped and caressed the silky head, then, with a laugh, swung himself into the phaeton beside the driver, who, pretty head turned, had been looking on intently.

"Your dog is yard broken," he said. "Look at him."

"I see. Do you think he will follow us?"

The horse started. Miss Landis, looking back over her shoulder at the dog, who lay motionless, crouched flat in the road.

Then Siward turned. "Come on, Sagamore!" he said gayly, and the dog sprang forward, circled about the moving phaeton, splitting the air with yelps of ecstasy, then tore ahead, mad with the delight of stretching cramped muscles amid the long rank grass and shrubbery of the roadside.

The girl watched him doubtfully. When he disappeared far away up the road she turned the blue inquiry of her eyes on Siward.

"He'll be back," said the young fellow, laughing, and presently the dog reappeared on a tearing gallop, white flag tossing, glorious in his new liberty, enchanted with the confidence this tall young man had reposed in him—this adorable young man, this wonderful friend who had suddenly appeared to release him from an undignified and abominable situation in a crate.

"A good dog," said Siward, and the girl looked around at him, partly because his voice was pleasant, partly because a vague memory was beginning to stir within her, coupling something unpleasant with the name of Siward.

She had been conscious of it when he first named himself, but, absorbed in the overwhelming importance of her telegram, had left the analysis of the matter for the future.

She thought again of her telegram, theorized a little, came to no conclusion, except to let the matter rest for the present, and mentally turned to the next and far less important problem—the question of this rather attractive young man at her side and why the name of Siward should be linked in her mind with anything disagreeable.

Tentatively following the elusive mental clews that might awaken something definite concerning her hazy impression of the man beside her, she spoke pleasantly, conventionally, touching idly any topic that might have a bearing, and, under a self possession so detached as to give an impression of indifference, eyes, ears and intelligence admitted that he was agreeable to look at, pleasant of voice and difficult to reconcile with anything unpleasant.

They discussed shooting and the opening of the season, dogs and the training of dogs and why some go gun shy and why some are blinkers. From sport and its justification they became inconsequential, and she was beginning to enjoy the freshness of their chance acquaintance, his nice attitude toward things, his irrelevancy, his gayety.

Laughter thawed her, for, notwithstanding the fearless confidence she had been taught for men of her own kind, self possession and reserve, if not inherent, had also been drilled into her, and she required a great deal in a man before she paid him the tribute of one of her pretty laughs.

Apparently they were advancing rather rapidly.

"Don't you think we ought to call the dog in, Mr. Siward?"

"Yes; he's had enough!"

She drew rein. He sprang out and whistled, and the Sagamore pup, dusty and happy, came romping back. Siward motioned him to the rumble, but the dog leaped to the front.

"I don't mind," said the girl. "Let him sit here between us. And you might occupy yourself by pulling some of those burs from his ears if you will."

"Of course I will. Look up here, puppy! No! Don't try to lick my face, for that is bad manners. Demonstrations are odious, as the poet says."

"It's always bad manners, isn't it?" asked Miss Landis.

"What—being affectionate?"

"Yes, and admitting it."

"I believe it is. Do you hear that, Sagamore? But, never mind; I'll break the rules some day when we're alone."

The dog laid one paw on Siward's knee, looking him wistfully in the eyes.

"More demonstrations," observed the girl. "Mr. Siward, you are hugging him! This amounts to a dual conspiracy in bad manners."

"Awfully glad to admit you to the conspiracy," he said. "There's one vacancy—if you are eligible."

"I am. I was discovered recently kissing my saddle mare."

"That settles it! Sagamore, give the young lady the grip."

Sylvia Landis glanced at the dog, then, impulsively shifting the whip to her left hand, held out the right, and very gravely the Sagamore pup laid one paw in her dainty white gloved palm.

"You darling!" murmured the girl, resuming her whip.

"I noticed," observed Siward, "that you are perfectly qualified for membership in our association for the promotion of bad manners—in fact, I should suggest you for the presidency"—

"I suppose you think all sorts of things because I gushed over that dog."

"Of course I do."

"Well, you need not," she rejoined, delicate nose up tilted. "I never kissed a baby in all my life and never mean to, which is probably more than you can say."

"Yes; it is more than I can say."

"That admission elects you president," she concluded. But after a moment's silent driving she turned partly toward him with mock seriousness: "Is it not horribly unnatural in me to feel that way about babies—and about people too? I simply cannot endure demonstrations. As for dogs and horses—well, I've admitted how I behave, and, being so shamelessly affectionate by disposition, why can't I be nice to babies? I've a hazy but dreadful notion that there's something wrong about me, Mr. Siward."

He scrutinized the pretty features anxiously. "I can't see it," he said.

"But I mean it—almost seriously. I don't want to be so aloof, but I don't like to touch other people. It is rather horrid of me, I suppose, to be like those silky, plumy, luxurious Angora cats, who never are civil to you and who always jump out of your arms at the first opportunity."

He laughed, and there was malice in his eyes, but he did not know her well enough to pursue the subject through so easy an opening.

It had occurred to her, too, that her simile might invite elaboration, and she sensed the laugh in his silence and liked him for remaining silent where he might easily have been wittily otherwise.

This set her so much at ease, left her so confident, that they were on terms of gayest understanding presently, she gossiping about the guests at Shotover House, outlining the diversions planned for the two weeks before them.

"But we shall see little of one another. You will be shooting most of the time," she said, with the very faintest hint of challenge—too delicate, too impersonal, to savor of coquetry. But the germ of it was there.

"Do you shoot?"

"Yes. Why?"

"I am reconciled to the shooting, then."

She laughed and started to flick her whip, but at her first motion the horse gave trouble.

"The bit doesn't fit," observed Siward.

"You are perfectly right," she returned, surprised. "I ought to have remembered. It is shameful to drive a horse improperly bitted." And after a moment: "You are considerate toward animals. It is good in a man."

"Oh, it's no merit. When animals are uncomfortable it worries me. It's one sort of selfishness, you see."

"What nonsense!" she said, and her smile was very friendly. "Why doesn't a nice man ever admit he's nice when told so?"

Y. M. C. A. FIVE LOST

Local Association Team Opens Year by First Defeat on Home Floor.

NARROW VICTORY FOR SECONDS

P. H. S. Five Loses Game By One Point—Boys' Team Wins from Hope Chapel Boys' Club.

The local Y. M. C. A. basketball five lost the first game of the season on the local floor last night when the Williamsbridge Y. M. C. A. five won a closely contested game by a score of 36-31. The play was fast throughout and the visitors showed good inclination to "rough it up" and kept the local five hustling. At the end of the first half the score stood 21-19 in favor of the visitors, and they increased this lead to five points before time was called. The summaries:

Williamsbridge—White and Hallett, forwards; Jenson, centre; Dobbs and Hughes, guards. Plainfield—Gilmore and Miner, forwards; Collier, centre; Loizeaux and Gavett, guards.

Baskets from the floor: Hallett, 8; White, 5; Gilmore, 4; Miner, 4; Collier, 3; Jenson, 2; Loizeaux, Gavett. Goals from fouls: White, 6; Collier, 4. Refree, Charles B. Morse. Twenty minute halves.

P. H. S. Close Game.

Though the schoolboys of the city high school basketball team had a lead of six points on their opponents at the end of the first half, the Y. M. C. A. second five rallied in the last period of the game played at the local association gymnasium last night and won out by a score of 43-42. When the whistle blew for time in the second half of the game, the scoreboard showed the contest a tie, 42-42, and Referee Morse started an extra period of play. On the toss-up at centre, Captain Caldwell, of the high school team, gained the ball and shot a pretty basket. But just as the teams were leaving the floor, Physical Director Listman, who had been acting as official score keeper, discovered that the score at the end of the game was incorrectly posted and that a point awarded the Y. M. C. A. five for being interfered with while shooting a basket in the second half had not been tallied. His official figures gave the game to the association five. The summaries:

Y. M. C. A. Seconds—Bentley and Templin, forwards; Martin, centre; Hoagland and Jacot, guards. P. H. S.—Doane and Mortimer, forwards; Caldwell, centre; Parsons and Snyder, guards.

Baskets from the floor: Jacot, 7; Caldwell, 7; Bentley, 6; Doane, 6; Mortimer, 5; Templin, 3; Hoagland, 3; Snyder, 2. Goals from fouls: Jacot, 3; Doane, 2; Hoagland. Referee, Charles B. Morse. Twenty minutee halves.

Y. M. C. A. Boys Won.

In a game between the boys' department five of the Y. M. C. A. and the Boys' Club team of Hope chauel, played at the association at the conclusion of the class work exhibition yesterday morning, the Y. M. C. A. five were victorious, winning the game 41-29. Russell Conroy, for the association five, did the best work, shooting twelve baskets and making a point from the four line. The summaries:

Y. M. C. A. Boys—Hochberger and F. Line, forwards; Conroy, centre; C. Vail and J. Manning, guards. Hope Chapel Boys' Club—Firstbrook and Kenney, forwards; Joe Muir, centre; A. and C. Hoffman, guards.

Baskets from the floor: Conroy, 12; Hochberger, 6; Firstbrook, 6; Kenney; 3; A. Hoffman, 3; C. Hoffman, 2. Goals from fouls, Conroy and Kenney.

Hope Y. M. C. Won.

The basketball five of the Young Men's Club of Hope chapel won from the Boys' Club team by a score of 59-11 at the Hope gymnasium Tuesday night. The game was one-sided throughout, and the junior team could not overcome the lead taken by their opponents early in the game. The summaries:

Goals from the floor: Mortimer, 11; Hunter, 9; Snyder, 7; Rimmer, 2; Harry Kenney, 2; C. Hoffman, G. Hoffman, Firstbrook, Muir. Goals from fouls: Hunter, Muir. Referee, J. Kenney; umpire, Chamberlain; timer, Currin; twenty minute halves.

Independent Gunners Out.

In the New Year's Day shooting at the rifle ranges of the Independent Gun Club, yesterday, some good scores were made in the yearly contest. At the 200-yard rifle range Dr. B. F. Leonard scored 26, 26 and 25 out of a possible 30 in ten shots. George A. Strong's score was 25, 26, 24, 24; W. E. Stewart made 12, 16 and 16; C. W. Krausse, 13 and 17; and Milton Diltz, 12, 12 and 17. At the traps there were but few gunners, and the best work was done by Dr. C. M. Luckey and C. W. Krausse. There were no special events. Fewer members turned out to shoot in either of the events than was expected.

FITZ WANTS A FIGHT WITH TOMMY BURNS

That Bob Fitzsimmons is still a popular idol among the local sporting element was evidenced by the flattering reception accorded to the old ring warrior Monday afternoon and last night at Waldmann's theatre, Newark, where he is appearing with Mrs. Fitzsimmons in a sketch entitled "A Man's a Man That for a' That."

Although it has been the prevailing opinion among fight fans that Fitz has fought his last ring battle and that he is a retired pugilist, a little talk with the veteran on the fighting situation will quickly dispel this common belief. When a reporter asked the hero of many battle if he really had any serious intentions of quitting the ring he doubled up his mighty left fist and after slamming a sledgehammer blow at his punching bag, declared with emphasis:

"Well, I guess not; I'm still in the game and ready to fight any of these fellows who are running around calling themselves champions. I am still the middleweight champion and stand ready to defend that title. I see that Tommy Ryan has come out of his hole again and is crying for a fight. If he is in earnest I am ready to put up $2,500 to bind a fight between us. Ryan has been ducking me for years, but if he means business now I am not indulging in fool talk when I say I will take him on for a limited round or finish contest before any reputable club."

In Fitz's mind, Tommy Burns, who whipped Gunner Moir, the reputed English champion, is not a top-notcher. In expressing his opinion on Burns, Fitz summed up the matter in a very few words. He said:

"Well, that fellow Burns may be a clever fighter, but I do not believe him to be a world beater. I think him far from it, but I do not want it understood that I am knocking him. To show you just how I feel in the matter," continued Fitz, "I would like nothing better than to take Burns on, and if I can't put him out in ten rounds I would not want to take one penny."

Fitz declared that Burns would not stand the ghost of a show in a fight with Jack Johnson, the negro heavyweight. "This fellow Johnson is a good man and should be able to take care of himself with any of the heavyweights. When I met him last spring I was handicapped with a bad arm, but that trouble has now disappeared and my hands also are in good shape."

Y. W. C. A. Mystified.

The curiosity of many members of the Young Women's Christian Association was satisfied last evening when they thronged the assembly room of the association house for a "surprise party." "Prof." Ranson, of New York, amused the audience for over an hour with slight-of-hand performances and tricks of mystification. The "professor" tried to make his beholders believe that they, too, could make silk grow from a magic wand and paper cut into many pieces become whole again. Amid a shower of tiny flags which seemed to come from an empty newspaper all twisted up, "Prof." Ramsen departed, bringing his interested spectators back from a land of mystery and leaving them a very tangable evidence of his presence among them.

December Weather Statistics.

Weather Prophet John Neagle has prepared the statistics concerning the weather for December as follows: Maxium temperature, 58, on the 10th; minimum temperature, 15, on the 5th; mean temperature, 35.0; normal temperature, 32.4; mean maximum, 43.1; mean minimum, 26.8. Greatest daily range, 28.0; total precipitation, 4.45 inches; total snowfall, 5.8 inches; normal precipitation, 3.83 inches; greatest precipitation in twenty-four hours, 1.61 inches, on the 23d; number of rainy days, 11; number of clear days, 10; partly cloudy, 11; cloudy, 10. The mean temperature was 2.6 degrees above the normal and the precipitation was 0.62 inches above the normal.

Hurt By Fall From Wheel.

PARK CLUB FESTIVITIES

Society Folks' New Year's Reception Followed by a Dance.

GRAND MARCH AT MIDNIGHT.

Several Hundred Join in the Jollification—Patronesses for the Event.

Elaborate preparations were made this year for the New eYar festivities at the Park Club by the entertainment committee of which Harry L. McGee is the chairman, and a large number of members and friends attended the several functions which began Tuesday night with the children's dance from 7:30 to 9 o'clock. The clubhouse was attractively decorated with Christmas garlands, an electric star, bells, holly and ribbon. Muller's orchestra, of Brooklyn, furnished the music.

Beginning at 9 o'clock the junior members of the club were given the privilege of the floor and they danced the old year out. At midnight all joined in a grand march as a large bell tolled twelve, announcing the arrival of 1908, everyone singing "Auld Lang Syne." The patronesses for the New Year's Eve celebration were Mrs. Robert H. McCutcheon, Mrs. Charles H. Lyman, Mrs. Otis Hovey and Mrs. Emil Larsson.

The customary New Year's Day reception was held at the club between the hours of 3 and 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and this affair was also largely attended. In connection with this a short play entitled "My Uncle's Will," was given. This was preceded by an exceptionally clever sketch, "The Fallen Star," by Harry P. Qualle, of New York. He was accompanied on the piano by Miss Marion McCutcheon. The play, "My Uncle's Will," given here for the first time, was especially good. Miss Kathryn McCutcheon was clever as "Florence Marigold," sharing the honors with H. Raymond Loder as "Mr. Cashmore," and Harry P. Qualle as "Mr. Barker." The production aroused the greatest enthusiasm and applause. The play was given under the direction of Victor McCutcheon and Charles H. Lyman.

Those who served as a receiving committee during the afternoon were Mrs. B. VanD. Hedges, Mrs. Edward T. Wilson, Mrs. George D. Hallock and Mrs. Henry A. McGee. Tea was served from four tables, the arrangement being under the direction of Mrs. J. H. Howell, as chairman of the refreshment committee. Those who presided at the tea tables were Mrs. Charles W. McCuetcheon, Mrs. Samuel Townsend, Mrs. J. C. Peck, Mrs. George T. Rogers, Mrs. Robert H. McCptcheon, Mrs. H. D. Folinsbee, the last named of Brookline, Mass.; Mrs. Townsend Rushmore and Mrs. James R. Joy. The young women assisting were the Misses Verna McCutcheon, Rae Hooley, Mabel Hooley, Margaret Townsend, Elizabeth McGee, Helen Joy, Madeline Reed, Ethel Most, Bessie Flanders and Miss Dorothy Welch, of Delaware, Ohio, and Miss Margaret Ashbrook, of Philadelphia.

Strange Cop Starts Excitement.

Attired in full uniform and wearing a helmet bearing the word "Chief" in gold letters, J. F. Colon, head of the Clayton, N. Y., police department, started everybody rubbering by dropping into the New Plainfield theatre last night. A rumor was in progress that he was after an escaped criminal and hadn't had time to change his clothes in the chase down this way and it spread until a local cop made inquiries. The chief blankly remarked that he had been to New York city for a prisoner and having to wait for papers took occasion to come on to Plainfield to visit a relative and incidentally dropped in to see the show.

Watch Night at Faith Chapel.

Watch night services were held at Faith chapel New Year's Eve commencing at 10 o'clock. There was a large gathering of members and friends of the chapel. Frank Stewart was in charge of the service during the first hour, and from 11 to 12 o'clock Rev. J. W. Musson, the pastor, and U. B. Crane spoke. A large number of testimonies and prayers were offered and the service was a helpful one. Upon the arrival of the New Year everyone extended congratulations and wished one another success and happiness during the year.

Vacuum Cleaner Company.

The New Jersey Vacuum Cleaner Company has been organized to manufacture and do a general business in the Kenney patents. The capitalization is $150,000 and the principal offices are in Plainfield. The organizers are David T. Kenney, the inventor, William G. Bessler, Thomas Ewing and H. J. Moynihan.

Light Rate Lowered.

A two cent reduction in the kilewatt hour rate for electric lighting has been announced by the Electric Department of the Public Service Corporation. The new rate is to be ten cents per kile-watt hour, instead of twelve cents as heretofore, and will go into effect beginning with this month.

THE ELECTRIC EFFECTS HELP.

Decorations and Novel Features at the Casino Ball—The List of Patronesses.

The birth of 1908 was received in Plainfield with noisy acclaim Tuesday night but nowhere was the lusty-lunged infant given a more cordial greeting than at the Casino. The passing of the old year and the coming of the new transpired while 200 local society folk were enjoying the annual holiday dance and elaborate arrangements had been made to observe the event, most of them coming as a surprise to the attendants.

The Casino has been handsomely decorated on many occasions but it never looked prettier than it did on the last night of 1907. Huge wreaths hung with immense bows were everywhere, Christmas trees made a miniature Maine forest of the stage and colored electric globes shed their lustre on the crowd. Just previous to 12 o'clock, the dancers began a Virginia reel and the merriment was at its height when word came that Old Father Time was about to gather another twelve months to himself.

The dancing was suspended and as a bell in the front of the room began tooling twelve, pandemonium was rampant. The noise committee had previous distributed horns, whistles and rattles and every individual sought to outdo his neighbor in using them. At the same time the figures 1907 in electric lights suspended above the stage changed to 1908 while all else was dark and showers of confetti descended from above. A clever arrangement worked by electricity emptied boxes of it with an evenness that produced a snow-storm eect and it continued for several minutes. Vari-colored lights were played upon the crowd to keep the eye busy as well as the ear and when at last silence came to heal the blows of sound the unanimous verdict was "grand."

Music for the dancing was furnished by Austin's orchestra and supper was served in the front rooms of the building by Demolli from 12 o'clock until 2. For those who did not care to participate in thedelights of terpischore tables had been reserved for bridge whist playing and the places were kept filled all evening.

The patronesses of the affair were the following: Mrs. Charles J. Fisk, Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, Mrs. W. P. Smith, Mrs. Chapman Fisk, Mrs. E. H. Ladd, Mrs. George P. Mellick, and Mrs. Frederick G. Mead. The committee of arrangements comprised Mrs. Charles A. Reed, H. L. Hall; Lewis G. Timpson and Frederick H. Butler, executive; Lewis E. Waring and Hartely Mellick, floor; E. E. Iremonger, Joseph M. Shellabarger and Charles J. Fisk, jollification.

MAYOR HALL REFUSES TO RECOGNIZE NEIDER

When the Fanwood Council met for reorganization yesterday noon, George Neider, appointed councilman by retiring Mayor Babcock to succeed Mayor-elect Hall, as told in The Daily Press last Saturday, appeared to take his seat. Mayor Hall instructed the clerk not to call his name or recognize him as a member and his instructions were followed out. When the Council held its first meeting last night, Neider was absent and Mayor Hall appointed F. J. Palmer to take his place. Accordingly, the controversy is ended for the time being at least.

The following appointments were made for the year: Clerk, S. W. McInerney; recorder, Charles Sheelen, with increase in salary; marshal, William Logan; borough counsel, W. R. Codington in place of George W. V. Moy.

Belated Christmas Entertainment.

The Christmas entertainment was held at the West End Tabernacle Tuesday night, under the auspices of the Sunday-school, of which Fred Lounsbury, Jr., is the superintendent. The program consisted of recitations, the singing of carols by the school and special selections by the tabernacle choir. Robert Love was Santa Claus and he distributed over 100 gifts to the children. Later he received the gift of a handsome cane, presented to him by the Ladies' Aid Society and members of the Baraca Class, of which he is the teacher.

Gave a New Year's Party.

Mr. and Mrs. John Howell, of Terrill rod, gave a New Year's party at their home Tuesday night. Dancing was the feature and supper was served at midnight. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. John Howell, Mr. and Mrs. Israel Howell, Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Perrine, Mr. and Mrs. William Carmichael, Mr. and Mrs. John Flosbackt, Mr. and Mrs. George Simons, Mrs. James McCann, Miss A. Flosbackt, Miss Elsie Howell, George Howell, Robert Perrine, Jr., James Scott, David Scott, Miss Rose Stierer and Miss Yetta Stierer.

Not in a dozen years has United States Senator Kean had so many visitors at his home in Ursino at a New Year's reception, which is an annual event with the Senator, as he had yesterday. Political leaders from every section of the State were present. Governor-elect J. Franklin Fort, with his son, Recorder John F. Fort, of East Orange, went over in the afternoon in an automobile and stayed for about two hours. Others from Essex county present were Benjamin Dalrymple, chairman of the Essex County Republican Committee; Dr. C. H. H. Herold, of the Newark Board of Health; John R. Flavell, secretary of the Essex Republican County Committee, and Newton H. Porter.

Governor-elect Fort, Speaker-elect Frank B. Jess, David Baird, J. Willard Morgan and Senator Kean had a private conference. What was discussed was not made known. The organization of the Legislature having been settled, the only thing in sight was the possible makeup of committees of the House, which will be made up by Jess.

Samuel D. Dickinson and some of his followers from Hudson county were on hand; so were Theodore Strong, of Middlesex; State Treasurer Daniel Voorhees, Vivian M. Lewis, of Passaic; Congressman Loudenslager, State Senator Ackerman, of Union; Assemblymen Moxon and Kirstein, of Union; W. E. Drake, of Middlesex; Buxton, of Morris; Gibbs, of Camden; Postmasters Alexander Yard, of Trenton; George L. Clark, of Morristown, and C. W. Russell, of New Brunswick; Collector of the Port Robert Carsen, of Perth Amboy; County Collector H. R. Groves, of Middlesex; State Senator Hand, Cape May; State Senator Samuel K. Robbins, Burlington; Prosecutor Harry Scovel, Camden; Prosecutor Berdine, Middlesex; Senator Bradley, Camden, and practically every member of the Union County Republican Committee, and all the political leaders of consequence in Elizabeth, Plainfield and other Union towns.

A large number of Democrats also called on the Senator. The gathering, as far as numbers was concerned, was far from a partisan one.

Among the Plainfielders who attended both receptions were Councilmen R. I. Tolles, Herbert Buxton, Francis L. Montgomery and William L. Gloak; County Chairman F. H. Smith, City Clerk J. T. MacMurray, City Stenographer George B. Wean, Andrew McCardell, James F. Buckle, James Stewart and Charles H. Dunham.

PERSONAL.

Miss Ernstine C. Smith, of Madison avenue, has recovered from a severe attack of the grip.

Dr. and Mrs. A. K. Brennan, of Grant avenue, are the parents of a young son who came to their home on New Year's Eve.

Miss Anna Van Zandt, a resident of Nebraska, has been visiting at the home of her uncle, T. R. Van Zandt, of Madison avenue. Miss Van Zandt is at present preparing herself for Y. W. C. A. work at one of the New York institutions, and will take up that work in the near future.

Santa Claus There.

The Sunday-school Xmas entertainment of the West End Tabernacle was held New Year's eve, when a large number of pupils and their friends came to meet "Santa" for the first time in the Tabernacle. Recitations and carols formed the principal part of the program. A tenor solo was sung by J. W. Gibson, very well rendered. Joseph Taylor was kept busy answering the telephone to the amusement of all present. The usual gifts were presented Mr. Taylor and members of the Ladies' Aid Society. Gifts were presented to the superintendent of the Sunday-school, Fred Lounsbury, Jr., a writing set; Robert Love, general superintendent, a sterling silver cane; M. A. Korff, a gold pen. Mr. Lounsbury presided. Mr. Love represented Santa Claus. A watch meeting was held after the entertainment.

Lime to Protect Oysters.

One of the greatest foes to the oyster industry is the starfish, which frequently covers large areas of the sea bottom to a depth of eighteen to twenty inches, sometimes blanketing entire beds of oysters. The stars are very hard to destroy, says Popular Mechanics, but it has been discovered that their steady advance can be checked with lime. The lime is placed in paper bags and dropped along the boundary of the oyster bed. As paper bag causes it to descend through the water, and beyond the lime barrier thus formed not a starfish will pass. A better means for getting the lime to the bottom is being devised.

Hope Boys Victorious.

The Hope Boys' Club basketball five won from the Stillman school team yesterday afternoon at the Hope chapel gymnasium, 59-11. The schoolboys were clearly outclassed, though Boehm and Bingamin did good work. For the Hope five, Firstbrook and Kenney excelled.

WHO'S BOROUGH CLERK?

Mayor Townsend Will Make Another Appointment Tonight 'Tis Reported.

MR. ROWLEY STILL FAVORITE.

"Dark Horse" Said to Be in Prospect, but Arnold's Friends Are Still Sanguine.

Because the North Plainfield Common Council refused to confirm the appointment of former Councilman James K. Arnold as borough clerk in place of the present incumbent, Frank Rowley, who has filled the office satisfactorily for the past ten years, Mayor Samuel Townsend will announce an appointment for the borough fathers' ratification at the first regular Council meeting of the year to be held tonight. No other names have been mentioned in connection with the office, and though there is a strong delegation of voters from both parties supporting the reappointment of Mr. Rowley, there is a rumor abroad today that the Mayor will bring up the name of a "dark horse."

Prominent boroughites of both parties are making the appointment the principal topic of conversation today. It is claimed that as Mr. Rowley's business keeps him "this side of the brook" much of the time, that his office should be filled by one in business in the borough. The inconvenience of going into another county, though in this case the distance is but a block, to see the borough clerk on borough business is a reason assigned for the belief that the Mayor will suggest the name of some one in business in North Plainfield. The excuse is considered a "lame" one.

Then, too, there is feeling regarding the distribution of political plums to residents of one district of the borough only. Second district voters claim that there are enough First district men in office in the borough, and that just as good men can be found in the Second.

At the meeting tonight, Mayor Townsend will make public his message to the Council and taxpayers of North Plainfield. He has been a close observer of matters in general in the borough since his election and will announce some rules for the conducting of the various public departments. It is planned to have a special new set of rules for the police department, under which the chief of police is to have regular hours at headquarters and a policeman is to be on duty at headquarters nights.

DELIGHTFUL RECEPTION AT TRUELL HALL.

Miss Eva Kelly and Louis de Brigard, who conduct a successful dancing class in the Babcock building, gave a reception for the members of the class and their friends at Truell Hall, last night. About 150 guests were present and an attractive program of dances was enjoyed until the early hours of the morning. Music for dancing was furnished by an orchestra and the numbers were among the latest.

About midnight a pleasing supper was served under the direction of Mrs. J. R. Truell in the Japanese room, after which dancing was continued. The affair was concluded about 2 o'clock.

TRIBUTE TO FIREMEN.

North Plainfield Organizations Take Appropriate Action.

The members of the North Plainfield fire department have drafted resolutions on the death of Lieutenant Elden G. Smalley through a committee appointed by Chief Howard Woolston. A copy of these resolutions was presented to Mrs. Smalley today, while another copy is posted in the borough firehouse. The committee appointed to draft the resolutions was composed of Edmund Terry, Walter Chandler and William McCullough.

At the meeting of the North Plainfield Firemen's Relief Association to be held Monday night, a similar set of resolutions will be drafted by that organization.

German Society Names Officers.

John Katzer was elected president of the Gesang and Turn Verein to succeed John Wirth at the meeting of the organization held at Saengerbund Hall, last night. George Zipp was elected vice president, Adolph Wolff, financial secretary; Walter Van Kerner, secretary; and Tony Parbeck, treasurer. All these officers are new except Adolph Wolff, who served as financial secretary for the organization during the past year. At the business meeting of the organization, it was decided to hold the annual masquerade ball at Saengerbund Hall on Washington's Birthday eve.

WEEK'S VAUDEVILLE AT PLAINFIELD THEATRE

As a post-holiday novelty for local theatregoers, Manager Counihan arranged for a short season of high class vaudeville and moving pictures at his playhouse next week. The performances will commence next Monday night and continue until Friday inclusive with matinee on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

The programs are to be presented by The New York All Star Specialty Company and will include eight big acts, known in theatrical parlance as "headliners." The majority of the artists have appeared regularly on the metropolitan vaudeville circuits and come to Plainfield with the stamp of approval from critical audiences. The motion pictures will embrace a large variety of subjects and a complete change of films will be made every night.

The short change from the customary legitimate attractions has been made by Manager Counihan in the belief that it will afford a timely and pleasing diversion for his patrons.

SEEK THE "BLACK HAND" TO SOLVE A SHOOTING

Recent developments in the fatal shooting on New Year's Eve of Antonio Allesandre at Kenilworth, to solve a shooting, by Gieuseppe Campong lead the police to believe that they will be able to round up a gang of Black Hand men who were confederates of the victim and directed him to solicit funds for the benefit of Michael Venzio, a convicted member of the Black Hand society, whose case is up for appeal. It was while in the act of raising money to defray expenses of apepaling Venzio's case that Allessandre became involved in an argument with Campone, which resulted in the former's death and the probable fatal wounding of the latter.

Marshal John Jackson, of Kenilworth, and detectives from Prosecutor English's office and County Detective Gallatain are working on the case and have discovered the motive which they believe led the man who is now in the hospital here to shoot Allessandre.

The case of the State against Michael Venzio for writing a threatening letter signed with the Black Hand and demanding a sum of money was recently tried in the county court in this city and resulted in Venzio's conviction. He was subsequently sentenced to three years in State prison. He is now out on a writ of error, while his friends, believed by the police to be the members of a confederacy of Black Handers, are endeavoring to obtain funds for a new trial.

DEAN RODMAN'S BROTHER A VICTIM OF PARALYSIS.

The Rev. Washington Rodman, brother of Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, of Grace church, and the founder of the Home for Incurables at Fordham and a graduate of Columbia College in the class of 1842, died at his home, 846 Boulevard, Astoria, L. I., from paralysis, following an attack of grip. He was born in Jamaica, L. I., eighty-four years ago. After graduating from Columbia he entered the general Theological Seminary and became rector of Grace church, West Farms, in 1847. There he remained for nearly a quarter of a century. At the outbreak of the Civil War he organized a society for the relief of wounded soldiers at Fort Schuyler and David's Island. In the last year of the war he served on the Christian Commission in North Carolina, which was engaged in the distribution of medical and relief supplies to wounded soldiers. His work in the army made clear to him the need of a home for incurables and this he established in West Farms in 1866, probably the first of its kind in America. At the start he had no regular building but devoted a part of his house to the work. The institution grew and was finally moved to Fordham. Since 1874 Mr. Rodman lived at Astoria, where, because of his age, he had no charge. He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Henrietta Blackwell, and four children.

Plainfield Team Won.

In a shooting match at Brantingham's club house yesterday, Samuel Adams and Tom Brantingham defeated Firman Bissett, of South River, and Charles Vliet, of Spotswood, twenty birds in a fifty bird match. In a match between Peter Fellows, of Highland Park; Fred Quad, of South River, and John Eckrose, of New Brunswick, for fifteen birds at $5 a side, the loser to stand for the birds, Eckrose paid and Fellows paid. The match was one of a series, the second of which is to take place at Bissett's place at South River next Thursday.

WOULD BUY A BUSINESS

But When Country Lad Gets in His First Trouble, He Decides to Give Up.

WAS ARRESTED FOR STEALING.

Skillman and His Partner Must Answer Charges By Former Employer, Though Deals Appear Legal.

Youthful desire to start in business for himself the first of the year got Edgar Hunt Skillman, who lives "near Peapack," in the clutches of the law yesterday, when he was arrested by Marshal Lemuel Pope, of the North Plainfield police force, on a warrant sworn out by Charles Gulick, an up-country teamster, before Justice Clark Mundy. The case will come up for a hearing at the borough court tonight, when Gulick will be "in town" to press charges.

Skillman is a bright, 20-year-old lad, who has been for several years working with Gulick as teamster. Last July he got the idea that he wanted to buy the team he was using in the work, and closed a deal with Gulick, giving him a note for $325 for ownership, including the sand wagon, of which he was driver. The note was endorsed by Thomas Moore, a horse dealer at Far Hills, on the First National Bank of Bound Brook, and was for three months. When it expired, Skillman made a payment of $50 and renewed the note for another three months.

The last day of the old year, Skillman, with William Kirk, a "pard" in business, and also a heavy drinker, decided to take the team and rig and go in business for himself. The two hitched up and drove to North Plainfield, where the new business was started with appropriate liquid libations and "healths" by the pair. Gulick, who claims that the team and wagon were to remain his property until full payment was made, was incensed over the disappearance of the rig, and "put the law" on the lad.

Tiring of business, young Skillman decided on New Year's day to sell out. He completed a deal with Stonewall Jackson and sold the team of horses to him for $45. He received $5 in cash and a check for $40. The five-spot went for further celebration, and though Skillman says his long suit is eating, Kirk got in on the roll for sundry drinks and both were contemplating the purchase of North Plainfield when they were arrested yesterday afternoon, much the worse for liquor. The hearing was to have been last night, but the effects of the booze had not worn off sufficiently for the pair to appear in court, so the hearing was postponed until tonight.

In speaking of the business venture today, Skillman showed a good business head and produced papers to show ownership of the team and rig. He seems of a non-combative nature, however, and said that he would probably give "Mr. Stonewall"—as he calls Jackson—back his money, and turn the rig and team over to Gulick, cancelling the deal. When asked about the $50 he had already paid on the note, he said: "Oh, "I'll not bother about that. Gulick can keep it if he wants to."

WHY THE SEWER STOPPED.

Miscellaneous Assortment of Articles Explains Its Inability to Work Properly.

Inspector John Casey, Jr., of City Engineer Gavett's staff, found the sanitary sewer in New street, near Orchard place, to be working improperly recently and New Year's day a gang of men was detailed to open it up. They continued excavating until yesterday and after opening the sewer and drawing the cleaning apparatus through it, the following articles were brought to light:

Two 2-foot rules, 1 tea spoon, 1 shoe horn, 1 pocket knife, 1 bottle, 1 corset steel, 1 putty knife, 1 coat hook, 2 safety pins, 1 neck chain with cross (in good order), several small stones.

The collection was taken to Mr. Gavett's office and displayed as an evidence of the hazy idea some people have as to the purpose of a sanitary sewer. The branch in that particular section of New street seems to be working all right today.

Mr. Peck's Lecture.

Committee on Rahway Drawbridges—Joseph Perry, Bradford Jones and George B. Cladek.

Special Committee on Elizabeth Drawbrodges—Henry Krouse, John N. Cady, John Robison, John J. Donahue and Thomas J. Pierson.

Sinking Fund Committee—Director King, John N. Cady and George B. Cladek.

COMPLETING PLANS FOR THE ENDEAVOR CONGRESS.

The annual congress of the Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union will be held in Trinity Reformed church on Thursday night, January 16, and a committee is now at work completing the plans.

A supper will be served at 6:30 by the young women of the Trinity Young People's Society to all members of the congress and members of the prayer meeting committees of the societies in the union. It will be followed by a discussion of prayer meeting work, led by Frank Stewart, chairman of the prayer meeting committee of the union, after which the regular meeting of the congress will be held. Several important matters are to be taken up for discussion.

At 8:15 an address will be given by Rev. Antonio Arrighni, pastor of the Broome Street Tabernacle, an Italian mission in New York. All young people's societies, as well as the public, are invited to hear him.

Great Interest in Mock Trial.

The greatest interest is being shown in the mock trial to be held at the Y. M. C. A. tonight under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T. At that time Stephen B. Joseph will be the defendant in a breach of promise suit instituted by Mrs. E. A. Lowe. The principals and all the participants in the trial are well-known people and there promises to be an unusual amount of fun for everyone.

Revives from Three Weeks' Trance.

Edward Shea, of Montclair, who had been in a trance for three weeks, has recovered from his queer affliction, and is now able to take physical exercise outdoors. The young man's case has puzzled doctors and psychologists. While he was in the trance his parents say he conversed with relatives who have been dead for some time.

Funeral of Robert Lyngaard.

The funeral of Robert W. Lyngaard was held this afternoon at the home of his mother on Somerset street. It was conducted by Rev. L. R. Howard, pastor of Hope chapel, and was attended by a gathering of relatives and friends.

WAS NOT A HIGHWAYMAN

West Fourth Street Man's Story to Police Exploded by Gum Shoe Work.

ONLY A DEFEATED SUITOR.

Turned Down By His Lady Love He Laid in Wait and Assaulted His Rival.

A young man living on West Fourth street, near Monroe avenue, appeared at Police Headquarters yesterday, and upset Chief Kiely's hopes for peace and quietness during 1908 by declaring that his brother-in-law, who lives with him, had been the victim of a highwayman's assault New Year's night.

The complainant stated that the youth, who is about twenty years old, was in the act of ascending the front porch at his home when he was pounced upon by some one from behind. Before he had a chance to make an outcry or defend himself he was biffed and banged around like a punching bag and then left in a dazen condition on the bottom step. Nothing was taken from him, except some patches of skin rubbed off by knuckles, but the brother-in-law was positive that the assailant intended to commit robbery.

Chief Kiely detailed Detective-Sergeant Flynn to do some soft shoe work in the neighborhood and by this morning the mystery was cleared up. The young man assaulted is one of several who have been paying ardent court to a young woman living on Grant avenue, but he and a braw Scotch lad seemed to have distanced the others. The Fourth street suitor dropped around to her home early New Year's night to pay his respects and when Scotty appeared on the scene fond Mamma advised him to be a nice boy and go away quietly. He turned back with a heavy heart and might have withdrawn gracefully but as he ambled down the path he heard his rival singing Harry Lauder's song: and if ever there was a sore Scot he was the one.

"I love a lassie

He hung around the vicinity until he saw his rival come out and then streaked it for the young man's home. He secured a hiding place alongside the porch and when the successful lover started up the porch the supposed highwayman let drive a fearful solar plexus blow. He followed it up with a couple of "Half-Nelsons" and strangle holds and when he decided he had been paid for staying outside in the cold the Fourth street youth was a wreck. It was no wonder the brother-in-law thought it was a case for the police to look into as he still has the appearance of having been drawn though a threshing machine. The Scotchman has been located but so far no complaint has been made and it is not likely that there will be any. The victim believes he has enough without going to court to talk it over.

WANT LEGISLATIVE AID FOR BLIND OF THE STATE.

The meeting in the interest of the blind people of New Jersey will be held at the Free Public Library, Newark, on Tuesday afternoon, January 7, at 4 o'clock. Among those who are active in the movement is Percy Cannon, of East Second street, and he is striving to enlist the sympathy of influential people.

Already steps have been taken to draft a suitable bill to be presented to the Legislature which will bring to the blind State aid toward improving their condition. It is argued that nearly every other class is provided for, excepting the blind, and in the opinion of those working for them they need help as much if not more than other classes of dependents.

Miss Waring to Be Introduced.

An important social event of the New Year will be the reception and dance to be given at the Casino tonight to introduce Miss Eleanor Waring to society. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Waring, of Park avenue, whose third daughter, Miss Mary Griffith Waring was married on New Year's Day to Theodore F. Reynolds, of Orange. Miss Waring is a favorite in the younger set and she has a host of friends who will attend the function to be held tonight in her honor.

Mrs. L. J. Denton Will Remove.

Mrs. L. J. Denton, who for the past two years has been engaged in the florist business on Park avenue, has leased store No. 216 in the Stirling building, opposite North avenue, and will demove there soon. The property she now occupies is owned by Miss A. E. Lincoln and after a long vacation, which has benefitted her health, she will again conduct the orist business at her old stand.

MISS FLEMING AS BRIDE OF FREDERICK L. CURTIS

Miss Marjorie Fleming, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Fleming, of Park avenue, and Frederick Lindsay Curtis, of New York, will be married in Grace church tomorrow afternoon. It will be one of the brilliant social functions of the New Year and will be attended by a large number of guests from New York, Brooklyn and this city. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of the church will officiate.

The bridal attendants will include Miss Dorothy Fleming, a sister of the bride, as maid of honor, and as bridesmaids the Misses Margaret Goddard, Josephine Lapsley and Virginia Hegeman, of this city, and Lillian Moore, of London, Canada. Martin Hoban, of New York, will be the best man, and the ushers will be Lawrence Tweedy, of this city; Porter Steele, Abbott Brett, William E. McCall, Jr., and George Applegate, of New York.

Following the ceremony a reception will be held at the home of the bride's parents, to which a large number of guests have been invited.

JUST 300 TAXPAYERS IN PLAINFIELD IN 1868

While looking over the books and papers in the safe deposit vault in his office this morning, Tax Collector William R. Townsend found the original field book used by Joseph A. Hubbard, when he was first appointed assessor in 1868; also the tax duplicate used in the office of the collector at that time. Mr. Hubbard on January 1 retired as assessor after a continuous service of forty years and during that time he has seen many changes in the valuation of taxable property.

The original book contains about 300 names and according to the system employed then by the collector, when a taxpayer settled his bill, a mark of red ink was drawn through his name on the book, that being the only indication that the tax had been paid. A glance through the list shows many names that are now famaliar to residents of today, and it is interesting to note the great difference in the various amounts assessed against taxpayers.

At the request of Mr. Hubbard, he was allowed to take the field book and he proposes to compile some interesting facts from it within a short time which will show by comparison how Plainfield has grown during the past forty years from a few hundred taxpayers to many thousand. The duplicate is a small book, and although every page was filled with names there seemed to be plenty of room for the list in those days.

POND OFFICIAL CHARGES BOYS WITH BRASS THEFTS.

William Ryder, of West Third street, and Walter Dixon, better known as "Lew," of South Second street, were locked up at Police Headquarters today, charged by the superintendent of the Pond shop with stealing brass from the factory yard. Dixon was captured last night but it was not until this morning that Ryder was rounded up by Detective-Sergeant Flynn. They will be given a hearing this afternoon.

According to the complaint, the two boys, who are each about sixteen years old, have been in the habit of scaling the yard fence and appropriating pieces of brass from the mettal piles. It is charged that they hid it until an opportunity offered to dispose of it to junkmen and the sale of a large lot is what led to their undoing. The Pond officials were unable to state the value of the stolen brass but they are positive it will reach quite a sum.

Suggest Bryan's Self-Interest.

"Farmer Orator" Martine is reported to be writing a song whose refrain jingles: "When Bryan comes marching Jerseyward," to be sung in Democratic camps before the arrival of the Colonel. Other lines in sarcastic vein are coming from jealous foes of Martine and they are not at all complimentary to Bryan for his attempt to gain Democratic support by eating Martine's dinners.—New York Press.

Dance and Entertainment.

Under the auspices of Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order Foresters, an entertainment and dance will be given in Saengerbund Hall, Friday night, January 17. The committee in charge comprses Chas. J. McCarthy, James M. Smith, Louis Feiring, Charles F. Jaeger, Edward J. McCue, Henry Hansen, Frederick D. Wilbee, James T. McCarthy and Olaf Nielson.

Miss Mary Thompson, of Rye, N. Y., has been spending her holiday vacation at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Thompson, of Rockview terrace.

PROGRAM ANNOUNCED FOR M. E. CONFERENCE

Committees on Arrangements Have Decided Upon Routine Work for Big Convention.

THE PLANS ARE ELABORATE.

Bishop Spellmeyer to Preside—Laymen's Conference Friday Night, April 3—The Schedule As Planned.

Committees have been appointed and arrangements are near completion for the annual sessions of the Newark Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church in this city beginning Wednesday, April 1, and concluding a week later. A general committee of fifteen prominent local Methodists has been subdivided into committees for various purposes. Rev. Abel C. McCrea, pastor of the First M. E. church; Rev. E. E. Roberson, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church; Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, a member of Grace M. E. church, and James R. Joy and Henry McGee having charge of the entertainment of the 500 or more delegates.

James W. Jackson, James C. Peck, Samuel Bingaman, Walter L. McGee and D. W. Winckler are in charge of finances and the committee on publicity consists of Nelson A. Miller, Stephen H. Tugwell, George M. Rittenhouse, E. H. Hughes and Edward Beekman.

In connection with the session, the Laymen's Conference will be held on Friday, April 3, when lay delegates to the General Conference of the church will be chosen. Bishop Henry Spellmeyer, of Cincinnati, Ohio, who has been assigned to preside at the regular conference, will address the laymen, whose sessions will be held in the First Baptist church. At night the laymen will hold a banquet at Truell Hall. Among the speakers will be Rev. Dr. George Edward Reed, president of Dickinson College.

On Tuesday night, March 31, a reception will be held in the Bishop's honor, and prominent city, county and State officials will take part. This is the program for the conference: Wednesday afternoon, anniversary Woman's Foreign Missionary Society; night, anniversary Centenary and Preachers' Aid Society; Thursday afternoon, anniversary Women's Home Missionary Society; night, anniversary, Home Missionary Society; Friday, afternoon, anniversary Foreign Missionary Society; Saturday, afternoon, anniversary Epworth League; Sunday, night, anniversary Educational Society; Monday, night, anniversary of the Conference Temperance Society.

On Tuesday the bishop will announce his appointments. The address of the bishop will be made at the opening business session on Wednesday morning, April 1. There will be business sessions every morning from 9 to 12 following a half hour devotional service.

Engagement Announced.

At a New Year's dinner given by Mrs. Irving Weaner, of Orchard place, the engagement of Thomas J. Stryker, of Wharton, N. J., to Miss Laura M. Drew, of East Orange, was announced. An unique feature of the dinner was a large pie which when cut open was found to contain the favors and quotation cards. Each guest got a card and the reading caused much merriment. "Hubby" was shown as others see him. Needless to say hearts played a leading part, one young man getting a string of fourteen.

Announce Engagement.

Plainfielders will be interested in the announcement of the engagement of Miss Mabel Frances Kimball, of Westfield, to Spencer Gales, of Elizabeth. Miss Kimball has many friends here and Mr. Gales is also well-known among Plainfield people.

Schoolboys vs. Y. M. C. A.

The basketball five of the Plainfield High School will play the Y. M. C. A. team Monday evening at the Y. M. C. A. Between the halves, the North Plainfield High School basketball team will play the second team of the association.

Mrs. Valentine Utzinger, of Grandview avenue, who has been ill with a fever for several weeks, was able to leave her bed today for the first and the quarantine has been removed from the house.

AGRICULTURE BOARD TO MEET AT TRENON.

The thirty-fifth annual meeting of the State Board of Agriculture will take place at the State House, at Trenton, January 15, 16 and 17. The first session will be devoted to the enrollment of delegates and appointment of committees. Wednesday afternoon will be given to reports of the executive committee. Master George W. F. Gaunt, of the State grange; Walter Heritage, of Swedesboro, treasurer of the State board; Franklin Dye, of Trenton, secretary, and Dr. E. B. Voorhees, president, will deliver his annual address. There will also be an address by F. C. Minkler, professor of animal husbandry at the State Agricultural College, on "Money in Sheep for New Jersey Farmers." In the evening Alfred Gaskill will give an illustrated address on "Paying Crops for Poor Lands," and State Entomologist Smith will talk on "The Parasite Question Practically Considered."

"Corn Improvement," by Professor M. L. Bowman, from the Iowa State College, will be made interesting by an exhibit of corn from the different counties of this State for comparison. "The Soil Fertility Problem" will be the lecture topic of Alva Agee, professor of agricultural extension at the Pennsylvania State College.

Postmaster-General Meyer will be the guest of honor at Thursday afternoon's session, and his address will be on the parcels post, the establishment of such a post on rural free delivery routes, and the inauguration of postal savings banks. Other speakers are to be Dr. Leonard Pearson, of the University of Pennsylvania, on dairy topics, and High School Inspector Louis Bevier on improvement of rural schools.

In the evening at the State schools' auditorium Colonel George Nox McCain, the Philadelphia newspaper man, will lecture on "Servia and Bulgaria, the Battleground of Europe," with colored steropticon views. The music will be by the orchestra and Philmoela Club of the State schools.

The closing session will be Friday morning, with addresses by Professor R. L. Watts, of Scalp Level, Pa., on "Market Gardening," and by Kenyon L. Butler, dean of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, on "A Campaign for Rural Progress."

RAILROAD COMMISSION WOULD TACKLE TYPHOID.

Trenton, Jan. 3.—For the second time within a month another day has passed without developing new cases of typhoid fever here, the list of cases since December 1 remaining at three less than 100. City authorities are still at work endeavoring to ascertain the causes of prevailing cases. An early report to the Common Council is expected.

Another source of relief, not only for Trenton, but also for all other municipalities in the State similiarly affected by polluted drinking water, is suggested in a report which General James M. Congdon, of Paterson, and Edmund Wilson, of Red Bank, filed with Governor Stokes yesterday as majority members of the New Jersey State Railroad Commission.

In addition to discussing railroad affairs on a purely traffic nature, at great length, the Commissioners also recommended that their board be given increased powers by the ensuing Legislature to the end that it may take up other phases of public utility questions, acting in a way as a public utility commission, although not going quite so far as such commissions in other States. The report recommends that the commission be given a power to regulate lighting, heating, purity of drinking water, sanitary conditions, the use of soft coal and other matters pertaining to public health.

Physicians hold that much spread of disease is due to public drinking from fountains in railroad stations and other public places, typhoid and other maladies being easily communicated in that way. This leads the Railroad Commission to ask for greater jurisdiction in this matter, to the end that the danger may be eliminated.

Authority asked by the commission will be sought during the coming session of the Legislature, which will convene here January 14. Other public health legislation, particularly along the lines of pure water and improved sanitation, is also expected to appear.

MURDERED MAN FOUND ON RAILROAD TRACK.

The body of a man was found on the tracks of the Staten Island Rapid Transit Railroad Company at Grassmere yesterday morning. The man's throat had been cut and there were several slashes on the face and chin. The cut in the throat severed the jugular vein, and, the Coroner's physician said, caused death.

The body had been badly mangled by a train, one arm being torn off, both legs broken and the body generally lacerated. The body is that of an Italian, forty years old, five feet, 180 pounds and dressed as a laborer. In the pockets were found a razor which had not been used in killing him, there being no stains on it. There also were a penknife, scissors and some change.

A letter dated at Ricale, Italy, and beginning "My dear husband," and signed "Philomena Delfore," is supposed to be from the man's wife. The body was removed to the morgue.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The funeral of Elden G. Smalley, lieutenant of the North Plainfield fire department, was attended by many from this borough at his late home in North Plainfield yesterday morning. Mr. Smalley was a brother of Mrs. States R. Titsworth and was well-known by many Dunellenites. William G. Holton Council, No. 55, Jr. O. U. A. M., of which Mr. Smalley was a member, sent a delegation of a dozen members to the funeral, and two of the lodgemen acted as pall bearers. Rev. Henry N. Jordan, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, at New Market, was in charge of the services, and spoke in eulogy of the departed fireman. The interment was at Hillside cemetery.

William Hamilton was elected chairman of the Piscataway Township Committee at the organization meeting held yesterday afternoon. A. R. Tappen was elected treasurer, Dr. W. J. Nelson was again endorsed as township physician, and Reed & Coddington, of Plainfield, will continue as legal advisors of the committee. George R. Haines, of Lincoln, was elected a member of the committee.

Samuel B. Merrill, Jr., and Mrs. George W. Day and son, Alfred Day, and Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Randolph, are in Philadelphia today as guests at the silver wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hunt. Mrs. Hunt is a daughter of Mr. Merrill and a sister of Mrs. Day.

The mission study class of the Presbyterian church held a postponed meeting at the manse last night. The regular night for the meeting was Tuesday, but this week the New Year's sociable of the ladies of the church was held on that night.

A Sale of Commanding Interest

This Great Sale is not only of commanding interest on account of the substantial saving it provides, but also on account of its breadth and scope and the high quality of the offerings.

In every department of this big store an extraordinary saving is made possible on high-grade merchandise that is refined and distinctive in character and that measures up to every demand of fashion.

The number of broken lines in every department is larger than ever before. It is because the unusual trade which we have enjoyed during the past season has been the greatest in our history and has made it neccessary for us to manufacture in unusually large quantities and to carry an extremely wide assortment of styles so as to meet the demands of our rapidly grow ng patronage.

It is to maintain our policy of carrying no goods over from season to season that we have opened the New Year with a sale of Clothing, Shoes, Hats and Furnishings that will at once interest every careful buyer.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

BASEBALL.

Arthur Irwin, of New York, is being hailed as the probable manager of the Montreal team for next season. Since Frank Farrell has found it impossible to dispose of his franchise in the Canadian city, it is said that he has determined to secure an experienced manager for the Royals next season, and that Irwin is the fellow he is angling for. Farrell is aware of the fact that the fans of that city are sore over several disappointing seasons and that something must be done to keep the sport in popular favor there.

In connection with the possibility of Irwin managing the Royals, the Newarker has also been mentioned as the man who would pilot the local Union League team next season. Irwin's knowledge of the game fits him as a valuable man for the new outlaw league, and it is the impression in some circles that a proposition coming from Farrell to manage Montreal is done for the interests of organized baseball.

The situation reveals that many changes transpire in the course of baseball history as a result of the numerous shifts sustained by managers and players in their diamond careers. Irwin was the second National League manager to give Clark Griffith, manager of the New York Americans, and a stockholder in the Montreal club, a job. This was in 1891, when Griff's arm went bad, while he was with Charley Comiskey's old St. Louis Browns. Irwin, who was manager of the Boston American Association team, signed Griff and the latter pitched good ball and helped materially to win the championship for Irwin's team. Now Irwin is expecting a job from Griffith, the man whom Irwin formerly employed.

Tommy Corcoran, the veteran infielder, who will coach the Columbia University baseball candidates, has some excellent material for next season's team and will begin work in the cage shortly after the holidays. Among the candidates having excellent prospects for making the team is young Jay Gould, who is ambitious to play third base.

GOLF.

The Olympic golf tournament is to be held on June 1, 2 and 3 over the Deal course, which was recently admitted as one of the championship links of Great Britain. Already plans are under way in this country for a strong representation in the Olympic games to be held in London, but just what America purposes doing as regards golf, is at present largely a matter of conjecture.

The Amateur Athletic Union has turned the golf part of the program over to the United States Golf Association, but thus far the latter has taken no official action. There are those who would like to see this country represented at Deal in June, and they believe it would simplify matters if the parent body here would select a team of, say, four amateurs and defray the expenses of such a team while abroad

The United States Golf Association has more than $100,000 in its treasury, so that the mattetr of expense need not necessarily stand in the way. As for the players, Jerome D. Travers, the national champion, H. Chandler Egan, Walter J. Travis and Fred Herreshoff would constitute a quartet hard to beat. The United States Golf Association paid no attention to the Olympic golf competition held at St. Louis during the World's Fair in 1904.

So far as Deal is concerned, there has been no end of comment abroad pro and con over its right to be classed among the championship links. It is a fact that there are sixteen cross bunkers and seven blind approaches. The play is for the most part fairly straight both out and in, which suggests a certain element of sameness.

According to those in close touch with the situation in New England, the Brae Burn County Club does not intend to do any wire pulling in an endeavor to secure the 1908 amateur championship tournament. It is understood that the Massachusetts golfers will be content to adopt a conservative policy, relying on the fact that the tournament has never been held in that vicinity to count in their favor. They are also able to refer without words of apology to the manner in which the women's national competition was conducted at Brae Burn in 1906.

John Ball, Jr., who won the amateur title of Great Britain at St. Andrews last spring for the sixth time, is finishing the season as brilliantly as he started. In the medal play competition at Holyoke, on December 7, Ball, John Graham, Jr., and A. H. Weaver, the first two at plus five, and the latter at plus one, tied for the trophy at 82. H. H. Hilton came next, with 84. There were 123 starters.

One-day golf competitions, which have become so popular with the women in this section and Chicago, have been taken up abroad. The Ladies' Golf Union has officially decided to encourage these affairs in future.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Week of prayer services will be held at the Congregational church, January 5-11, inclusive.

The monthly communion service will be held at the First Baptist church Sunday morning with reception of members.

Communion service will be held at the First M. E. church Sunday morning at which time a number of new members will be received.

The Epworth League of the First M. E. church will hold a business meeting and social hour in Vincent chapel tonight at 8 o'clock.

Communion service will be held at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church Sunday morning; also at the First Presbyterian church, with reception of members.

The regular meeting of the Seventh-Day Adventist church will be held tonight in the W. C. T. U. rooms. The subject will be "The History of the World as Revealed in the Prophecy of Daniel."

The annual meeting of the Sunday-school of the Park Avenue Baptist church will be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock at the church. Officers will be elected and other business transacted.

The official board of the Congregational church met at the parsonage last night to converse with those desiring to join the church on confession. It is expected that a number will unite with the church at the communion service Sunday morning.

Miss Josephine Petrie, engaged in home mission work for the Presbyterian church, will make an address at the quarterly meeting of the Women's Home Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church this afternoon. She will tell of her work among mission schools.

PERSONAL.

Malcolm Van Arsdale, of Grove street, has returned from Maine for a visit with his parents.

Miss Dorothy Welch, of Delaware, Ohio, is the guest of relatives in the borough for a few weeks.

Miss Helen Bull, of Troy, N. Y., is visiting at the home of Miss Ella Renyard, of Fairview avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. James C. Keegan, of New York, have returned after a short stay with relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lasher, of Brooklyn, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. A. E. LaPorte, of Jackson avenue.

Miss Margaret Ashbrook, of Philadelphia, is spending the holiday season with friends in North Plainfield.

The Misses Lynch and Sullivan, of Newark, are spending a week with Miss Elsie Knowlton, of East Fifth street.

Jack Peacock, of West Fifth street, a student at Princeton University, has been spending the holiday season at home.

Miss Margaret Kenney, of East Second street, is spending a few days with Miss Mildred Schlesinger, of Brooklyn.

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Dunn, of Norwood avenue, have returned from Point Pleasant, where they have been visiting relatives.

Miss Muriel Whitney, of Orange, has returned home after a visit of one week with the Misses Maude and Myra Emmons, of Prospect place.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Belle Gold, who plays Desdemona, the colored maid, with McIntyre and Heath in "The Ham Tree," at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow afternoon and night, has made something of a reputation as a dramatic writer as well as a character comedienne. She has written several plays, three of which have been successfully produced—"A Colorado Waif," "An Angel of Mercy," and "The Mail Boy." Miss Gold starred in "A Colorado Waif" for two seasons. She wrote the successful vaudeville playlet, "The Maid From Maine," and several popular ballads, among them "The Tale the Bells Told." Miss Gold has proved herself an exceptionally clever actress in her work with McIntyre and Heath, she especially excelling in the delineation of negro character types. This is rather remarkable in a woman. There are but four players in this line of work on the American stage who are regarded as of the first rank.

RAILROAD COMMISSION AGAINST FIXING RATES

General Joseph W. Congdon, of Paterson, and Edmund Wilson, of Red Bank, majority members of the New Jersey State Railroad Commission, in their annual report made public by Governor Stokes yesterday, reassert the Republican majority position in last year's Legislature, which opposed giving the commission power to fix rates for railroads. In this they take a stand directly opposite to Commissioner Borden, who submitted a minority report a few days ago.

The majority Commissioners say that for a commission to be endowed with power to fix rates would require Commissioners especially skilled in railroad affairs, as no one else could determine fairly what the operating expenses of a railroad should be, what gross earnings would be possible, how much money a railroad should be allowed or obliged to make, and consequently what net earnings should result from which dividends could be paid.

In the matter of grade crossings the majority Commissioners believe the railroads should pay all expenses of the abolition of such dangerous nuisances.

Declaring that they do not feel called upon to make any recommendation regarding a public utility commission, the Commissioners ask that power be given them to regulate lighting, heating, purity of drinking water, sanitary conditions, the regulation of the use of soft coal, and to examine the financial condition of roads. They also ask for power to regulate ferries connected with railroads, and power to arrest employes of railroads whose carelessness result in accidents.

MOTHER ACCUSED OF MURDERING HER BABY

Charged with having murdered her own baby by cutting off its head with a pair of scissors, Mrs. Teresa Sampietro is under arrest in a ward of the North Hudson Hospital at Union Hill. The police say that after killing her child the woman wrapped its mutilated body in a lot of old clothing and placed it in her trunk to conceal the crime.

The woman was employed as a chambermaid at the hotel kept by Morris Roncarano, at 523 High Point avenue, West Hoboken.

A doctor had been summoned to attend Mrs. Sampietro, in spite of her protests, that she was not seriously ill, found the body of the infant concealed in a trunk.

The police were summoned and they say the woman admitted that the child was hers, and that she killed it when it was only a few hours old.

The only excuse she gave was that she was afraid that she would lose her position if her employer learned that she was a mother.

The woman, about four months ago, came from Chicago, where she worked in a restaurant at 42 Adams street, Union Hill, since being separated from her husband. The West Hoboken police have sent the name and description of a man in the case to the Chicago authorities, with instructions to arrest him if he returns to that city. Whether he is implicated in the murder of the child the local police will not say. They will not even say whether the man had visited the woman here.

TOLD ABOUT "THE LAND OF LOCHS AND BRAES"

George N. Cross, a personal friend of Rev. A. C. Nickerson, pastor of All Souls' Unitarian church, and his companion on a trip abroad several years ago, gave an interesting steriopticon lecture last night at the church under the auspices of Unity League, the church women's society. His topic was "Scotland, the Land of Lochs and Braes," and the pictures he showed were mostly reproduced from photographs he took while on a trip abroad with Mr. Nickerson.

Largely attended by an audience, whose interest was held by the informal charm of the speaker's manner, the affair netted a good some for the work of the League. The slides outlined the trip in full, commencing with views taken on the ocean trip. Views of Glasgow, where Mr. Cross and Mr. Nickerson landed, preceeded many which showed the historic points of Scotland, as photographed by a sightseer. The speaker had born especially in mind the literature and history of the country, and showed pictures of Robert Burn's birthplace at Ayr and scenes associated with William Wallace, Robert Bruce and Mary Queen of Scots. In connection with his remarks about "Bloody Mary," Mr. Cross showed scenes of her unfortunate career, several of which were reproductions of noted paintings.

About seventy slides were shown in all and the lecturer gave an excellent summary of the history, literature and life of the Scotch people. Mr. Cross has for many years been prominent in the teaching world, but has recent devoted his whole time to lecturing. He has known Mr. Nickerson for many years, and was his guest during his stay in this city.

Arrangements have been completed by Principal Ira W. Travell to have Mr. Cross repeat his lecture before the pupils of the Plainfield High school Wednesday morning.

ANTI-BRYAN MEN TO ATTEND A BIG DINNER

Anticipating the visit of William Jennings Bryan to New Jersey by a little more than a day, the dinner to be given to the State Democratic Committee by its auxiliary committee in the New Auditorium, Newark, on Thursday evening, January 30, will mark the opening of the national campaign in New Jersey. United States Senator John Warwick Daniel, of Virgania, a strong anti-Bryan man, will probably be the star speaker of the evening. An effort will be made to secure John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi, minority leader in the National House of Representatives; Congressman Swager Sherley, of Kentucky, and Congressman Sheppard, of Texas, among other speakers.

There will be a large representation of the Democracy of New Jersey at the banquet, and there is no doubt but that the gathering will be made the occasion for sounding and, so far as may be possible, shaping, the sentiment of the party in the State as to national candidates and national policies.

It was the hope of the Bryan men that the visit of the "Peerless Leader" to Newark and other municipalities of Jersey would be the signal for the crystalization of sentiment for him as the next Presidential nominee. He will lose out by about thirty-six hours. His arrival in Newark will be on the heels of a gathering of 300 or more partisans from men who believe that some other than the Nebraska Commoner, who has twice been defeated, should be selected for the standard bearer in the national fight to be made at the polls next November.

MAY SUSPEND FAGAN POLICE OFFICIALS.

There were many new faces in the City Hall, Jersey City, yesterday, when the new Democratic administration began its first day's business under Mayor H. Otto Wittpenn. The building was crowded all day long with office seekers, the centre of attraction being the office of City Collector Robert Davis. The office seekers were so persistent in besieging this office that Mr. Davis finally found it necessary to lock the doors after business hours and station a guard at the main entrance, with instructions to admit only those whom he wanted to see.

Six years ago, when Mr. Davis held the same office, it was the political headquarters to which all the faithful journeyed, and yesterday's procession in the direction of that office indicated that the office would again become the rendezvous for the faithful.

Shortly after Mr. Davis opened the office for the day's business Edward Fry, who was deposed at City Collector by the "Ripper" bill, walked into the office and said to Mr. Davis: "I don't recognize you as the City Collector. I am the City Collector."

"Well, I guess the Court will settel that," replied Mr. Davis. "Come into my private office and have a cigar."

"You mean my private office, don't you?" asked Mr. Fry as he walked into the enclosure and proceeded to show Mr. Davis how he had conducted the office. After spending a half hour in the place Mr. Fry left.

Mayor Wittpenn was on hand at an early hour, and he had a busy day of it. His first official act was to marry a young Italian couple who desired to be the first to be united in matrimony by the new Mayor. Mayor Wittpenn spent the day familiarizing himself with the various departments of the city government, and it was nearly six o'clock before he left for home.

The new Tax Board met yesterday afternoon and organized by electing Thomas J. Carroll president. The Board also appointed fourteen clerks, but left the appointment of a chief clerk for a future meeting. Yesterday afternoon the new Police Board met; and it is rumored that it will suspend Chief Monahan and the other Fagan police officials who were indicted by Sheriff Kaiser's Grand Jury.

NEW YORK CITY.

There is food enough wasted in New York city each day to feed a half million persons.

There are now being carried out in New York city new engineering works whose total cost is about $600,000,000. This is more than three times as much as the Panama canal will cost.

New York's oldest dealer in musical instruments says that there are more violins in the city bearing the name "Antonius Stradivarius" than the great Cremona fiddle maker ever had in his little shop.

There are about 13,000 women living in hotels in New York city who are entirely relieved of all the cares and responsibilities of housekeeping and families and have their attention principally occupied with food, dress and amusement.—New York Herald.

The Christian Endeavor meeting at the Congregational church Sunday night at 7:30 will be in the form of a New Year's consecration service. The topic will be "Songs of the Heart." James McClymont, Jr., president of the society, is desirous of having a full attendance of members.

ECLIPSE OF THE SUN IS NOT VISIBLE HERE

While important from an astronomical point of view, the eclipse of the sun today will possess little interest in this vicinity, as it will not be visible here. It will be seen as a partial eclipse in Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Missouri and Oklahoma, and in part of Tennessee, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and Texas. To observers within this region the moon will be seen encroaching on the sun's edge just before sunset. But not more than one-eighth of the disc of the sun will be hidden.

The only point where the eclipse will be total is the equatorial regions of the Pacific ocean and observers have selected Flint Island as the most convenient point from which to study its phases.

The importance of this eclipse to students of astronomy lies in the fact that the moon at this time is so near the earth that the sun will be completely hidden for more than four minutes. That is why several expeditions have been sent out to observe it.

C. M. Neagle, the West Front street druggist, starts the New Year with a large stock of goods and a determination to please his patrons just as he has in the past by giving them full values for little money.

PLAN INAUGURATION OF J. FRANKLIN FORT

Senator Thomas J. Hillery and Assemblyman Frank B. Jess, who have been chosen by the Republican caucus to be President of the Senate and Speaker of the House, have appointed a joint committee of the Legislature to have charge of the inauguration of John Franklin Fort as Governor of New Jersey. The committee is composed of Senator Bloomfield H. Minch, of Cumberland; Senator Jacob C. Price, of Sussex; Senator-elect Harry B. Leavitt, of Mercer; Assemblyman Theodore B. Gibbs, of Camden; Henry Young, Jr., of Essex; Mark A. Sullivan, of Hudson; Oliver C. Holcombe, of Hunterdon, and Assemblyman-elect Edwin H. Ginnelly, of Mercer.

The inauguration will take place in Taylor's opera house, Trenton, at noon, on Tuesday, January 21.

In accordance with the wishes of Governor-elect Fort there will be no military display and the inauguration will be as simple as possible. The Governor-elect will be escorted to the hall by the joint committee, both branches of the Legislature having previously assembled and been called to order on the platform. Prayer will be offered by the Rev. Dr. James M. Ludlow, of East Orange, pastor of the church of which Mr. Fort is a member, after which the oath of office will be administered by Chief Justice William S. Gummere. After the oath of office has been administered Governor Stokes will deliver the great seal of New Jersey to his successor, who will then deliver his inaugural address. Benediction will be pronounced by the Rev. W. Strother Jones, of Trenton.

After the ceremonies in the opera house, the new Governor will be entertained at luncheon by the joint committee, and there will be a public reception at the State House from 3 to 5 o'clock in the afternoon and from 7 to 9 o'clock in the evening.

WYOMING WANTS ITS STATION BACK.

Petitions to the Lackawanna Railroad from citizens of Wyoming, N. J., proving in vain, J. Q. A. Williamson, a prominent resident and insurance broker, with offices in Jersey City, has sent a formal complaint to the New Jersey Railroad Commission protesting against the removal of the old Wyoming station, which has been in use continuously for nearly forty years. About two months ago the new railroad station at Millburn, some distance east from the old building formerly used for passengers, was opened to the public for use, and the railroad officials discontinued the Wyoming station and removed the old waiting room at Millburn. The result has been a saving to the railroad of one station and a consequent increase of distances travelled by many of the commuters who formerly used the old station.

The change proved unpopular from the start and soon petitions were sent the railroad asking that the trains stop as formerly at Wyoming. The railroad did not change its plans, but assured the commuters they would benefit by better service. This promise, the commuters say, has not been fulfilled and the residents are up in arms against the scheme.

In a letter to the Railroad Commission Mr. Williamson stated that the Wyoming patrons of the road have to go round about up the roadway to the new station or else walk seven hundred yards up the tracks. No additional train service has been given, he avers. According to Mr. Williamson, the Railroad Commission has reported that the complaint has been sent to the Lackawanna Railroad officials for an answer to the charges, but no reply has been received.

FACTS ABOUT OREGON.

Oregon raises 50,000,000 bushels of wheat a year, consumes 12,000,000, and sells the rest. Total value of farm products this year estimated at $80,000,000.

There are only 450,000 acres of Oregon soil under irrigation, out of a productive area of 10,000,000 acres.

To the National Irrigation Fund Oregon has contributed $6,000,000, a larger sum than any other State.

The fruit crop of the State is worth to its growers about $5,000,000 a year. Oregon apples, pears and other fruits bring the highest prices in the most exacting of the world's markets.

The city of Portland produces manufacturers that sell for $30,000,000 a year.

There is enough timber in Oregon to build a fence fifty feet high around the entire United States. It has one-sixth of the total timber supply of the country, more than any other State, and gets $12,000,000 annually for its timber products.

Oregon has 2,000 miles of railroad in operation, 1,042 miles of new roads now building, and as much more mileagle projected for immediate construction.

Oregon has unlimited water power, vast deposits of cheap coal, and contains within its borders some of the most profitable gold and copper deposits in the world, in addition to other minerals. Much of the mineral producing territory has hardly been scratched.

With a population of less than 700,000 and an area of 600,000 square miles, Oregon has room for 10,000 more people.

CITY AND STATE.

Massachusetts is the most densely populated State in the Union.

In order to check the multiplication of mosquitoes in Pittsburg the bureau of health of that city has placed 70,000 sunfish in the park lakes.

The English city of Hanley, with a population of 70,000, believes it has solved the sewage problem. Its new plant, which cost $350,000, will dispose of 9,000,000 gallons of sewage a day, and the effluent from the beds is so clear that fish will live in it for an indefinite period.

Wyoming enfranchised its women in 1869. That State has today the smallest proportion of unmarried women of any State in the Union. While divorce in the United States has increased over three times as fast as the population during the last twenty years, it has increased in Wyoming only half as fast as the population.

THE COOKBOOK.

An egg added to the mixture for a shortcake gives it an additional lightness and flavor.

Apples for making pies should not be slived. Merely peel, cut in quarters, core and again cut each quarter in half.

Rice is an aluminium boiler comes out as flaky as if steamed in a special kettle, and milk will boil in an aluminium saucepan where it would burn in a tin receptiacle.

A substitute for tosated crackers, which are often served with salad is thin slices of bread lightly spread with butter on both sides. Roll the slices and fasten each with a toothpick. Place as many of the pieces ae are needed in a pan and brown in a quick oven. Before Serving with the salad remove the toothpicks.

ANIMAL ODDITIES.

Monkeys are remarkably keen of sight, but deficient in sense of smell.

A goat lives ten years and gives an average of a quart of milk a day.

If the wind is right a fox can smell a human being a quarter of a mile away.

The night hawk makes no nest at all, simply laying its eggs in a slight depression in the ground. The eggs look so much like small stones that they pass undetected by the searcher.

High Living.

An eminent man who is a strict abstainer from both wine and animal food is obliged in consequence of this jecularity to refrain from dinging out. He entertains, however, an occasional kindred spirit. One such was recently at his table.

"You ought to have seen them," said the eminent man's son, "rioting over boiled carrotts!"

Boynton Square Pot Furnaces

The many acknowledged disadvantages of the old-fashioned round fire pot have been entirely overcome in the patent Square Pot—an exclusive feature of the time-tried Boynton Furnaces.

First of all, the grate bars are of equal length and motion, extending under the whole layer of ashes, making clearance quick and complete. No place to clog; no choking; no poking. Solves problem of perfect combustion. Ash pit is square—cleanest, best draught, handiest.

THE SQUARE POT. Patented

With the square pot there is greater ease of operation, more radiating surface, more economy of fuel, than in any other construction known. Your plumber, steam fitter or tinsmith will show you.

There are BOYNTON heating plants of all kinds. Ask about our Round or Sectional Boilers for steam or hot water. Also ranges.

It seems they had advanced that far, for she was beginning to find this young man not only safe, but promising. She had met nobody recently half as amusing, and the outlook at Shotover House had been unpromising with only the overgrateful Page twins to practice on, the other men collectively and individually boring her. And suddenly, welcome as manna from the sky, behold this highly agreeable boy to play with—until Quarrier arrived! Her telegram had been addressed to Mr. Quarrier.

It was perhaps the reaction of her gayety that recalled to her mind her telegram. The telegram had been her promised answer after she had had time to consider a suggestion made to her by a Mr. Howard Quarrier. The last week at Shotover permitted reflection, and, while her telegram was no complete answer to the suggestion he had made, it contained material of interest in the eight words, "I will consider your request when you arrive."

"I wonder if you know Howard Quarrier," she said.

After a second's hesitation he replied: "Yes, a little. Everybody does."

"You do know him?"

"Only at the club."

"Oh, the Lenox?"

"The Lenox and the Patroons."

Preoccupied, driving with careless, almost inattentive, perfection, she thought idly of her twenty-three years, wondering how life could have passed so quickly, leaving her already stranded on the shoals of an engagement to marry Howard Quarrier. Then her thoughts, errant, wandered half the world over before they returned to Siward, and when at length they did, and meaning to be civil, she spoke again of his acquaintance with Quarrier at the Patroons club, the club itself being sufficient to settle Siward's status in every community.

"I'm trying to remember what it is I have heard about you," she continued amiably. "You are"—

An odd expression in his eyes arrested her long enough to note their color and expression, and she continued pleasantly: "You are Stephen Siward, are you not? You see, I know your name perfectly well." Her straight brows contracted a trifle. She drove on, lips compressed, following an elusive train of thought which vaguely, persistently, coupled his name with something indefinitely unpleasant. And she could not reconcile this with his appearance. However, the train of unlinked ideas which she pursued began to form the semblance of a chain. Coupling his name with Quarrier's and with a club aroused memory. Vague uneasiness stirred her to a glimmering comprehension. Siward—Stephen Siward? One of the New York Siwards then—one of that race—

Suddenly the truth flashed upon her—the crude truth, lacking definite detail, lacking circumstance and color and atmosphere—merely the raw and ugly truth.

Stephen Siward.

Had he looked at her, and he did once, he could have seen only the unruffled and very sweet profile of a young girl. Composure was one of the masks she had learned to wear when she chose.

"Miss Landis," he said.

"Mr. Siward?" very gently. It was her way to be gentle when generous.

"I think," he said, "that you are beginning to remember where you may have heard my name."

"Yes, a little." She looked at him with the direct gaze of a child, but the lovely eyes were troubled. His smile was not very genuine, but he met her gaze steadily enough.

"It was rather nice of Mrs. Ferrall to ask me," he said, "after the mess I made of things last spring."

"Grace Ferrall is a dear," she replied.

After a moment he ventured, "I suppose you saw it in the papers."

"I think so. I had completely forgotten it. Your name seemed to"—

"I see." Then listlessly, "I couldn't have ventured to remind you that—that perhaps you might not care to be so amiable"—

"Mr. Siward," she said impulsively, "you are nice to me! Why shouldn't I be amiable? It was—it was—I've forgotten just how dreadfully you did behave"

"Pretty badly."

"Very."

"They say so."

"And what is your opinion, Mr. Siward?"

"Oh, I ought to have known better." Something about him reminded her of a bad small boy, and suddenly, in spite of her better sense, in spite of her instinctive caution, she found herself on the very verge of laughter. What was it in the man that disarmed and invited a confidence scarcely justified, it appeared? What was it now that moved her to overlook what few overlook, not the fault, but its publicity? Was it his agreeable bearing, his piegsant badinage, his amiably listless moments of preoccupation, his youth, that appealed to her, aroused her charity, her generosity, her curiosity?

And had other people continued to accept him too? What would Quarrier think of his presence at Shotover? She began to realize that she was a little afraid of Quarrier's opinions, and his opinions were always judgments. However, Grace Ferrall had thought it proper to ask him, and that meant social absolution. As far as that went, she also was perfectly ready to absolve him if he needed it.

"I was wondering," he said, looking up to encounter her clear eyes, "whose house that is over there."

"Beverly Plank's shooting box, Black Fells," she replied, nodding toward the vast pile of blackish rocks against the sky, upon which sprawled a heavy stone house infested with chimneys.

"Plank? Oh, yes."

He smiled to remember the battering blows rained upon the ramparts of society by the master of Black Fells.

But the smile faded, and, glancing at him, the girl was surprised to see the subtle change in his face—the white, worn look, then the listless apathy, which all at once to her hinted of something graver than preoccupation.

"Is that Shotover House?" he asked as they came to the crest of the hillock between them and the sea.

"At last, Mr. Siward," she said mockingly, "and now your troubles are nearly ended."

"And yours, Miss Landis?"

"I don't know," she murmured to herself, thinking of the telegram with the faintest misgiving.

Theory had almost decided her to answer Mr. Quarrier's suggestion with a "Yes." However, he was coming from the lakes in a day or two. She would decide definitely when she had discussed the matter with him.

"I wish that I owned this dog," observed Siward as the phaeton entered the macadamized drive.

"I wish so, too," she said, "but he belongs to Mr. Quarrier."

OBITUARY.

Thomas Comiskey.

Thomas Comiskey, a well-known West End resident, died in Muhlenberg Hospital last night. He was taken ill with grip a few days and pneumonia developed quickly. He was removed from his home on Liberty street to the hospital yesterday afternoon but his condition was critical before the ambulance reached its desination. Comiskey was about fifty years old and was employed for many years by local contractors as a hod carrier. He was a member of the Hod Carriers' Association. Surviving him are a wife and five children, the eldest a son who is now at Muhlenberg Hospital in a critical condition from burns received in an accident at the Country Club several weeks ago. Skin grafting will have to be resorted to in order to save his life. The funeral will be held at St. Mary's church tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Miss Julia Pla de Villars.

Miss Julia Pla de Villars, daughter of Julian and Rosinne Pla de Villars, died yesterday morning at the home of her parents on Park place. She was about twenty-five years old and came to the borough with her parents from New York a short time ago. Miss Pla de Villars was an accomplished young woman and was an assistant to her father, who is a private tutor. She was also a teacher in the Sunday-school of the Church of the Holy Cross. The funeral will be held at her late home this afternoon at 4 o'clock and will be in charge of Rev. George A. Warner. Burial is to be at Newton.

Mrs. Harriett D. Boice.

Mrs. Harriett D. Boice, wife of Luther Boice, died Wednesday. The funeral will be private.

Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., will install officers this evening. The members will afterward enjoy a smoker and social time.

In Honor of Miss DeGraff.

Mr. and Mrs. James W. DeGraff, of Central avenue, gave a children's party at their home last night in honor of their daughter, Miss Eleanor DeGraff. There were about sixty young people present to enjoy the dance, which was the feature of the evening. Music was furnished by Westervely and his program was an attractiive one. During the intermission an elaborate supper was served. The home was appropriately decorated for the holiday season, smilax, holly, etc., being used with good effect.

Mrs. Burns' Funeral Tomorrow.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Burns, widow of John Burns, who died New Year's Day, will be held from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. A. B. Mathews, of Pearl street, tomorrow morning at 8:30 o'clock and at St. Joseph's church at 9 o'clock. The interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

—There is an old widow woman residing at 309 East Fourth street, who would like to get some plain sewing to help pay her rent and purchase coal.

"WILLIE" MULLEN MAKES THREE DOUBLE CENTURIES

But for an exhibition of high class pinning by "Willie" Mullen, a series of games between the Napoleons and Garibaldis, last night, might have been passed down as the most spiritless match yet played in the bowling tourney. Low scores were the rule rather than the exception and it seemed impossible for anyone outside of "Willie" to chalk up a decent set of figures. This young phenom was on deck with the proper wallop and whanged the timber for three double centuries, a feat that no other tourney bowler has accomplished. The Napoleons took all three games but they were almost handed to them on a silver platter.

Mullen's standby partner, Conklin, was missing from the team but it had no effect on his rolling. In the first try he went on the board for 202, the second 207 and the third 217, an average of 208.2. It was the only thing that gave the gallery a chance to applaud and they did it with a vengeance. His were the only 200 scores posted, the nearest to any of them being a 180 made by Cutting. The rank figures in the last game on both sides were due to a fine large bunch of splits.

The Napoleons are now third in the race and the other teams are beginning to take some notice of Captain Willett and his men. They dropped their first three games but have since been crawling steadily upward.

The scores:

Games tonight will be between the Lafayettes and the Wellingtons with the following line-ups: Lafayettes—Louis Skelly, captain; John Wirth, Tunis Hewitt, Fred Hillman and James Edwards. Wellingtons—Francis J. Blatz, captain; Harry Montross, Harry Gillmore, William Pope and J. Henry Crane.

Local "Pro" Will Play Cracks.

"Marty" O'Loughlin, the "pro" at the Plainfield Country Club, will leave next week for the Pinehurst Golf Club, at Pinehurst, S. C., where he will accept a similar position with that club for the winter. Already "Marty" is arranging golf matches to be played in the south and among those decided upon is a series of three with Donald Ross. His stay in the south will keep him in training for next season when he will return to the local club.

Church Fives Will Play.

The basketball team of the Hope chapel Y. M. C. will play the Holy Cross Club five at the Hope chapel gymnasium Tuesday night. The game is called for 8:15 o'clock.

ELLIS MAYOR OF METUCHEN.

And a Foe of Dr. Freeman Is Made Borough Marshal.

The Metuchen Borough Council has elected Dr. Alfred E. Ellis, Democrat, Mayor of the borough, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mayor-elect Jesse T. Jackson, Republican, who was elected over the Democrats candidate, Dr. Charles M. Freeman, husband of Mary E. Wilkins Freeman. The advice of counsel was that the Council must elect one of its own members as Mayor until the next election, in November, 1908.

The Council took a further slap at Dr. Freeman by making Enos Fouratt borough marshal for another year. Fouratt is Freeman's bitterest foe in Metuchen. When Dr. Freeman was accused of backing a participator in a "craps" game last September Fouratt had him arrested as a witness.

It was understood that Dr. Freeman made his campaign for Mayor in order to get Fouratt removed.

—Lack of space prevents the publication today of the Meteorological record of Plainfield for 1907. It will be found in tomorrow's issue.

—The members of the evening shorthand and typewriting class and also the bookkeeping class of Drake's Business College received their pins yesterday. They were ordered by Miss Alice Bohrer. The pins are a fancy shield of blue and white enamel, bearing the inscription "D. B. C., 1908," surrounded by a wreath of gold around them.

Rev. and Mrs. George Angleman, of Piermont, N. Y., are visiting Mrs. Angleman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Cory, of West Front street, for a couple of weeks.

NEW TURN IN BATTLE OF SEASHORE FIREMEN.

Differences in the Asbury Park fire department, growing out of the opposition to the colored fire company, were intensified Wednesday night, when James Boules, a member of the Eureka colored company, was arrested on a charge of attempting to send in a false alarm. Boules, the police say, admitted his guilt and was held in $600 bail to await the action of the grand jury.

The incident, coming on the heels of the recent appeal by the Eureka company from the action of the Asbury Park Council which dropped the company from the fire department, has widened the breach between the white firemen and the Eurekas. At the hearing yesterday the courtroom was crowded and much excitement prevailed.

Honeysuckles are in bloom and magnolia blossoms adorn trees along Upper Mountain avenue and Ralley road at Montclair. The honeysuckles are to be seen along a sheltered wall in Valley road, and the magnolia blossoms adorn a tree near the handsome Bradlee mansion, on Upper Mountain avenue. A few days ago George Ganley picked dandelions on the lawn in front of his home on Valley road.

At the age of eighty-four years Thomas Ball, the sculptor and author of "My Three Score Years and Ten," will sing in the oratorio "Elijah," which is to be given in Montclair on January 13. Mr. Ball was the first to sing the part of "Elijah" in America. The production here will be on the anniversary of his first appearance in the oratorio, which was on January 13, 1848.

PRAISE PLAINFIELD AS SUBURBAN CITY

Opinions Expressed by Four Prominent Residents on Community's Advantages.

IN CURRENT "SUBURBANITE."

Senator Ackerman, A. V. D. Honeyman and Rev. Drs. Chambliss, and Herring Give Their Views.

The third in the series of articles on suburban communities, written by residents in them, is presented in a home view of Plainfield. An idea of why Plainfield has become famous the country over as an exemplar of what a suburban town should be, says The Suburbanite, may be gained by reading the letters of State Senator E. R. Ackerman, of the New Jersey Legislature, a resident of Plainfield and a long time commuter over the New Jersey Central; Rev. C. E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church; A. V. D. Honeyman, editor of the New Jersey Law Journal, and Rev. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church. They are herewith reproduced from The Suburbanite:

"Plainfield is situated in a beautiful and favored locality. Its location made it a desirable place of residence from the earliest period. The mountains to the west and north of the city are a great protection against the extreme severity of winds and storms and it has been noticed that there has been a turning aside or deflection of the main force of many a sudden and severe storm. There are evidences from unearthed relics that even the Indians regarded the site of Plainfield as a favorite place for their wigwam villages and these rugged sons of nature certainly were guided in their simple life by the dictates of health and projection.

"Since the days of the Indians, Plainfield has always been known to excel as a place of residence and today it is famous throughout the land for its cosy and attractive homes.

"Plainfield is a home city, a family town with its noted and excellent school system—in short, it is an American city, both inviting and handsome.

"Anyone seeking to escape the crowding and strenuousness of the great metropolis will find that Plainfield offers advantages second to none.

"Within one hour of New York on the C. R. R. of N. J., the Plainfield train service is accompanied with no crowding of strap-hanging, and no tunnels with noxious gases hamper the comfort of the traveler.

"The Central Railroad of New Jersey maintains a fine and excellent four-track service of about ninety trains daily between New York and Plainfield, with a complete block system and other modern safety devices. The percentage of delay is less, taking the year as a whole, in reaching a place of business in the lower part of New York from Plainfield than it is from a point in Harlem or the Borough of the Bronx.

"The palatial, powerful, non-sinkable ferry boats of the Central fleet makes that part of the trip a positive pleasure. The fogs on the Hudson river are not frequent and the dangers to navigation have proved to be of no greater risk, under the circumstances, than traveling, say, on the "L" of New York.

"All the conveniences of a great city, such as police and fire protection finely paved streets, gas, water, electric light and sewers are for the use of the people in the most up-to-date and scientific form. Plainfield has the record of being an exceedingly healthy place of residence, and it was long known and called the "Colorado of the East."

"The soil is sandy and there is just enough grade to prevent impurities being collected so as to become nuisances.

"The water supply of Plainfield is regarded by experts to be unexcelled for its purity. People have located in Plainfield for the purpose of receiving the benefits to be derived from drinking pure water. This is in marked contrast with the water supplies of other localities.

"The Watchung Mountains to the west and north are close to the city, offering together with the beautiful rolling country to the south and east, roads and drives for pleasure of unsurpassed interest either by means of automobile or otherwise.

"ERNEST R. ACKERMAN."

"There is an old story about some

MISS FLEMING A BRIDE

Society Girl Becomes the Wife of Frederick Lindsay Curtis.

AT GRACE EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson Officiates—Many Fashionable Folk Witness the Ceremony.

Miss Marjorie Fleming, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Fleming, of Park avenue, and Frederick Lindsay Curtis, of Newark, Delaware, were married this afternoon in Grace church by the rector, Rev. E. Vicars Stevension, in the presence of a large assemblage of friends from New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Newark, Del., and other distant points. It was the first large wedding of the New Year and one of the most brilliant of the season.

The bride, gowned in white Liberty satin, trimmed with old lace, and wearing a tulle veil, fastened up witth orange blossoms, and carrying a bouquet of lilies of the valley and orchids, was attended by her sister, Miss Dorothy Fleming, as maid of honor. Her gown was of white radium Liberty, embroidered in white. She wore a hat trimmed with white features and carried red Liberty roses. The bridesmaids were Miss Margaret Goddard, Miss Josephine Lapsley and Miss Virginia Hegeman, of this city, and Miss Lillian Moore, of London, Canada. Their gowns were of white radium Liberty, trimmed with silver and lace. Their hats were white, trimmed with silk, hite tulle, hite lilacs and pink orchids, and their bouquets were of red Liberty roses.

The best man was Martin Hoban, of New York, and the ushers were Owen Fleming, brother of the bride; Lawrence Tweedy, of Albany, N. Y.; Porter Steele, Abbott Brett, William E. McCall, Jr., and George Applegate, of New York.

Louis Curtis, of Newark, Delaware, an uncle of the groom, presided at the organ, and prior to the ceremony, he rendered a delightful program. The wedding march from Lohengrin was played as the bridal party entered the church. The ushers led the way, followed by the bridesmaids, maid of honor and the bride, accompanied by her father. At the chancel they met the groom and his best man. After the ceremony, the Mendelssohn Wedding March was played, while the bride and groom were leaving the church.

A large reception was held at the home of the bride's parents and later Mr. and Mrs. Curtis left on an extended wedding trip. Upon their return they will reside in New York. There were many beautiful gifts exchanged among the members of the bridal partyt, and the groom's gift to the bride was a diamond pin.

The bride is a favorite in social circles and has been prominent here in many functions given by the younger society set. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred A. Curtis, of Newark, Del. He was graduated from Princeton University, Class 1902, and is a member of the Princeton Club, University Club and Merion Cricket Club, of Philadelphia; also the Princeton Club, of New York. He is engaged in the lumber business, being a partner with Martin Hoban, his best man, under the firm name of Hoban & Curtis, the office being on Madison avenue, New York.

Week of Prayer Services.

Week of prayer services will be held under the auspices of the First M. E. church in Vincent chapel, commencing Monday night, when the subject will be "Things Unseen and Spiritual." The subjects for the rest of the week follow: Tuesday, "Triumphs of Faith;" Wednesday, "Church Made Glorious;" Thursday, "Missions, Home and Foreign;" Friday, "Temperance." The pastor, Rev. A. C. McCrea, will speak on the announced topic each night and there will be special music.

Miss Marion Cock to Lecture.

Miss Marion Cock, who will lecture before the Monday Afternoon Club, at the Casino, Monday afternoon, has a very fine series of stereopticon views. These are from photographs which she herself has taken for her lecture. Her subject, "Venetian Artists; the Bellins and Carpaccio," will be both interesting and helpful. The club hopes that its friends who helped to make the last lecture a great success will again avail themselves of the opportunity. The lecture will begin at 3:30 o'clock.

Held for the Grand Jury.

William Ryder and Walter Dixon, the two boys charged with the theft of brass from the Pond shop yards, pleaded guilty when arraigned before Judge Runyon yesterday afternoon. They were held for the grand jury in $50 bail each. Ryder furnished the security but Dixon was still in jail at noon.

GROCER DUNN ASSIGNS

Veteran Merchant's Failure Due to Inability to Collect Book Accounts.

J. F. MACDONALD ASSIGNEE.

Assets May Equal Liabilities if Collections Can Be Made—Assignment Recorded.

Fred W. Dunn, one of the oldest grocers in the city, and one of the best known merchants, today made an assignment to J. Fred MacDonald, and tonight his store at Park and North avenues will be closed, it being Mr. Dunn's intention to retire from business. The announcement will be received with not a little surprise by the people of Plainfield who have regarded this as one of the established groceries of the city.

The assignment is entirely due to Mr. Dunn's inability to collect his accounts owing to the stringency of the money market. His liabilities are between $7,000 and $8,000 and if he could collect the greater part of his book accounts there would be enough to meet the claims against him and leave a balance. The assets are not expected to cover the liabilities, however, because of the poor collections.

Mr. Dunn has conducted business at the present stand about fifteen years, succeeding the late George W. Rockfellow. Prior to that he was engaged in the grocery business under the firm name of Barkalew & Dunn, the store at that time being on North avenue. William R. Codington, of the firm of Codington & Swackhamer, is Mr. Dunn's counsel.

Miss Waring's Debut.

One of the brilliant social functions of the New Year was the reception at the Casino, last night, for the purpose of introducing to society Miss Eleanor Waring, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Waring, of Park avenue. There were in all about 150 guests present, including a majority of those prominent in the younger society set and a great many from out-of-town. There was also a large representation of college men and women, who are home for the holiday vacation. Miss Waring received with her sisters, Mrs. Lewis G. Timpson and Mrs. Chauncey Humphrey.

New Books in Y. W. C. A. Library.

A feature of association life at the Y. W. C. A. is the library, which has recently been re-arranged. There are now 470 books in circulation from the shelves, and of these 150 have but recently been added to the library. Miss Amy Tapping, the secretary of the association, is the librarian, and forty-two of the members draw books regularly. The reading room of the association is becoming more and more popular with the members and several new magazines have been added, so that an excellent assortment of magazine reading is provided for the members.

David Doyle, Sr.'s Funeral.

The funeral of David Doyle, Sr., whose death occurred at his home on East Fifth street, was held this morning in St. Mary's church. The mass was said by Rev. Father Bogan in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. The body was afterward sent to Hampton Junction for interment, Mr. Doyle having lived at that place for many years. The pall bearers were Patrick Conley, Patrick Meaney, Richard Meaney, James Higgins, John Owens and Michael Kenney.

Office for Borough Clerk.

Tax Collector Brown has been instructed by Borough Mayor Townsend to communicate with J. J. Gill, owner of the Gill building, where the tax office is located, to arrange for leasing the store, No. 90 Somerset street, now used by a fruit dealer. The purpose is to fit up as an office for Borough Clerk Martin.

Funeral of George H. Robins.

With a gathering of relatives and friends in attendance, the funeral of George H. Robins was held at his late home on Norwood avenue last night. The service was conducted by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church. Burial was in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn, this morning.

Vesper Service at Y. W. C. A.

The young women of the city are invited to attend a vesper service to be held at the Y. W. C. A. rooms on East Front street, tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. Miss Chadbourne will speak. The Glee Club will repeat its Christmas carols.

Counsel for Fanwood.

William R. Codington, of the firm of Codington & Swackhamer, has been appointed counsel for the Borough of Fanwood and the firm has also been reappointed counsel for North Plainfield Township.

MARTIN BOROUGH CLERK

Comprise Candidate Agreed on When the Council Opposes Arnold.

HE SUCCEEDS FRANK ROWLEY.

To Maintain Office in Tax Collector's Place—Salary Cut Down to $400 a Year.

Narrowing down to the proposition that "one would and 'tother wouldn't," Mayor Samuel Townsend and the Borough Council held a conference in an ante-room previous to the regular meeting last night, to see if some method of cutting the borough clerk appointment Gordian knot could not be arrived at. The discussion lasted close to half an hour and when it ended, the mayor's previous selection, James K. Arnold, had been discarded and the councilmen had evidently agreed to stand by him in the naming of a "dark horse"—Frederick A. Martin, a young man who has been assistant in Collector George F. Brown's office. When the open session was called to order and a few preliminaries disposed of, Mr. Townsend announced his appointment of Martin. Five councilmen, Mr. Woolston being absent, said "aye" without a solitary comment when the confirmatory vote was called for and the deadlock that existed was at an end.

The biggest lobby that has attended a Borough Council meeting in many months was on hand when the session convened. Councilman Nichols offered a resolution that the salary of the borough clerk be reduced from $500 to $400. Everybody voted "aye." Then the mayor offered Mr. Martin as his candidate.

When Mr. Townsend was spoken to by a reporter after the meeting as to his selection of Martin, he replied simply that the young man fitted all the requirements of the position and he believed he would make an acceptable official.

BOROUGH COUNCIL ACTS ON COMMISSIONS' WORK

In the course of the regular business at last night's meeting of the Borough Council, the North Plainfield Sewage Commission, through its chairman, Charles W. McCutchen, made a request that it be discharged and relieved from further responsibility in the premises, having completed the special work for which it was appointed. The committee expressed regret at the deference given it. In its communication it went on to say:

"Towards the latter end of November, at the request of the Mayor, N. B. Smalley, this commission resumed negotiations with the chairman of the committeee on streets, lights and sewers of the city of Plainfield and addressed to their chairman a communication dated November 26, 1907, copy of which is hereto annexed. We are informed that the suggestions outlined in this communication met with the approval of said committee and that a favorable report and recommendation thereon was made to the City Council. Formal action by the City Council was deferred until the incoming committee on streets, lights and sewers for the year 1908 take office."

The communication was referred to the committee on laws, ordinances and taxation.

A resolution that had some bearing on Mayor Townsend's message was introduced by Mr. Nichols and was to the effect that the Council heartily approve of the Consolidation Commission's recommendations for the one government of Plainfield and North Plainfield and that a copy be forwarded to the clerk of the Senate. It was carried unanimously.

Somerset Council Elects.

Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., elected these officers last night for the ensuing year: Councilor, Fred Walters; vice-councilor, John Golf; recording secretary, Walter Walker; assistant, William Willey; financial secretary, George Allen; treasurer, Jesse Scull; conductor, Lester Dunham; warden, W. F. Stewart; chaplain, P. H. Latourette; outside sentinel, Fred Soper, Sr.; inside sentinel, George Watts; representatives to State Council, Fred Soper, Jr., George Watts; representative to Funeral Benefit Association, Fred Walters; trustees, P. H. Latourette, George Ganun and George Watts.

Lot of Fun in Mock Suit When S. B. Joseph is Placed on Trial.

BIG CROWD WAS ON HAND.

W. N. Runyon Acts as Judge and C. J. Fisk as Foreman of Jury—Testimony Witty Throughout.

The "standing room only" sign was displayed at the Y. M. C. A. last night, when Stephen B. Joseph was put on trial charged by Mrs. E. A. Lowe, as "Mrs. Jerusha R. Perkins," with breaking a promise to marry her. The many friends of both plaintiff and defendant, and the fact that they are so well-known, lent unusual interest to the mock trial which was arranged by the Ladies' Auxiliary of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T. City Judge William N. Runyon charged the jury after the suming up by counsel and instructed them that if anything he had said had impressed them they must forget it and find a verdict against the defendant, who, of course, was guilty.

The distinguished jury was out but a few minutes, when it returned finding Mr. Joseph guilty and awarding $3 of the $3.48 claimed as damages, to the jury and the balance to the judge.

Former Sheriff B. Frank Coriell called the court to order with the familiar cry of "Hear ye! hear ye!" after which Frank H. Smith, as clerk, announced the various cases on the calendar, the first one being that of the People against F. A. Pope, charged with over-exertion. W. S. Angleman, as his counsel, promised that it would not occur again and Judge Runyon sentenced him to the Old Ladies' Home for life. The next case was that of the People against Asa Collier, charged with eating all the oysters in a stew at a church fair, but as Mr. Angleman proved conclusively that there was never known to be but one oyster in such a stew, the judge let him off easy, ordering him to wear his hat the year round.

The third case was that of the People against C. B. Levy, charged with selling undressed kids, but this offense was not considered serious and he was discharged.

These minor cases being quickly disposed of, the attention of the court and people was directed to the important case of Mrs. Jerusha R. Perkins against Stephen B. Joseph, charger with breach of promise.

Much merriment was caused when the jury was called by the clerk as follows:

"Grover Cleveland," Charles J. Fisk; "David B. Hill," Edward Nelson; "Chauncey M. Depew," William R. Codington; "Alton B. Parker," Henry Leifke; "Thomas C. Platt," W. W. Warnock; "J. Pierpont Morgan," Alonzo Brokaw; "George Dewey," Charles A. Sturtevant; "John D. Rockefeller," H. W. Marshall; "E. C. Stokes," E. A. Lowe; "John F. Dryden," Dr. J. B. Probasco; "Theodore Roosevelt," W. A. Cochran; "John L. Sullivan," J. Hervey Doane.

The members of the jury were escorted into court in proper style by Martin A. Stutsman, the officer, and after they were examined as to their likes and dislikes, the trial proceeded, when Col. A. V. Newton, of Worcester, Mass., opened for the plaintiff. He recited briefly the facts in the case, praising Mrs. Perkins as one whom all loved and admired. He told how she had been deceived by the defendant, how he had wrecked her life, broken, twisted and lacerated her heart and he asked for $3.48 in damages.

Mrs. Perkins was placed in the stand and recited pathetically how she had been deceived. She kept a boarding house and the defendant was a frequent caller there. She said that she first met Mr. Joseph one night while walking home. She was frightened by what she thought was an animal, but which afterwards proved to be Harry Marshall's auto. Mr. Joseph escorted her home and after that was a regular caller. She had $2,000 and had offered the sum to him to start in business. In return he was to marry her, but instead he deceived her.

Love letters written by Mr. Joseph to the plaintiff were read and the endearing terms made the jury and judge weep.

One of the best witnesses was Mrs. J. S. Pray, who said that she had been in love with the defendant. When cross-examined Mrs. Pray admitted that she was madly in love with the defendant.

At this point the plaintiff rested and Mr. Angleman presented his side of the case. After explaining that his client felt very sorry for the trouble caused, he said that it was a "Miss Jerusha Ray Perkins," a niece of the plaintiff that Mr. Joseph was in love with and wanted to marry. The defendant called to the stand said that he was engaged to Miss Perkins. He further stated that he

MAYOR TOWNSEND URGES CONSOLIDATION WITH ANNEXATION, IN HIS FIRST MESSAGE

UNION CO. GETS $43,666

State Board of Assessors Apportions the Corporation Tax, $626,212.

SOMERSET CO.'S SHARE $5,244.

General Increase Over 1906 Is $2,625,393 Gross—Total Tax Increase Is $105,611.

The schedule of assessments which has been filed at Trenton by the State Board of Assessors will yield the various taxing districts this year $626,212.86 from public utility corporations.

This tax is based upon the gross receipts of the corporations at the rate of 2 per cent., with the one exception of the street railway companies, which are taxed under the law of 1906, which provides a graduating rate and increasing one-half of 1 per cent. each year until the maximum rate of 5 per cent. has been reached. On these corporations the present tax was levied at the rate of 2½ per cent.

The following tables shows the tax against the various classes of corporations:

	Gross receipts.	Tax.
Street railway companies	$10,620,701 14	$265,517 53
Water companies	2,401,643 92	48,032 93
Gas and electric companies	12,238,764 71	244,775 72
District telegraph and messenger companies	45,523 66	910 47
Sewer companies	123,887 33	2,473 36
Oil and pipe lines	139,775 66	2,795 52
Total	$28,655,463 46	$626,212 86

The increase this year over 1906 is $2,625,393.85 in gross receipts, and $105,611.42 in the aggregate tax.

The amount of the tax to be paid to the taxing districts in each county follows;

Atlantic	$ 19,621 81
Bergen	37,655 72
Burlington	17,375 01
Camden	37,270 01
Cape May	5,358 83
Cumberland	3,066 29
Essex	173,305 6.
Gloucester	4,088 23
Hudson	142,902 61
Hunterdon	1,491 91
Mercer	25,806 21
Middlesex	18,102 66
Monmouth	20,019 53
Morris	7,757 74
Ocean	2,777 16
Passaic	58,930 19
Salem	1,504 91
Somerset	5,244 36
Sussex	1,190 22
Union	43,666 85
Warren	4,156 46

Plainfield's share is roughly estimated at $8,733.37.

IN MISS BAILEY'S HONOR.

Enjoyable Affair at Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kesselring's Home.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kesselring, of Chatham street, entertained a gathering of friends at their home last night, the affair being in the nature of a surprise party to Miss Effie Bailey, of the same address. Vocal and instrumental music and dancing were features of an informal program, contributed by Miss Florence Williams, piano; Miss Kittie Laible, piano and violin; Miss Edith Glaentzer, Miss Effie Bailey, Tom Muir and Rudolph Taense, vocal selections and recitations. Supper was served during an intermission at midnight.

The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kelley, Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Glaentzer, Miss Florence Williams, Miss Kittie Laible, Miss Edith Glaentzer, Rudolph Toense and Tom Muir; Howard Bailey, of New York; George Meredith, of Newark, and Edward Temple, of Elizabeth.

Horse Frightened to Death.

A horse belonging to John H. Cose, of Spooner avenue, was literally frightened to death at South Plainfield yesterday. The animal was badly scared by the sudden approach of an automobile and started on a run for a block or more. It was finally quieted down by the owner and was just regaining its composure when another machine shot by and the second shock proved too much. The horse dropped dead in its tracks.

Violations of Ordinance.

Notice has been served on the Hotel Iroquois, Charles Vail, Dr. Leonard and the United Cigar Store that signs in front of their places of business project over the street line in violation of the city ordinances. The signs will be removed.

Borough's New Executive Makes Strong Argument Against Present Governmental Situation.

MAYOR OUTLINES HIS POLICIES.

Wants Sewerage System and Tells Why—Shows How Taxes Are Eaten Up by Somerset County.

Following is the first annual message of Mayor Samuel Townsend delivered to the North Plainfield Council last night:

"Gentlemen of the Council:

"To every citizen of the borough, as well as to you, the members of this Council, who, together with your Mayor, will be held responsible for the administration of affairs for the year just beginning, I want to state my views on some matters that are of interest to us all. And in discussing such matters I wish to say that it is the future with which we have to deal, and not with the past. I, therefore, ask that anything that I may say be considered only as it has a bearing on present or future conditions.

"As we take up the year's work, I wish to announce my policy on two subjects that seem to me to be important.

"First—I wish it understood that the good order that has heretofore been generally observed in the borough shall be maintained, that disorder will not be tolerated and that crime will be punished, whenever it appears.

"Second—I stand for economy in the expenditure of public moneys, believing that we should never lose sight of our duty in that having accepted a trust, we must exercise even greater care with the people's money than we would were it our own. In this connection, I think it fair to say that as far as I am able to judge of the work for the past year, that this has been the rule and that the Council of 1907 and the retiring Mayor have given good service to the borough.

"It is not my purpose at the present time to discuss the management of streets, police, fire or other departments. With these you are all more or less familiar, and it is better before making recommendatitons to study the workings of the various departments and be guided by experience rather than by impressions. There are, however, other matters of so great importance that their consideration should not be put off and of these I will speak.

Sewers.

"While the question of sewerage has been agitated for many years, we find ourselves still without such a system. In the meantime other communities have established such plants and have them now in successful operation. That we have suffered in growth because we have lacked this necessary improvement will hardly be questioned. It is impossible to estimate the financial loss to the borough from this cause. Many have moved away and many more have been influenced against locating here, because we have no sewerage system. It may be that the condition of our soil is of such a nature that the deposits in cesspools are absorbed without endangering health, but the stranger knows nothing of this and cannot be convinced of the safety of our present method.

"A commission composed of able men appointed by the former Mayor has given this subject most careful study and its recommendations are a matter of record.

"I think that this question should be taken up without delay, and if possible, settled; but before this can be done we must have the decision of the City of Plainfield in regard to a proposed arrangement for the disposal of our sewerage as recommended by our commission. There is also to be considered the question of taxation.

"In this connection the railroad tax law now being tested in the courts will have an important bearing. I am advised that a decision on this law may be expected within the next six weeks, which, if favorable, will add considerably to our borough school fund and should materially decrease the amount to be raised by special school tax. It is my intention, before the people will be asked

Mrs. Robert M. Wilkinson, of South Bound Brook, accompanied by her guest, Miss Alice Sheals, of New York, has been visiting friends in Philadelphia.

Mrs. Henry Weichner, of East Second street, Bound Brook, is spending several weeks with relatives in Brooklyn.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Tingley, of South Bound Brook, spent Wednesday with friends in Plainfield.

A son was recently born to Mr. and Mrs. William Byer, at their home in Main street, Bound Brook.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS.

Richard Morris, of Love lane, Millville, sustained a fractured shoulder blade in a runaway.

A pistol in the hand of William Andreas, Jr., of Millville, was accidentally discharged, and the bullet found lodgment in his arm.

In throwing a blazing gasoline stove from his home on Broad street, Millville, Charles Wilson was severely burned about the hands and face.

On Monday evening, January 6, the Modern Woodmen of America camps of Passaic County will celebrate the silver anniversary of the order with a large class initiation in Helvetia Hall, Paterson. Over 100 new candidates will be initiated.

Daniel Peoples, of Bristol, a trainman on the Pennsylvania Railroad, was knocked from a freight car near Trenton Thursday and fell down a forty-foot embankment. His right arm was badly mashed and may have to be amputated. Otherwise he was not seriously injured.

Falling from a ladder at the electric light station of the Public Service Corporation on Cooper's Creek, Camden, John Stevenson, of 2217 Carman street, had his arm caught on a hook, and hung suspended in the air for some time. A surgeon had to take twenty-four stitches in the wounds.

Shouting with delight as she watched the ames shoot high from a burning brush heap, Ethel Fithian, four-year-old daughter of Charles Fithian, of Elmer, got too near the fire and in an instant she was a sheet of ames. Nearly all her clothing was burned from her body, and her back badly blistered.

Of Paterson's total losses through lres during the year 1907 the insurance companies suffered to the extent of $132,275, while the losses on buildings insured and uninsured, amounted to $142,348. In these lres the companies risked property on which there was insurance to the total value on contents and buildings of $2,256,944.

As Mrs. Fannie Breken, of 312 Preakness avenue, Paterson, was crossing the Falls bridge yesterday afternoon, a boy approached from the rear, seized the woman's handbag and darted off. Two young men caught him. He was turned over to Detective-Sergeant Lord. At police headquarters he said he was John Warrie, sixteen years old, of Mill street.

AMUSEMENTS.

Next week's program at Proctor's Newark theatre is brimful of novelty and comedy. Among the better known acts are Gus Edwards' Blond Typewriters, a bevy of pretty young ladies who can both sing and dance in a manner that is both novel and entertaining. Batty's Bears, as their title signifies, are a troupe of performing bears, who go through all sorts of amazing feats. Ruth Allen, assisted by an excellent company, will produce a laughable one-act comedy entitled "We Need the Money," dealing with the many ways that an inventive young woman will resort to in order to corral the illusive coin of the realm. Cameron and Flanagan are two fively comedians in a two-act comedy descriptive of life behind the scenes entitled "On and Off." Miles' Stavordale Quintette, five well trained voices, will render excerpts from Grand Operas and popular music in a pleasing manner. Curtis and Palmer, in an up to date skit enlivened by spritely dancing and tuneful singing. McRea and Polle, the American Sharpshooters; Harry Breen, a new comer in these parts, will be heard in a monologue that is full of originality, laughter and humor. New animated pictures.

FIRST AID FOR CALLERS.

A Valuabe Time Saver for the Socially Active.

Women who make and receive many calls during the season and who have difficulty in remembering the dates of teas and receiving days have found a way to save themselves from overlooking the dates of social affairs and at home days. They have adopted a small box made with six partitions, one for each day of the week, and marked with the day. Into each compartment they slip visiting cards and invitations as they are received in chronological order.

Each morning they go through the cards and invitations in the day's compartment and decide on the houses they will visit and the ones they will be forced to send cards to. They can also take a peep at tomorrow's visiting list and arrange their plans ahead.

The visiting card box is much easier to get at than a book containing an alphabetical visiting list. You have the whole thing before you, and it is much simpier to slip the cards as received into their proper compartment than it is to copy down in an engagement book the date of the function and the name of the one giving it. All these little time savers are of great value to the woman whose days are taken up with social engagements.

New Dish Drainer.

A new dish drainer shaped like a trough is of galvanized wire that fits into an iron pan. The plates are put in this directly from the soap suds, the rinse water poured over and the plates allowed to dry without wiping.

—The regular meeting of the Union County Board of Freeholders will be held at Elizabeth, Thursday, January 9, when it is expected that J. L. Fink will be reappointed county road inspector. The matter was laid over from the New Year's day meeting because of the absence of Freeholder J. Hervey Doane.

HAND CULTURIST.

The Manicure Now Teaches How to Train the Hands.

"We are bothered," said a manicure, "teaching women how to have pretty hands. Once upon a time a manicure was a manicure and nothing more. Now she is a hand culturist. She must train the fingers as well as beautify them. And it is well worth while.

"The reason why hands are not attractive is that they are not clean. This is such a wild, terrible statement that I almost hesitate to utter it, yet true it is. The hands get terribly grimy in the course of an hour or two, and they need washing. But even soap and water do not clean them. They should be scrubbed with a very soft brush, dashed with very hot water, bleached with a tiny bit of a lime and rinsed in soft scented water. Then comes the wonderful massage with a speck of cold cream, after which the hands must be rubbed together until soft and warm. It takes fully five minutes each time, but it is well worth the while.

"The trouble with the hands is that they are not flexible at the wrist line. Most women never bend the wrists. They hold the hand stiffly, and the wrist becomes hard as to its sinews and very muscular. But it is never a graceful wrist, and it adds nothing to the hand's beauty.

"We Treat the wrist while we are treating the hands. And if the wrist has begun to look old we reclaim it. An old wrist is so very disagreeable with its network of veins and its many visible bones.

"We have certain exercises through which we put the wrists. They are very difficult for a beginner, but in a short time they become easy. Press your palms together and bend your wrists backward, first one and then the other. Work gently, for you do not want to make your wrist sore. You will doubtless find that your muscles have grown very stiff and that your wrists unless you want them to grow old.

"It seems strange that, even with these instructions, a woman must go to a hand culturist to have the work done. But the truth of the matter is that the amateur simply cannot work with sufficient caution. She goes at her skin as vigorously as though she were scrubbing the side of a house or the kitchen floor. And in a very short time she has actually injured the skin of her hands and arms."

Decline in Manners.

There is said to be a decline of manners in the present day, but it might be hard to equal the following instance of bygone courtesy quoted by a writer in an English magazine: "Lord and Lady Spencer request the honor of ——'s company at dinner at half after 6 o'clock on ——. An answer is particularly desired. Nobody waited for after 7 o'clock."

—J. W. Van Sickle, the North avenue butcher, who has been critically ill, shows signs of sight improvement.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

The attraction booked for presentation at the New Plainfield theatre this afternoon and tonight is Klaw & Erlanger's great big production of George V. Hobart's new musical novelty, "The Ham Tree," of which McIntyre and Heath, the widely known black face comedians, are the stars. This company opened at the New York theatre in New York in August, 1907, and made a run of several months to the largest receipts in the history of this great playhouse. Then followed long engagements in Philadelphia, Pittsburg and Chicago, where the New York success was emphatically repeated. Their current season also began at the New York theatre, where they repeated their success of two years ago. "The Ham Tree" is an elaboration of the famous sketch, "The Georgia Minstrels," which McIntyre and Heath have been presenting on the vaudeville stage for many years. The manuscript of this skit was placed in the hands of Mr. Hobart, who expended it into a three act musical play, telling an interesting story, interpolated with a large number of very attractive musical features and specialties.

New Way of Shirring.

Every seamstress knows how hard it is to make shirrings lie smooth and flat without taking time to "scratch" them into place. In shirring take up on the needle a little more of the goods than you leave between the stitches, so as to show the thread as little as possible. Press the thumb against the needle, moving it with each stitch, and fill the needle as full as possible before drawing the thread through. This gives every stitch the effect of a small plait, much the same as machine gathering. This method also gives little work in arranging the gathers. With a little practice the work will become mechanical, and you will be delighted with the neatness and rapidity of the work.

POINTS FOR THE BUYERS

When ordering your next lot of coal, try L. A. Rheume's coal. Offices on East Fourth street, yard on South Second street.

Ten Eyck & Harris, the coal dealers, would like to receive your patronage believing that the quality of anthracite sold by them will please you.

If you have not opened an account with the Plainfield Savings Bank yet, do so at once and get the benefit of the liberal interest paid on all deposits.

If you are troubled with your eyes stop at Charles E. Vail's jewelry store and let him test them. He can also fit them with suitable glasses at reasonable prices.

Dudley Miller, the Park avenue druggist, selsl just the thing to knock out that attack of grip. The preparation works promptly and does not cost a week's wages.

When in search of "something to give the bride" you can do no better than see the display of wedding gifts at Gavett's, on West Front street. Vases, lamps and chinaware, excellent workmanship and design, in great variety.

Begin the year by trading with S. Scheurer & Co., of West Front street, and you will always get the best groceries, fruits, vegetables and meats at lowest prices. The firm is constantly increasing its business simply because it deals fairly with everyone.

Start the New Year by making the house spick and span as new. This can be accomplished by re-papering and re-decoration. Call up Woolston & Buckle, the paperhangers, and get estimates. The low figures will surprise you and the workmanship is guaranteed first-class.

Miss Carrie J. Debele, of Philadelphia, returned home yesterday after spending New Year's with her brother, William G. Debele, of Somerset street.

You want THE CENTURY MAGAZINE IN 1908 You want

"The best has been none too good for this publication, which has been such an important factor in the cultural development of the American people in the past three decades and which promises to be an equally important factor in the future." —Boston Globe

¶ In the magazine world the one by which the rest are measured has always been and is today THE CENTURY.
¶ Ask writers where their best productions are first offered,
¶ Ask public men where articles carry the most weight,
¶ Ask the public what magazine is the choice among people of real influence,
¶ The answer is the same,

"In all the feverish desire of magazine makers to cater to the superficial taste, the makers of THE CENTURY have stood firmly by the ideal of the "best in literature, art, and thought"; and THE CENTURY MAGAZINE today is one of the finest monuments to their genius and one of the greatest forces in the literary life and culture of the nation." —Minneapolis Journal

THE CENTURY

The best of fiction, and of popular scientific articles, the most richly worth while biographical articles, the finest and best pictorial features, will be found in THE CENTURY during 1908. There will be "The Reminiscences of Lady Randolph Churchill," the story of the beautiful American girl who shared her brilliant husband's brilliant social and political successes during one of the most interesting periods of English history.

Prof. Percival Lowell will discuss "Mars as a Possible Abode of Life"—fascinating, authoritative papers, intended specially for unscientific readers. All Helen Keller's recent poetry and prose writings—by far her most remarkable work—will appear in THE CENTURY in 1908. And Dr. S. Weir Mitchell has written the fiction serial of the year, "The Red City," a delightful historical novel of Old Philadelphia, continuing his famous "Hugh Wynne."

No magazine today publishes such remarkable color pages as THE CENTURY; in no other magazine are to be found so many illustrations suitable for framing, and really worth while. For 1908 M. de Ivanowski is painting portraits of the most noted opera singers. There will be more of Cole's beautiful wood-engravings, description and illustration of new processes in photography, and scores of pages in color, tint, and photogravure.

Subscription Price $4.00 a year.

LIFE'S JOURNEY.

Is Burdensome to Many in Plainfield.

Life's journey is a heavy burden
With a constantly aching back,
With diabetes,
With any kidney ill.

Doan's Kidney Pills relieve and cure.

Here is Plainfield proof that this is so:

Mrs. O. C. Moore, of 63 Manning avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "My kidneys were diseased for years and I also had trouble with my heart. I have endured the severe torture of a backache that comes from diseased conditions of the kidneys and likewise those heavy dull aches in the head. Many nights I have been unable to rest at all, and when I awoke in the morning my limbs would be so stiff and sore that I would be obliged tto slide out of bed. When I caught cold it always settled on the kidneys and any little strain or overexertion that involved the muscles of my back would cause intense pain. I have doctored with physicians at Washington, D. C., and here at Plainfield, but none of their medicines ever did me the good that I got from Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Randolph's pharmacy. This remedy went right to the seat of the trouble, dispelled the pains and aches, corrected the kidney derangements and me me feel like a different person."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

EYE-STRAIN

is directly responsible for the majority of cases of blindness today. If instead of trying to overwork the eyes, one would at once get glasses at the first warning of eye-strain there would be fewer cases of blindness at the present time.

For an Aching Tooth.

Most mothers know what it is to have a child screaming with toothache. The next time your ears are so tortured try putting a little baking soda in the cavity, if there is one. The mouth should first have been rinsed with hot water.

Even simpler and almost certain to give relief is hot witch hazel, used to rinse the mouth. Repeat every little while until the pain is eased.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

BASEBALL.

When the National Baseball Commission holds its annual meeting in Cincinnati Monday Ban Johnson, a member, says that John T. Brush, president of the New York National League Club, will be asked to explain why he has not paid the $1,000 fine inflicted by the commission some time ago, at the request of the New Orleans Club because of the forfeiture of several games there last spring by McGraw's men who, it will be recalled, refused to play out the series with the Philadelphia Americans, alleging that Umpire Zimmer was unfair. "It is up to Brush to make good the fine," says Johnson, "and the commission will endeavor to find out why the amount was not paid long ago." Brush declared when the fine was inflicted that the commission had no jurisdiction in the matter and that he would not pay pending a reopening of the case.

There seems to be no end to the troubles of Garry Herrmann from a baseball point of view. While Garry is still trying to select a manager for the Cincinnati Reds, the announcement has just been made that there will be a determined fight made in Ohio this year and before the Legislature to put a stop to all sports on Sunday, especially baseball. If Sunday games are stopped in Porktown it will mean a serious loss to not only Herrmann's club, but also all of the other clubs in the National League. Herrmann has already lost $100,000 in his baseball ventures, and just at present there seems to be little chance for him to get out of the hole.

The recently organized Union League has framed a player's contract that is unusual. The reserve rule has been entirely eliminated and a clause has been inserted to the effect that 25 per cent. of the player's salary is to be withheld each pay day and deposited in the bank in trust until the close of the season, when it will be delivered to the player on condition that he has not played with any other club but the one employing him in the Union League during the year. The clause is a means of preventing contract jumping during the playing season. So far the Union League has signed just one player, A. S. Landgraff, who will play third base for Reading. President Al Lawson says that a number of dissatisfied major league players will be in line before long.

Tommy Corcoran, once the star shortstop of the Brooklyn and Cincinnati clubs, who was released by McGraw last spring after an unsatisfactory trial at second base, will manage the Uniontown club in the P. O. M. League this year, which is something of a drop from major league company.

FOOTBALL.

There is a strong probability that the Army-Navy football game will be played a week earlier than usual this year, and thus conflict with the Yale-Harvard game at New Haven. West Point has opened negotiations with Annapolis to this end, offering two good reasons for the change.

The first has to do with the game as now being played too close to an examination period at West Point; the second, with the weather. The Army men contend that Annapolis has a distinct advantage in the latter respect on account of being so far South. It is pointed out that snow and frozen ground made it impossible for the West Point players to get out in the field more than once in the last ten days before the game last fall, and the same handicap has been experienced in other years. This was partly responsible, it is thought, for the Army's poor showing.

The Navy's chief objection to an earlier date lies in the fact that the annual cruise is not over until the middle of September, and consequently the Army team can begin work much earlier. To meet this, West Point will agree to delay practice to a date when Annapolis can start in to build up a team.

GOLF.

A helping hand will be extended to the New Haven Country Club in its aspirations for affiliation by the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association. The men's league, the Metropolitan Golf Association, refused the request for followship at the annual meeting, but the feminine golfers will change their by-laws to read:

"The membership of this association shall be limited to the associate and allied clubs of the U. S. G. A. within sixty miles of New York. Also those in New Haven, Conn., and all points in New England lying south and west of New Haven and between it and New York, and the whole of Long Island."

The annual meeting will be on January 30. Mrs. C. L. Tiffany has been nominated as president, in place of Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers; Mrs. E. F. Sanford as vice president, Miss Marie L. Harrison as secretary and Mrs. W. Fellowes Morgan for the committee. No nomination has been made for treasurer as yet.

GOVERNORS IN THE SENATE

Washington, Jan. 4.—A curious feature of the personnel of the Senate, particularly on the Democratic side, is the number of Senators who were Governors of their States before entering the upper chamber of Congress. There are no less than thirteen Democratic Senators who are ex-Governors, while if the list were increased to include those who have tried to be Governors and failed, it would show a majority of all the Democrats of the Senate.

Beginning with Maryland, as the most northern of the Eastern Democratic States, there is Senator William Pynkney Whyte, who was Governor thirty-five years ago. Then going South and skipping Virginia and North Carolina, one comes to Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, who was as picturesque and forceful as Governor of that State in the early 90's as he is now as a Senator. None of the Senator from Georgia or Florida has ever occupied a Governor's chair, but Senator Bacon, of Georgia, came as close as a man could without actually achieving the honor. In the Democratic State convention of 1883 he came within one vote of securing the nomination, and in Georgia the Democratic nomination is equivalent to election.

From Alabama there has just come Senator Johnston, who was a captain in the Confederate army and was elected Governor of Alabama in 1896 and 1898. Senator Johnston, by the way, is one of the most promising of the new crop of Senators, some of whom do not at all measure up to the standard. At the recent gridiron dinner he made one of the brightest speeches, in fact the honors fell pretty largely to Johnson, of Minnesota, and Johnston, of Alabama. Senator Anselem Joseph McLaurin, of Mississippi, was Governor of that State for four years from 1895. But Louisiana goes Alabama one better, for both of her veteran Senators, McEnery and Foster, were Governors in their day. Senator Culberson, the Democratic leader, was at one time Governor of Texas, and so good a Governor that the prizefighters who thought they owned the State will never forget him. Jeff Davis, the new Senator from Arkansas, was three times elected Governor of that misguided State, while Senator Clarke had one term as Governor several years earlier. Senator W. J. Stone, of Missouri, was also once a Governor. Both Senator "Fiddling Bob" Taylor and Senator Frazier were Governors of Tennessee, and Senator McCreary was once Governor of Kentucky.

The list of Republican Governors in the Senate would not be proportionally as long, although New England would make a good start with Senator Crane, Senator Proctor, Senator Dillingham, Senator Bulkley and Senator Wetmore (when re-elected). But in the matter of ex-cabinet officers the Republican Senators naturally lead. The onlq Democratic Senator who was once in the cabinet is Senator Teller, of Colorado, and that was in 1885 when he was a Republican, and was made Secretary of the Interior by President Arthur. On the Republican side both Elkins and Proctor were secretaries of war, and Knox was Attorney-General.

TRIES TO BREAK INTO MAYOR STEIL'S OFFICE.

It was probably well for Mayor George H. Steil, of Hoboken, that he was late yesterday in reaching his office, for it prevented a demented man from seeing him and possibly doing him serious injury.

Soon after nine o'clock William Carmody, whose antics in the past have taken him to a police station, entered the office of the City Clerk. The entrance to the Mayor's office is through two doors opening from the City Clerk's office.

One of these doors is at the end of the passageway and the other in the office proper. Carmody went to the door at the end of the passageway and tried it. He found it locked and tried to force it, but the lock resisted his efforts.

James Havron and William Fitzpatrick, who are clerks, demanded what he wanted and he replied: "I want the Mayor."

Just at that instant Carmody noticed that the door admitting persons to the clerk's office was open, and he darted through it and ran to the private door of Mayor Steil's office. This was locked and resisted Carmody's efforts to burst it open.

Finding he could not open the door Carmody, when ordered from the office by Clerk Havron, went out. Ten minutes later he returned and, jumping over a desk, forced his way through the wire screen that acted as a partition and got into the City Clerk's office. He made another attempt to force the door of the Executive's chamber, but failed.

He left the room and went to the office of Poor Master Harry L. Barck and demanded of him the keys to the Mayor's office. Mr. Barck called a policeman and Carmody was locked up. He refused to say what he wanted of the Mayor and was much enraged when he found himself arrested.

CONSOLIDATION.

Following the action of Mayor Charles J. Fisk, who urged that the proposed union be brought about at an early date, Mayor Samuel Townsend in his first annual message to the North Plainfield Council clinches his argument for a consolidation of the borough with the city by facts and figures that show conclusively why it is for the best interest of the borough taxpayers to sanction the plan. Incidently he makes a strong arraignment of Somerset county for its unfair attitude towards the borough, which is its chief source of revenue. Residents of the city as well as those of the borough will be well repaid by carefully persuing the message.

had a twin-brother who had been taken for him. He described his frequent visits to the boarding-house, but it was always for the purpose of seeing Miss Perkins and not her aunt. He would not marry the aunt, he said, but he admired a woman that was like a sunflower, that shuts up at night. His affinity, Miss Perkins, in the person of Mrs. H. W. Marshall, was called and substantiated his testimony.

The last witness called was Henry Woodland.

Judge Runyon's charge was very effective and full of humor. He cautioned the jury to stick to the court for they could not tell how soon they might be a defendant there. The jury then retired. A few minutes later word came from the anteroom that a corkscrew was wanted, and presently the jurors returned all giving evidence that they had had something to drink, everyone drying his lips with a handkerchief. Foreman Fisk promptly announced that the defendant had been found guilty and that $3 had been awarded to the jury and 48 cents to the judge.

DEATH FINDS AGED COUPLE.

Alexander Brokaw and His Wife, of Somerville, Die Within a Day.

Alexander Brokaw and his wife, Mrs. Margaret A. Brokaw, both well known residents of Somerville, died within a day of each other at the home of their son, Jerome W. Brokaw. Mrs. Brokaw's death came first, on Wednesday, and that of her husband followed Thursday, both being due to pneumonia.

Mr. Brokaw about three weeks ago sold his farm, about a mile from Somerville, to William Bradley, the purchaser of Ardmaer. He was eighty years old, but remarkably active and well preserved. Until a few years ago he had always taken an active part in politics in Somerset county and had many times served as a member of the Bridgewater Township Committee. Mrs. Brokaw was seventy-five years old. A double funeral will take place this afternoon.

CLERGYMAN IS BANKRUPT.

The Rev. W. G. Moyers Liabilities $10,000, Partly on Notes.

Word has been received at Mount Holly that the Rev. William G. Moyer, recently of the New Jersey Methodist Conference and formerly pastor of the Mount Holly Methodist church, has filed a petition in bankruptcy at Emmetsburg, Iowa. His liabilities are placed at more than $10,000, with assets of little or no value.

Mr. Moyer has creditors in Mount Holly for more than $3,000 for signed notes to assist the minister. The Iowa Conference has refused to accept his parchment and he is to be placed on trial.

In the autumn of 1905 Mr. Moyer married Miss Mary Crammer, of Mount Holly, and immediately left for the West. Several widows will lose by his transactions.

TOWNSEND'S FIRST MESSAGE

to vote on this proposition, to submit a statement, showing what our expenses are likely to be, both with and without sewers, to the end that any action taken will be with all the facts before us.

Taxation.

"In taking up this question, I will, in order that you may understand the situation, give some figures showing just what we raised by taxation for borough purposes and also for the county in 1907.

"Amount raised for borough purposes, $25,800. The tax rate was 70 cents on the $100 valuation.

"Amount raised in borough for county was $20,264. The tax rate was 66 cents on the $100 valuation.

"Please note that the county tax rate was only four points less than our borough rate, and that we paid over to the county within five thousand dollars of what we raised to meet the entire cost of our borough government. To properly appreciate what this means take the borough report showing where our money went, and compare the results produced with what you know of improvements made here by the county.

"In order to ascertain why the county tax rate is so high it is interesting to note how these matters are handled in the county outside of the borough, by a study of the ratables for 1906 and 1907 as follows:

"Somerset county, not including borough—1906, $19,563,943; 1907, $19,780,681; increase of 1907 over 1906, $216,738, or about one per cent.

"Borough of North Plainfield—1906, $2,983,150; 1907, $3,148,700; increase of 1907 over 1906, $165,550, or about five and one-half per cent.

"These figures prove that while our valuations show a fair increase, the rest of the county have held theirs down nearly to what they were in 1906 and this explains why we have such a high county tax rate, and why we pay such an unfair proportion of county expenses. It is nothing new, this indiscrimination against the borough, but the State law that compels the lowering of the tax rate where it is above the limit will affect other sections of the county only to a slight degree, while with us it is likely to add still more to the already excessive amount we pay over to the county, unless we are able in some way to obtain relief.

"There is one fact that I wish to make clear, and that is, that the increase in taxes that we may be compelled to pay through increased valuation will not be for borough purposes but will go almost entirely to the county.

"The State school tax while collected and turned over to the State, is in effect, a borough tax as it is apportioned back to us to an amount based on school attendance, which amount, in our case, always exceeds considerably what we pay out.

"It requires no argument to show that if we raise for borough purposes $25,000, it makes no difference whether it is raised by a high tax rate on a low valuation, or a low tax rate on a high valuation, the amount paid by the tax payer is just the same.

"If, however, we raise our valuations in order to bring our tax rate down, and the balance of the county continue their valuations practically as they have been or with very slight increase it means that we will bear a still greater proportion of the burden. Our citizens do not begrudge what they pay where some return is given for it. They know that it costs to provide free schools and to pay the expenses of our borough government but they enjoy the benefits, and have on every hand the evidence of what has been done with their money. They do, however, object when they see it going to the county and getting no return, that is in any way proportionate to what is contributed.

"The County of Union has made a large increase in their valuations, but the increase has been fairly apportioned all over the county, and not in one section at the expense of another, consequently, their tax rate has come down and everyone has had the benefit.

"The general condition of borough affairs seems to be in good shape. We have everything excepting sewers that any similar community enjoys. Our yearly expenses are not heavy, and are met without difficulty but the county situation is not good, and we should not submit to increasing burdens without protest.

"I have tried to make clear the situation as it appears to me, realizing that with us rests the responsibility of so shaping our affairs that we do not violate the laws of the State. It therefore becomes a question as to what can be done, and our duty to those who have placed us here.

"As I view it, there are two measures of relief. One would be to insist upon the valuations being raised in the balance of the county in proportion to what ours must be, exhausting every means in our power to bring this about. It may be difficult to obtain justice, but we must insist upon it, appealing if necessary to the State. The other way would be to become a part of Union county and consolidating with Plainfield, of which I will speak in closing.

Annexation and Consolidation.

"A commission appointed by the governing bodies of Plainfield and the borough have made a thorough investigation into the merits of the proposed consolidation of city and borough, and unanimously reported in its favor, provided that both places could be brought under one county government. It is not necessary to refer to the many reasons in its favor given in the report, they were strong and convincing.

"To put in effect their recommendations the first step is to prepare a bill to be submitted to the Legislature, providing for such a union. I am informed that the Consolidation Commission will have prepared such a measure and, if possible, have it ready for presentation when the Legislature meets. The proposition of annextion to Union county was before the people of the borough some years ago, and at an election then held was defeated. No matter what views were held at that time, I think that every fair minded citizen will concede that the situation now demands a change. The law compelling us to lower our tax rate was not then in operation, and the county expenses were not so great. The law governing tax rates passed in 1906, the effect of which will be to make us pay in the future an even larger proportion for county expenses, would seem to be convincing to all thoughtful citizens that the time has come for a union of borough and city. Every consideration of the welfare of this community demands it. It would give us sewers, and at less cost than if we acted independently. It would build up sections of the borough that are now vacant lots. It would put us in a county where we would pay only our fair proportion of taxes. No political considerations, or the selfish interests of individuals should be allowed to stand in the way.

"The interests of the many are greater than those of the few. If the people will become aggressively, active, and work earnestly for it, consolidation and annexation can surely be brought about. If we are satisfied, as I feel we are, that the great majoritty of our voters desire it, we are justified in doing what we can to further this work, and in no way do I believe we can better serve them, than by actively promoting consolidation."

Louis Van Nest Injured.

Louis Van Nest, of Watchung avenue, a carpenter employed in erecting a house for L. E. Hart on East Second street, opposite McKinley place, fell off a ladder yesterday afternoon, a distance of eight feet and received painful injuries. He was able to go home, where Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan is now attending him. No bones were broken.

HUDSON REPUBLICANS DON'T WANT HARMONY

Republican politicians in Hudson county are anxiously awaiting the outcome of the harmony meeting which has been called, with the approval of Governor-elect J. Franklin Fort, for this afternoon at the Union League Club, in Jersey City. Whether anything will be accomplished at this meeting remains to be seen, for the temper of the average Republican in Hudson county is such that he would rather fight than harmonize just now. With County Clerk John Rotherham and Sheriff John C. Kaiser locking horns in a contest for the chairmanship of the County Committee there are many Republicans who would prefer to have the battle continue, at least until the annual meeting next Friday, in order that the rival forces might line up and their actual strength become known. While it is by no means certain that this will not be the result of the scrap every effort is being made by Governor-elect Fort to prevent it.

The leaders of the Fagan movement in Jersey City met yesterday in the office of Corporation Counsel George L. Record and discussed what should be done by them in relation to the invitation to attend the conference at the Union League Club this afternoon. There were present George L. Record, Mark M. Fagan, James W. McCarthy, Edgar Bacon, Forrest Heath, Edward Fry, Robert Carey, Andrew Knox and John H. Weastell. It was decided that the first condition upon which they would insist before entering negotiations for harmony would be the elimination of Colonel S. D. Dickinson and Sheriff Kaiser. Any harmony plan that included Dickinson and Kaiser would not be listened to.

While no definite action was taken at the conference regarding other propositions, it was suggested that one way to obtain harmony would be for the County Committee to increase its membership to a number sufficiently large to take in the members of the Fagan Central Committee. This accomplished, the annual election could be postponed and a neutral man elected chairman. It was decided to hold another conference this morning to map out a definite plan of action for the session this afternoon.

County Clerk John Rotherham is not altogether pleased over the present turn of affairs. He was not invited to the conference with Governor-elect Fort, Thursday, when the present harmony plan was worked out, and his followers, after learning of this conference, charged that the Fagan adherents had joined hands with the Dickinson forces to defeat Rotherham for chairman of the County Committee. This is denied by the Fagan men, and they say they are as much opposed to Colonel Dickinson as ever. They are willing to consider harmony with Rotherham as an active participant, they say, but they will have absolutely nothing to do with Colonel Dickinson and his close advisers, Sheriff Kaiser, Under Sheriff John J. Erwin and others.

The key of the situation, however, is held by Governor-elect Fort, and the politicians who have been making a study of the situation in Hudson county predict that he will bring order out of chaos and that the present harmony plan will go through. It is predicted that Rotherham will fall in line with the suggestions of the Governor-elect and that when Hudson county goes down to Trenton to attend his inauguration it will be as a united body.

RE-ELECT JUDGE FORT.

At the annual meeting of the New Jersey Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, in Newark yesterday, Governor-elect J. Franklin Fort was for the third time unanimously chosen president of the organization. In replying to the expressed wish, of the society for a happy and successful administration during his term as Governor of New Jersey, Mr. Fort said:

"I love New Jersey. Every breath of my successors for two generations was drawn in this State. I stand for everything for the building up of the State and for the betterment of the people. No one can help me better than you can in my administration, and I want to rely on the members of this society to help and advise me in my coming work."

After the luncheon an afternoon reception was given to Governor-elect Fort, which was attended by many lawyers, ministers and Board of Trade members, besides the members of the society. Several addresses were made.

The other officers elected are: First vice-president, Judge Edward S. Atwater, of Elizabeth; second vice-president, Andrew W. Bray, of Orange; secretary, Colonel James M. Mulliken, of Newark; treasurer, Captain Oscar H. Condit, of East Orange, and registrar, John J. Hubbell, of Newark. A board of managers was also chosen.

The following were elected delegates to the national congress in Buffalo, to be held in May: George R. Howe, of East Orange; Mr. Hubbell, of Newark; Charles F. Axtell, of Morristown; Mr. Bray, of Orange; Geo. T. Parrott, of Elizabeth; Mr. Condit, of East Orange, and Colonel Mulliken, of Newark.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Mayor Swackhammer's first regular council meeting will be held in the borough building Monday night. At this time, the Mayor is planning to present a message and will outline his plans for the coming year. Because of the resignation of H. L. Hathaway, who was appointed borough recorder at the organization meeting of the Council on New Year's Day, it will be necessary for the Mayor to make another appointment. Hathaway was appointed to succeed David Campbell, who has been the borough recorder for many years. There is a rumor current that Mr. Swackhammer is to again propose the name of Mr. Campbell, an appointment which would undoubtedly be ratified by the Council.

Beginning tomorrow morning, a week of prayer will be conducted in the Presbyterian church and there will be special services at the church each day next week except Saturday. Rev. W. W. Casselberry, pastor of the church, has arranged to have special speakers at certain of the services and will himself speak on topics of unusual interest at the various services. His topic tomorrow will be "The Promises of God," and in the evening he will speak on "The Best New Year's Resolution." Arrangements have been completed to have special music at most of the services.

Mrs. P. W. Brakeley and son, Russell Brakeley, are visiting friends in Brooklyn. The lad is improving after a recent accident in which he broke a bone in his wrist by tumbling down stairs. He still carried his arm in a sling, but the bone is knitting nicely.

Rev. E. B. Saunders, of Ashaway, R. I., preached at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, New Market, this morning, in place of the regular pastor, Rev. Henry N. Jordan.

The regular meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the New Market Baptist church was held yesterday afternoon in the lecture room of the church.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvah Porter and Gilbert Yawger, of Somerville, have returned home after a visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Coriell, Jr.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

A number of Frank Hand's friends tendered him a surprise party at his home on Park avenue last night. The hours being 8 to 11. Games and music were enjoyed, after which refreshments were served. The evening was one which will remain a pleasant memory to both Frank and his guests.

Services tomorrow at the Baptist church will be held at the usual hours, morning, preaching at 10:45. At the close of the sermon the monthly communion will be held. B. Y. P. U. meeting 7:15 p. m.; evening sermon 8 o'clock.

Fanwood Township Committee met last night and organized for the year. Ira G. Walker was chosen chairman and W. S. Terry treasurer. Several of the newly-elected officers were sworn in. W. S. Coddington was reappointed township counsel.

Charles Frentz, who is superintending a large contract at Montclair, N. J., has been spending several days with his wife and son who are visiting relatives and friends in town for several weeks.

Emil Jahn, who has been spending his holiday vacation with his mother, Mrs. Robert Jahn, has returned to his studies at Syracuse University.

Charles Hingler has removed from Plainfield to L. Hollingsworth's house, corner of Park avenue and Valley road.

DO BETTER, NOW, MY CHILD.

He came to my desk with trembling lip.
The lesson was done.
"Dear teacher, I want a new leaf," he said,
"I have spoiled this one."
I took the old leaf, stained and blotted,
And gave him a new one, all unspotted,
And into his sad eyes smiled.
"Do better, now, my child."

I came to the throne with trembling heart,
The old year was done.
"Dear Master, I want a new leaf," I said,
"I have spoiled this one."
He took the old year, stained and blotted,
And gave me a new one, all unspotted,
And into my sad heart smiled.
"Do better, now, my child."

What's In Success.

Success Magazine for January contains a number of important articles. Through Robert D. Heinl, Thomas A. Edison describes his newest invention, the concrete house. Frederick Upham Adams begins his series, "The Romance of Tammany Hall." Samuel Merwin describes the efforts of the Chinese to throw off the opium curse, and Frank Fayant lays bare Thomas W. Lawson's record as a prophet. "Preventing the Next Panic," by David Graham Evans, advocates government guarantee of National Bank deposits. In the line of fiction are: "To Kill the President," by E. Spence De Pue; "Paulin's Little Brother," by Aldis Dunbar, and "Lentala," by W. C. Morrow. A new department is "Edwin Markham's Eyrie," editorials by the well-known poet upon current topics. The editor announces that Mr. Markham may write as he pleases and on any topic regardless of the editorial policy of the magazine. This is certainly a novel arrangement. The cover design is by J. C. Leyendecker.

A Magazine of Quality.

So many fine stories are being published in these days of keen editorial competition and high prices, that one must be of exceptional merit to stand out above its fellows and attract the undivided attention of the reading public. Such a story, however, is "The Duchess of Dreams," Edith Macvane's latest novel, which is published complete in the January Lippincott's. Miss Macvane has at least temporarily abandoned la belle France as the locale of her stories, for the scenes of her new one are laid in America, at Newport, that resort favored of moneyed folk, who there enjoy life which is not exactly of the simplet variety, in "cottages" costing several million apiece.

A Notable Number.

The Woman's Home Companion for January begins well with a handsome and showy cover design by James Montgomery Flagg. It is a notable number from the standpoint of illustrations. In addition to Flagg's striking cover design, there is a full-page reproduction of W. Balfour Ker's painting, "Forgotten." It represents a winter farm scene, the house and barn in the distance, and the old family horse standing drearily by the pasture bars, ankle deep in the falling snow—forgotten. Dr. Hale's Monthly Talk is on the subject of "New Year's Wishes."

Some Good Things.

Everybody's for January sets a pace for the new year that will be hard to beat. Foremost in importance is the inside story of the recent panic—"The Game Got Them"—by Edwin Lefevre, the Wall street expert. William Hard takes up the question of "De Kid Wot Works at Night," and writes of the newsboy, the messenger boy, and the street gamin, and the problem they present collectively and individually to themselves and to society. "The Romance of the Reaper" is continued by Herbert N. Casson, who tells of the introduction of the harvester, and of the war of the reaper kings and the effect of their rivalry upon American industry.

American Finance.

The series "American Finance" begins in the January number of the Metropolitan Magazine with a complete article on the October panic, its causes and the inferences, by John Paul Ryan. This article goes behind the scenes of the great panic and for the first time opens the doors of the secret conferences where the great financiers of the United States planned to carry the country through the crisis. In "When We Shall Have Wings" Camille Flammarion, the famous French scientist, discusses the development of the flying-machine and its effect on civilization. Charles Livingston Bull tells the first of his "Stories of the Fur Bearers," writing charmingly of the life of the ermine.

The Society Magazine.

The Smart Set begins the year 1908 most auspiciously. Its contributors number many of the most notable living writers. The novelette is from the pen of that always delightful author, Anne Warner. It is entitled "Wanted—An Original Gentleman," and concerns the whimsical adventures of a young man who believes himself stranded in Europe and answers a curious advertisement. The story, in itself a charming one, is illuminated by many clever human touches, which cannot fail to divert every reader. Vance Thompson, one of the most finished writers of the day, has never written a better piece of work than his brief sketch, "The Mona Lisa." It is as powerful as anything from the great French masters, and it will be remembered and talked about.

Formidable Head Breakers.

The Canaques of New Guinea prefer for defense clubs made of hard wood, highly polished and ending in curious or artistic forms. Sometimes these bludgeons are made of stone strengthened with wood in an ingenious way. A hole is drilled in the stone shaft, and through it is pushed a small branch of a growing banyan tree. In a year or two this branch is cut off. By this time the wood has grown until it is a tight fit for its stone case, and the club has become a formidable head breaker.—Pearson's Weekly.

READ THE WRITERS OF TO-DAY.

American Intellectual Life Shaped by Living Authors.

The journeymen writers write almost all that almost all Americans read, says Walter Page in the Atlantic. This is a fact that we love to fool ourselves about. We talk about "literature" and we talk about "hack writers," implying that the reading we do is of literature. The truth all the while is, we read little else than the writing of the hacks—living hacks, that is, men and women that write for pay. We may hug the notion that our life and thought are not really affected by current literature, that we read the living writers only for utilitarian reasons and that our real intellectual life is fed by the great dead writers. But our hugging this delusion does not change the fact that the intellectual life even of most educated persons, and certainly of the mass of the population, is fed chiefly by the writers of our own time. Let us hope that the great writers of the past do set the standards whereby a few judge the writing of the present. But, even if this be true, it is still true also that the intellectual life of the American people is chiefly shaped by current writing.

SHOWED THE PATH OF DUTY.

Timely Advice That Shaped the Destinies of Great Men.

At a critical time in the life of John Wesley, when, to save his soul, he was about to retire into a remote privacy and give himself up to prayer and self-discipline, an unknown adviser, a "serious man," gave him back to England and humanity by saying to him: "Sir, you wish to serve God and go to Heaven. Remember, you can not serve Him alone. You must find companions or make them. The Bible knows nothing of a solitary religion." A few words spoken by a servant maid to Charles Wesley led him to step, before his long-struggling brother, into life and liberty of soul. And when Whitefield was setting out for America some wise friend said to him: "If you have a mind to convert Indians, there are colliers enough in Kingswood." He went to the Kingswood colliers, and in his so doing the great evangelical revival in England was begun.

Women as Story-Makers.

Women write with color and spirit; an unexpected number of them are showing genuine humor. A few have brute force, as well. Women novelists have the sense, too, of situation; they construct plots that are intricate and then carry them through with dash. They manufacture good dialogue, and they know human nature under all aspects save one. The woman who knows man is yet to come. She can handle him domestically, perhaps, though there is often more of masculine objection to a fuss than great feminine diplomacy in his concessions. But she cannot maneuver him in a book. Man, though, has plummeted woman's heart and charted it better than she could do herself. Until she can do as much for him, he has no fear of being entirely ousted from the field of fiction.—Cleveland Leader.

Through Purifying Process.

A business man who had purchased a Salvation Army paper from one of the blue-bonneted peddlers, handed her a five-dollar bill which he asked her to turn into the treasury with his compliments. As she thanked him, he said: "How do you know how I made that money? Perhaps it is tainted." She looked at the money for a moment, and then folded it up and put it in her purse, as she answered: "No money can be so bad that it cannot be fumigated in passing through our treasury. In this gift, sir, you have done good for yourself, good for the army, and good for some poor sinner who needs aid. How can money be tainted that does so much?"

The Family's Night Out.

In one large family a pegboard on which the members can record their outgoing and incomings at night is a valuable article. It is a board with holes in it like a cribbage board, arranged in two vertical columns. Each column has as many holes as there are persons in the family, with the names in between. When "George" goes out he puts his peg in the "out" column and when he comes in he puts it back in the "in." The last one who puts the last "in" for the night has to lock the door and make things secure for the night.

Living Books.

Aprina Indian library is an interesting one. An Arizona judge, who has been studying this tribe, says that they select several promising youths of their tribe from time to time for living libraries of their traditions, and they are carefully instructed in the historical legends pertaining to their tribe, being required to commit them faithfully to memory. They in turn instruct their successors, and thus preserve the traditions in the exact language recited by their ancestors of many years ago.

More Practical.

"Did you hear that the professor had succeeded in squaring the circle?" "No, I didn't; but if he would figure a while longer and tell a man how to square his wife when he comes home at two a. m. I think he would have a more appreciative audience."—Nashville American.

FREAK PLAYS IN ROYAL GAME.

Records on Golf Grounds Very Much Out of the Ordinary.

On one occasion a player handicapped himself to the extent of playing all his shots with one leg held up, and the only crumb of satisfaction that some people can get out of the story is that the man missed nearly every shot and lost his wager. Also, who has not heard of men trying to play with one eye covered up, others who have had but one club against the full set used by their opponents, and others who have agreed to put with nothing but their umbrellas? On one occasion a golfer played a round with a champagne bottle against a man who had all his clubs, and it is a sad thing to know that it is on record that the man with the champagne bottle won! There are said to be various Scots who have driven balls off the face of expensive watches without at the same time driving the faces off the watches, and an American variation of this form of golf freakishness, as practiced with much success on one occasion, was to drive a ball off the top of a hen's egg, which had been dented at one end to make it hold the ball, but not otherwise damaged.

CALLED FOR SLIGHT SEVERITY.

Indian Viceroy Departed from His Policy of Kindness.

Lord Lawrence, one of the famous viceroys of India, was an able and very simple man. He used to do his work in his shirt sleeves, and discouraged as much as possible all state and ceremony. He was inclined to treat the natives like children, although he always strenuously insisted upon their meriting and receiving justice and kindness. Lord Mayo went to India to succeed him, and on the last afternoon before Lord Lawrence was to leave for home he took the incoming viceroy for a drive. On the way he impressed his doctrine of kindness very emphatically and solemnly on his successor. Lord Mayo thanked him for his helpful advice, and they returned in due course to the government house. The syce or footman, was slow and awkward in opening the door of the carriage, whereupon Lord Lawrence jumped out in temper and gave his ear an unmistakable tug. Lord Mayo turned to the viceroy's aid with a smile. "My first practical lesson in kindness to natives undoubtedly is an odd one," he whispered.

Effect of Relaxation.

Dr. Long Mayhelive Young of Chicago does not agree with us, that sleeping on the front is good, says the New York Press. But he seems to be in his own mind an expert on relaxation. "In my opinion," he says, "the want of relaxation is the principal cause of insomnia. To produce relaxation we must first equalize the circulation of the blood. This is very often accomplished by sleeping with the knees up, which throws the blood into the lumbar region. The position is rather tiresome (I should say so!) and on stretching out the legs equalization and therefore relaxation takes place. For insomnia supervening upon nervousness I would advise taking some good, long breaths. When due to want of control of the thinking apparatus eat three or four ginger snaps (ten cents a pound), which will warm up the stomach and transfer the nervous energy to the solar plexus, or stomach brain."

Nurses Dread Lightning.

Of all people who are glad when the season of thunderstorms is past, none are more thankful than professional nurses. "It isn't that we are so afraid of lightning ourselves," said a hospital nurse, "but it has a harmful effect on our patients. Most sick people have an unreasoning fear of lightning. In cases of extreme weakness or nervousness a dozen flashes of blinding lightning reduces the patient to such a state of prostration that it takes extraordinary efforts on the part of the nurse to bring him around. If one sick person requires all that extra attention in a thunderstorm, just imagine the predicament of the nurse who has a whole ward full of them on her hands."

German Exactitude.

The widow of a German officer presented herself at the office in Berlin for the purpose of drawing the pension due her. She handed in the necessary certificate from the mayor of the village in which she lived to the effect that she was still alive. "This certificate is not correct," said the officer in charge. "What is the matter with it?" asked the lady. "It bears the date of September 21," was the stern reply, "and your pension was due on September 15." "What kind of a certificate do you wish?" asked the disappointed applicant. "We must have a certificate stating that you were alive on September 15," said the officer with great firmness.

The Reason.

"There goes a man who doesn't get credit at any business establishment in town." "Who? Old Mr. Worthy? Why, I thought he was one of the most reliable men in the city. Why doesn't he get credit?" "Because he always pays cash."

One of the Tests.

"So your daughter made a brilliant marriage?" "Not very," answered Mr. Cumrox. "Your son-in-law is of noble origin?" "Yes. But I could pronounce his name properly the first time I tried."

CHAPTER TWO

A HOUSE of native stone built into and among weather scarred rocks, one massive wing butting seaward, others nosing north and south among cedars and outcropping ledges, the [illegible] gray mass of masonry reddening under a westering sun, every dormer leaded diamond pane aflame—this was Shotover as Siward first beheld it.

As the phaeton drew up under a pillared porte cochere one or two servants appeared. A rather imposing specimen bowed them through the doors into the hall, where in a wide chimney place the embers of a drift wood fire glimmered like a heap of dusty jewels. Bars of sunlight slanted on wall and rugs on stone floor and carved staircase, on the bronze foliations of the railed gallery above, where, in the golden gloom through a high window, sun tipped treetops against a sky of azure stirred like burnished foliage in a tapestry.

"There is nobody here, of course," observed Miss Landis to Siward as they halted in front of the fireplace. "The season opens today in this county, you see"—she shrugged her pretty shoulders—"and the women who don't shoot make the first field luncheon a function."

She turned, nodded her adieus, then, over her shoulder casually, "If you haven't an appointment with the sandman before dinner you may find me in the gunroom."

"I'll be there in about three minutes," he said. "And what about this dog?" looking down at the Sagamore pup, who stood before him wagging, attentive, always the gentleman to the tips of his toes.

Miss Landis laughed. "Take him to your room if you like. Dogs have the run of the house."

So he followed a servant to the floor above, where a smiling and very ornamental maid preceded him through a corridor and into that heavy wing of the house which fronted the sea.

"Tea is served in the gunroom, sir," said the pretty maid and disappeared to give place to a melancholy and silent young man, who turned on the bath, laid out fresh raiment and, whispering "Scotch or Irish, sir?" presently effaced himself.

Before he quenched his own thirst Siward filled a bowl and set it on the floor, and it seemed as though the dog would never finish gulping and slabbering in the limpid icy water.

"It's the salt air, my boy," commented the young man, gravely refilling his own glass as though accepting the excuse on his own account.

Then man and beast completed ablutions and grooming and filed out through the wide corridor, around the gallery and down the broad stairway to the gunroom, an oaken vaulted place illuminated by the sun, where mellow lights sparkled on glass cased rows of fowling pieces and rifles, on the polished antlers of shaggy moose heads.

Miss Landis sat curled up in a cushioned corner under the open casement panes offering herself a cup of tea. She looked up, nodding invitation. He found a place beside her. A servant whispered, "Scotch or Irish, sir?" then set the crystal paraphernalia at his elbow.

He said something about the salt air casually. The girl gazed meditatively at space.

The sound of wheels on the gravel outside aroused her from a silence which had become a brown study, and to Siward presently she said, "Here endeth our first rendezvous."

"Then let us arrange another immediately," he said, stirring the ice in his glass.

The girl considered him with speculative eyes. "I shouldn't exactly know what to do with you for the next hour if I didn't abandon you."

"Why bother to do anything with me? Why even give yourself the trouble of deserting me? That solves the problem."

"I really don't mean that you are a problem to me, Mr. Siward," she said, amused. "I mean that I am going to drive again."

"I see."

"No; you don't see at all. There's a telegram. I'm not driving for pleasure."

She had not meant that either, and it annoyed her that she had expressed herself in such terms. As a matter of fact, at the telegraphed request of Mr. Quarrier she was going to Black Fells Crossing to meet his train from the lakes and drive him back to Shotover. The drive, therefore, was, of course, a drive for pleasure.

"I see," repeated Siward amiably.

"Perhaps you do," she observed, rising to her graceful height. He was on his feet at once, so carelessly, so good humoredly acquiescent that without any reason at all she hesitated.

"I had meant to show you about—the cliffs, the kennels and stables. I'm sorry," she concluded, lingering.

"I'm awfully sorry," he rejoined without meaning anything in particular. That was the trouble—whatever he said apparently meant so much.

With the agreeable sensation of being regretted she leisurely gloved herself, then walked through the gunroom and hall, Siward strolling beside her.

The dog followed them as they turned toward the door and passed out across the terraced veranda to the driveway, where a tandem cart was drawn up, faultlessly appointed. Quarrier's mania was tandem. She thought it rather nice of her to remember this.

She inspected the ensemble without visible interest for a few moments. The wind freshened from the sea, fluttering her veil, and she turned toward the east to face it. In the golden splendor of declining day the white sails of yachts crowded landward on the last leg before beating westward into Blue harbor. A small white cruiser steaming south left a mile long stratum of rose tinted smoke hanging parallel to the horizon's plane. The westering sun struck sparks from her bright work.

They had turned their backs to the tandem. The grooms looked after them, standing motionless at the horses' heads.

"Mr. Siward, this is too fine to miss," she said. "I will walk as far as the headland with you. Please smoke if you care to."

The breeze blown conversation became fragmentary, veering as capriciously as the purple wind flaws that spread across the shoals. But always to her question or comment she found in his response the charm of freshness, of quick intelligence or of a humorous and idle perversity which stimulates without demanding.

Once, glancing back at the house where the T cart and horses stood, she said that she had better return, or perhaps she only thought she said it, for he made no response that time, and a few moments later they reached the headland, and the Atlantic lay below, flowing azure from horizon to horizon under a universe of depthless blue. And for a long while neither spoke.

With her the spell endured until conscience began to stir. Then she awoke, uneasy, as always, under the shadow of restraint or pressure until her eyes fell on him and lingered.

A subtle change had come into his face. Its leanness struck her for the first time—that and an utter detachment from his surroundings, a somber oblivion to everything and to her.

How curiously had his face altered! How shadowy it had grown, effacing the charm of youth in it!

The slight amusement with which she had become conscious of her own personal exclusion grew to an interest tinged with curiosity.

The interest continued, but when his silence became irksome to her she said so very frankly. His absent eyes, still clouded, met hers unsmiling.

"I was thinking of men I knew—for example, a man who through generations has inherited every impulse and desire that he should not harbor; a man with intellect enough to be aware of it, with decency enough to desire decency. What chance has he with the storms which have been brewing for him even before he opened his eyes on earth? Is that a square deal?"

The troubled concentration of her face was reflected now in his own. The wind came whipping and flicking at them from league wide tossing wastes. The steady thunder of the sea accented the silence.

Turning to the sea, he had become engrossed in his own thoughts again, and again she was first curious, then impatient, at the ease with which he excluded her. She remembered, too, that the cart was waiting; that she had scarcely time now to make the train.

She stood irresolute, inert, disinclined to bestir herself. An inborn aptitude for drifting, which threatened to become a talent for indecision, had always alternated in her with sudden impulsive conclusions and when her pride was involved in decisions which sometimes scarcely withstood the analysis of reason.

Physically healthy, mentally unawakened, sentimentally incredulous, totally ignorant of any master passion and conventionally drilled, her beauty and sweet temper had carried her easily on the frothy crest of her first season over the eligible and ineligible alike, leaving her at Lenox a rather tired and breathless girl in love with pleasure and the world which treated her so well.

The death of her mother abroad had made little impression upon her, her uncle, Major Belwether, having cared for her since her father's death; when she was ten years old. So, although the scandal of her mother's self exile had been in a measure condoned by a tardy marriage to the man for whom she had left everything, her daughter had grown up ignorant of any particular feeling for a mother she could scarcely remember.

However, she wore black and went nowhere for the second winter, during which time she learned a great deal concerning the unconventional proclivities of the women of her race and family, enough to impress her so seriously that on an exaggerated impulse she had come to one of her characteristic decisions.

That decision was to break the unsavory record at the first justifiable opportunity, and the opportunity came in the shape of Quarrier—as though wedlock were actually the sanctuary which an alarmed nation pretends it to be!

Now, approaching the threshold of a third and last season and having put away her almost meaningless mourning, there had stolen into her sense of security something irksome in the promise she had made to give Quarrier a definite answer before winter.

Perhaps it had been the lack of interest in the people at Shotover, perhaps a mental review of her ancestors' capricious records, perhaps a characteristic impulse that had directed a telegram to Quarrier after a midnight confab with Grace Ferrall.

However it may have been, she had summoned him. And now he was on his way to get his answer, the best whip, the most eagerly discussed and one of the wealthiest unmarried men in America.

Lingering irresolutely, considering with idle eyes the shadows lengthening across the sun shot moorland, the sound of Siward's even voice aroused her from a meditation bordering on lassitude.

She answered vaguely. He spoke again, all the agreeable, gentle, humorous charm dominant once more, releasing her from the growing tension of her own thoughts, absolving her from the duty of immediate decision.

"I feel curiously lazy," she said, "perhaps from our long drive." She seated herself on the turf. "Talk to me, Mr. Siward, in that lazy way of yours."

"Tell, to my Mr. Siward"

What he had to say proved in consequent enough, an irrelevant suggestion concerning the training of bird dogs. The conversation veered again toward the mystery of heredity.

"Do you mean, Mr. Siward, that heredity is an excuse for moral weakness?" she asked.

"I don't know. Those inheriting nothing of evil say it is no excuse."

"It is no excuse."

"You speak with authority," he said.

"With more than you are aware of," she murmured, not meaning to say it.

She stood up impulsively, her fresh face turned to the distant house, her rounded young figure poised in relief against the sky.

"Inherited or not, idleness, procrastination, are my besetting sins. Can't you suggest the remedy, Mr. Siward?"

"But they are only the thieves of Time, and we kill the poor old gentleman."

"Leagued assassins," she repeated pensively.

Her gown had caught on the cliff briers. He knelt to release it, she looking down, noting an ugly tear in the fabric.

"Payment for my iniquities—the first installment," she said, still looking down over his shoulder and watching his efforts to release her. "Thank you, Mr. Siward. I think we ought to start, don't you?"

He straightened up, smiling, awaiting her further pleasure. Her pleasure being capricious, she seated herself again, saying: "What I meant to say was this: Evils that spring from heredity are no excuse for misconduct in people of our sort. Environment, not heredity, counts. And it's our business, who have every chance in the world, to make good."

He looked down, amused at the piquant incongruity of voice and vernacular.

"What time is it?" she asked irrelevantly.

He glanced at his watch. She turned her eyes toward the level sun, conscious and a little conscience stricken that it was too late for her to drive to Black Fells Crossing unless she started at once.

It grew stiller. The wind went down with the sun.

Doubtless he had forgotten to tell her the time. She had almost forgotten that she had asked him. With the silence of sunset a languor, the indolence of content, crept over her. She saw him close his watch with the absentminded air which she already associated with him, and she let the question go from sheer disinclination for the effort of repetition—let the projected drive go—acquiescent, content that matters shape themselves without any interference from her. The sense of ease of physical well being invaded her with an agreeable relaxation as though tension somewhere had slackened.

The conversation drifted illogically. Sometimes he stirred her to amusement, even a hushed laughter. Sometimes she smilingly agreed with his views. Sometimes she let them go uncriticised or, intent on her own ideas, shook her small head in amused disapproval.

The stillness over all, the deepening mellow light, the blessed indolence of the young world and their few years in it—youth—that was perhaps the key to it all, after all.

"Tomorrow," she mused aloud, knees cradled in her clasped fingers—"tomorrow they'll shoot, with great circumstance and fuss, a few native woodcock—there's no flight yet from the north—a few grouse, fewer snipe, a stray duck or two. Others will drive motor cars over bad roads. Others will ride, sail, golf—anything to kill the eternal enemy. You know the majority of the people here or coming, don't you?"

"Who are they?"

She began. "The Leroy Mortimers?"

"Oh, yes."

"Lord Alderdene and Captain Voucher and the Page twins and Marion?"

"Yes."

"Rena Bonnesdel, the Tassel girl, Agatha Caithness, Mrs. Vendenning—all sorts, all sets." And, with an effort, "If I'm to drive I should like to—to know what time it is."

He informed her, and she, too indolent to pretend surprise and finding reproach easier, told him that he had no business to permit her to forget.

His smiling serenity under the rebuke aroused in her a slight resentment, as though he had taken something for granted.

Besides, she had grown uneasy. She had wired Quarrier, saying she would meet him and drive him over. He had replied at once, naming his train. He was an exact man and expected method and precision in others. She didn't exactly know how it might affect him if his reasonable demand was unsatisfied. She did not know him very well yet.

And, thinking of him now, she again made up her mind to give him the answer which he now had every reason to expect from her. This decision appeared to lubricate her conscience. It ran more smoothly now, emitting fewer creaks.

"You say that you know Mr. Quarrier?" she began thoughtfully.

"Not well."

"I hope you will like him, Mr. Siward."

"I do not think he likes me, Miss Landis. He has reasons not to."

She looked up, suddenly remembering: "Oh—since that scrape? What has Mr. Quarrier to do"— She did not finish the sentence. A troubled silence followed. She was trying to remember the details—something she had paid small attention to at the time; something so foreign to her, so distant from her comprehension, that it had not touched her closely enough for her to remember exactly what this young man might have done to forfeit the good will of Howard Quarrier.

She looked at Siward. It was impossible that anything very bad could come from such a man. And, pursuing her reasoning aloud, "It couldn't have been very awful," she argued; "something foolish about an actress, was it not? And that could not concern Mr. Quarrier."

"I thought you did know; I thought you—remembered—while you were driving me over from the station—that I was dropped from my club."

She flushed up. "Oh, but what had Mr. Quarrier to do with that?"

"He is a governor of that club."

"You mean that Mr. Quarrier had you—dropped?"

"What else could he do? A man who is idiot enough to risk making his own club notorious must take the consequences, and they say I took that risk. Therefore Mr. Quarrier, Major Belwether—all the governors did their duty. I—I naturally concluded that no governor of the Patroons club feels very kindly toward me."

Miss Landis sat very still, her small head bent, a flush still brightening her fair face.

She recalled a few of the details now—the scandal—something of the story. Which particular actress it was she could not remember, but some men who had dined too freely had made the wager, and this boy sitting beside her had accepted it and won it by bringing into the sacred precincts of the Patroons club a foolish girl disguised in a man's evening dress.

That was bad enough. That somebody promptly discovered it was worse, but worst of all was the publicity, the club's name smirched, the young man expelled from one of the best two clubs in the metropolis.

To read of such things in the columns of a daily paper had meant little to her except to repel her. To hear it mentioned among people of her own sort had left her incurious and indifferent, but now she saw it in a new light, with the young man who had figured in it seated beside her. Did such men as he—such attractive, well bred, amusing men as he—do that sort of thing?

"Is that the kind of man you are, Mr. Siward?" she said impulsively.

"It appears that I was. I don't know what I am or may be."

"The pity of it!" she said, still swayed by impulse. "Why did you do—didn't you know—realize what you were doing—bringing discredit on your own club?"

"I was in no condition to know, Miss Landis."

The crude brutality of the expression might merely have hurt or disgusted her had she been less intelligent, nor, as it was, did she fully understand why he chose to use it unless that he meant it in self punishment.

"It's rather shameful!" she said hotly.

"Yes," he assented; "it's a bad beginning."

"A beginning! Do you mean to go on?"

He did not reply. His head was partly turned from her. She sat silent for awhile. The dog had returned to lie at Siward's feet, his brown eyes tirelessly watching the man he had chosen for his friend, and the man, without turning his eyes, dropped one hand on the dog's head, caressing the silky ears.

Some sentimentalist had once said that no man who cared for animals could be wholly bad. Inexperience inclined her to believe it. Then, too, she had that inclination for overlooking offenses committed against precept which appears to be one of those edifying human traits peculiar to neither sex and common to both. Besides, her knowledge of such matters was as vague as her mind was healthy and body wholesome. Men who dined incautiously were not remarkable for their rarity. The actress habit, being incomprehensible to her, meant nothing, and she said innocently: "It is not for such things that we drop men, Mr. Siward. You know that, of course."

Toy Poms.

Toy Pomeranian dogs are first favorites just now. They are hardy, as dogs go. But all the same, a toy Pom wants a good deal of care. His feet must be dried if they have got wet on a bad day, otherwise he will be subject to rheumatism when he is old, and care must be taken to provide him with the right food. He is a peculiarly nervous, excitable dog and wants generous feeding. Chicken or fish is the best dinner for him.

PARKS TAKE TWO GAMES FROM CRANFORD IN LEAGUE

The Park Club bowling team in the Central Journal League took two out of three in a match with the Cranford team at the local club alleys last night. Though Edwin Daniel posted a 214, the best score of the night, in the first game, the Parks' total of 870 was twenty-six below the visitors' score. In the second game, the local five splintered the wood for a total of 927, with double centuries by Long and Ball, and won handily by a fifty point margin in the highest team score of the match. The Cranford team could only total 806 in the third game, and the home bowlers took another, aided by Ball's second double century. The scores follow:

Samuel Fibbs.

Samuel Fibbs, aged seventy-seven years, and for over fifty years continuously in the employ of the New Jersey Central, died at his home at Hampton Junction, Hunterdon county, on Tuesday. At the time of his death, Mr. Fibbs was a coal inspector for the New Jersey Central and was one of the few veteran employes of that company left. He was buried at Phillipsburg.

Funeral of Robert McIntosh.

The funeral of Robert McIntosh was held last night at his late home on Leland avenue. It was conducted by Rev. Mr. Smith. The body was sent this morning to Bellport, L. I., for interment.

Rev. George Bowers will preach at the West End Tabernacle tomorrow night at 8 o'clock, and his daughter will sing. Sunday-school will be held at the usual hour and the Baraca Class will meet at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

VILLAGE GOVERNMENT CLUB MAKES SOME PLANS.

Several improvements were suggested at the monthly meeting of the Good Government Club at South Plainfield, last night, among them being a new jail, an additional justice of the peace, and that steps should be taken to prevent young boys from obtaining liquor. The invitation received from the pastor of the Baptist church to attend divine service Sunday night, January 19, was accepted.

Driver and Boss Reconciled.

At his hearing before Justice Clark Munday last night, Edgar Skillman, the Peapack lad who was arrested for stealing a horse from his employer, Charles Gulick, made the peace without legal action, and decided to return with Gulick, instead of starting business for himself. He has sold the team to Stonewall Jackson, but the deal was cancelled by the return of thte $45 paid to Skillman. William Kirk, arrested with the lad for drunkenness, was dismissed with a warning.

Mrs. W. A. Holmes.

Mrs. Walter A. Holmes died at her home in Sterling yesterday after an operation performed several weeks ago. She is survived by a widower. Less than a month ago infant twins of the Holmes' died, and about a year ago they lost their oldest child. The funeral will be held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Myersville church, Rev. Mr. Reeves, of Basking Ridge, officiating, and the interment will be in the Myersville cemetery.

Cop at Headquarters.

In accordance with a series of new rules for the North Plainfield police department announced by Mayor Samuel Townsend, there will hereafter be a borough cop on duty at night in the station house, where he will be accessible by telephone for alarms. The borough police may be located by North Plainfielders for alarms by telephoning 855 during th day and 42-J at night.

Officials Take Oath of Office.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk, at his office yesterday afternoon, administered the oath of office to Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh and to H. C. VanEmburgh, Asa F. Randolph, W. T. Kirk and H. C. Runyon, comprising the Board of Assessors.

Funeral of Thomas Comiskey.

Mass was said in St. Mary's church this morning for Thomas Comiskey, whose death occurred in Muhlenberg Hospital Thursday night. Father Schiola officiated and burial was afterward made in St. Mary's cemetery.

IDEAL SUBURBAN CITY

one who, when he reached heaven and was shown his mansion, said he would rather live just outside heaven and come in every day. You recognize the man. He was an old commuter who knew the comforts of living just outside the centre of things.

"It is a great privilege for a young man to live in a great city like New York, especially if that young man has been brought up in some country place far removed from a great city. But it is certainly more ideal to be engaged in business in New York and then, after the toil of the day, to find refreshment and rest in a suburban city.

"Some one said of Edinburgh that it had one great attraction, and that was its road to England. He must have been blind to beautiful things. Edinburgh is one of the most beautiful cities in the old world. But we can say that one of the great advantages of New York is this, there are fine roads out of it, and of these none is better, nay, more than that, none quite equals the Central Railroad of New Jersey in its suburban service.

"When you reach a city like Plainfield, what do you find. Mosquitoes? It was an ignorant critic who, when he heard it stated that mosquitoes were not thick down our way, said in response, 'No, they are long and thin.' He spoke whereof he did not know. We do not sleep under netting at night in the summertime, nor do we screen our porches.

"We do find a whole lot of Brooklynites here who cannot stand the heavy air of Brooklyn and who have discovered in Plainfield, a Colorado of the east.

"The water in Plainfield is not like that of Philadelphia in that it has neither taste nor smell, but it is so refreshing and pure that our underground lake supplies the cities for miles around.

"The second thing you find in Plainfield is a most excellent school system. It is perfectly natural for one to think his own crow is the blackest, but the very high standing of the Plainfield schools is a recognized fact. I wish that someone who knows the exact facts might write to the Suburbanite about them.

"The third thing you find in Plainfield is a great variety of religious organizations. Plainfield, I am sure, can satisfy all religious tastes. We have what are commonly called 'Footwashers' or the 'Black Jews.' Christians, Christian Scientists, Plymouth Brethren, a Jewish synagogue, a Seventh-Day church, Episcopal, Methodist, Congregational, Baptist, Presbyterian, Dutch Reformed, Unitarian churches, a Friends' Meeting House, etc.

"There are, no doubt, other beautiful cities in which to live, but we do find this true that those who have once lived in Plainfield and tasted its joys have a longing to come back to it.

"CHARLES E. HERRING."

"Some fifteen years ago I selected Plainfield as a place of residence for reasons which then appealed to me and do still. Being free to select any place between Somerville and New York city, I looked the ground over and decided upon Plainfield. One prominent reason which determined the choice was the admirable public schools at this point. There are no schools the equal of those here along the entire line of the Central Railway between Easton and Elizabeth. Since that date there has been steady progress as to school accommodations and school privileges in Somerville, Westfield and Cranford, not to speak of Bound Brook Brook and other towns, but Plainfield has steadily kept pace with whatever was new in educational matters.

"Another reason was, the large number of through and local trains which stopped at Plainfield, or which terminated at the next town of Dunellen. Then, as now, the facilities for reaching New York or Philadelphia were better at Plainfield than at any other point in this part of New Jersey, excepting, of course, Elizabeth and Newark. The train service was better, better time was kept, and there was every attention shown to this spot, which had been originally selected by former President Johnston of the Central Railroad as his place of permanent residence.

These two reasons were controlling, and I have never since regretted my choice.

"One of the factors, which I probably then overlooked, but which has made this vicinity delightful to those who love the wheel, is the condition of the public roads in this part of Union county. With level ground and roads admirably macadamized, one can exercise without fatigue on a bicycle in every direction, and this species of travel I have freely indulged in for purposes of health as well as recreation. Metuchen, New Brunswick, Bound Brook, Westfield, Summit, Rahway and similar points can all be made within from thirty minutes to an hour and a half.

The people, the amusements, the clubs, the general air of intelligence, the conservative business activities of Plainfield, are quite as ideal as they are in any suburban city or town away from New York. The churches are above reproach, and numerous enough in count and in denominations to satisfy the most fastidious.

"What we need more than anything else is a public park, and more dwelling houses for persons of moderate means. I am told there are at least twenty applications every day of the year to real estate agents for houses renting from $15 to $25 per month, everyone of whom, as a rule, is turned away. The surprising thing is that men of capitol do not build houses on the Philadelphia style and plan, in rows where the rents are to be of a minimum, and in twos where the rents shall not exceed $25. Stone dwellings, of which we have none, or concrete if that be found desirable, can be made to pay eight per cent. on the investment without any trouble. There is an abundance of stone in the immediate vicinity, and land for sale in all directions.

"A. V. D. HONEYMAN."

"When people do well what is given them to do, I believe they ought to be commended and cheered. Even the Great Master, we are told, will one day say, 'Well done,' to his 'good and faithful servants.' I trust, therefore, that you will not think me presumptuous if—speaking not only for myself, but for all my friends in this city, who I know hold the same sentiments,—I say that among the many advantages which Plainfield enjoys, none, perhaps, is more distinguishing than its exceptionally fine railway service.

"The trains are not only very numerous—about forty-five a day—but they are clean, comfortable, some of them elegant, usually on time, and always served by courteous and capable men. This is a great attraction to Plainfield, especially for those who wish to go swiftly, safely and at low cost to and from New York. No wonder that business men are seeking residences here in ever increasing numbers.

Of course, this alone would not be enough to draw people, but when to this is added the rare healthfulness of the city (some speak of it as almost another Lakewood), its beautiful streets, its unsurpassed schools, its many well supported churches—some of them among the strongest in the State of their respective denominations—the high and refined character of its citizens, including a number of the foremost business men of New York—where can be found another place of residence more desirable?

"J. A. CHAMPLISS."

FOUR YEARS AS PASTOR

Rev. A. E. Finn Preaches Anniversary Sermon at Park Ave. Baptist Church.

A REVIEW OF HIS WORK.

Church Membership Increased and Prosperous Condition Since He Took Charge—A Comparison.

Marking the completion of the fourth year of his pastorate at the Park Avenue Baptist church, Rev. A. E. Finn at the morning service yesterday delivered his anniversary sermon on the subject, "Sealed Orders," as taken from Acts 20:22 and Exodus 33:14:

"And now, behold, I go bound in the spirit unto Jerusalem, not knowing the things that shall befall me there." "My presence shall go with thee." In part Mr. Finn's discourse was as follows:

"Today we begin our fifth year together as pastor and people. The record of the past four years have been made. Their mistakes and failures, their victories and triumphs are all known to God, for my part I am willing to leave them with Him knowing that He will forgive our mistakes and glory in our triumphs. I am not concerned about the past this morning but I am concerned about the present and our attitude toward our God appointed mission. When the apostle set sail from Ephesus to Jerusalem, he took the journey under sealed orders. He knew not the things that would befall him there. But he knew he had a mission to perform and he also knew that the presence of God would go with Him. We are facing the unknown road of a new year. Where is the road going to lead? We do not know; culture and wealth convey no favors; all distinctions are here wiped out, we are all upon an unknown road we are sailing under sealed orders. But while we sail under sealed orders we like Paul know that we have a mission to perform and it is our mission that I am very much concerned about this morning.

"We have a mission to the sorrowing. Is there anything more solitary than sorrow that cannot find a hearing hear? Is not sorrow often relieved when having found a listening ear it can tell and retell its own story? when God calls us to lend our ear to the sorrowful stricken heart will be ready to perform this mission?

"We have a mission to those who are tempted. Would it not be desperate and lonely for a man to wrestle with wild beasts in the arena with no crowd to give encouragement by their applause? Is it not desperate and lonely for a man to enter into the fierce battle with temptation with no encouragement from the followers of Jesus. If we perform our mission to the tempted we may save many from falling during this year.

"We have a mission to the aged. Why should people have to come to old age in such abject loneliness and in their utter desolation pray that God might take them home? Is it not because we are so obsorbed in things material that we are not performing our mission to old age. To rightly perform this mission it may mean the giving up of a few social engagements during the year but the compensations are so great that it will pay you to do it.

"We have a mission to the unconverted. If we are the true followers of Jesus we will, like our Master, go about doing good. We will, like Him, become personal workers seeking for souls one by one and delivering to them the words of salvation as Jesus did to the woman at the well and to Nicodemus.

"As we travel along the unknown road of this New Year I am anxious that we should perform our God appointed mission. We have the promise of His presence and we are thus assured of victory."

In connection with the completion of the fourth year of the pastorate Rev. A. E. Finn has published a statement of the work accomplished, financially and otherwise, during the period. The statement follows:

Membership, January 1, 1904, 288; additions, by letter, 47; by baptism, 40; by experience, 6; total additions, 93. Diminutions, by letter, 30; by death, 17; by erasure, 20; by exclusion, 1; total diminutions, 68; net gain in four years, 25; membership January 1, 1908, 313.

Money raised and how expended, 1904-1908: Current expenses, $13,171.33; repairs and improvements, $3,105.54; paid on church debt, $3,867.91; for benevolence, $4,193.86; total raised in four years, $24,338.64.

The loss by death last year included James Randolph, Mrs. Rhoda A. Martin, Mrs. Emeline Dunham, Robert Walker and Mrs. Mary Mead.

COLORED BOY'S VIEW OF THE NATURE OF AN OATH

During a hearing in the city court, this morning, in which Richard Waldron and James Stewart, two West End young men, were charged by Lambert Edmonds with breaking and entering the Cadmus office on South Second street, Judge Runyon discovered a twelve-year-old colored boy who didn't know the nature of an oath but couldn't be flustered about it.

The boy was John Scott and it was on testimony furnished by him that he saw the two men leaving the office in question on the night it was robbed that complaint was preferred against them. The little fellow was called to the stand and before he was sworn the magistrate asked him if he knew what was meant by an oath.

"O, yes," he replied quickly, "it means to say a cuss word."

When the laugh that rang out from the spectators had quieted down Judge Runyon assured him that he didn't mean that kind of an oath and to make himself better understood asked the boy if he knew why it was they were going to have him place his hand on the Bible.

"Yes, sir," said Scott again, "you do that to see if I am guilty."

By that time the court decided that the witness was a little too irresponsible to give testimony that might send men to prison and he was dismissed. Lawyer Robert Crane immediately called for the discharge of the defendants and Judge Runyon complied. The office they were accused of robbing is one the Cadmus mill property and is occupied by Edmonds as a plumbing shop.

MRS. PECK PRESIDENT OF CHILDREN'S HOME

The Board of Directors of the Children's Home Association has elected Mrs. James C. Peck, of North Plainfield, as president, succeeding the late Mrs. M. E. Kimball, who held the position since the institution was founded thirty years ago. Mrs. Martin L. Cooley was considered the logical choice for the position, being vice president, but she is in Cuba for the winter, and it is necessary to have an active head of the association at once to carry on the work. Mrs. Peck will complete the unfinished term.

Mrs. Peck has been a member of the Board of Directors of the Home for several years and has always kept in close touch with the work. Her election meets with the approbation of the association directors and all friends of the Home for it is known that she will carry out the successful policy of the late president.

XMAS TREE FESTIVAL AT CHILDREN'S HOME.

The Christmas tree festivities at the Children's Home which were postponed on account of the death of Mrs. M. E. Kimball, the founder of the institution, were held on Saturday afternoon. The children, as usual, were generously remembered with gifts, including mittens, shoes, stockings, rubbers, wearing apparel, while there was also a distribution of candy and oranges.

The late president, who was always a familiar figure at the festival, as well as at all other times, was greatly missed by the children and other members of the association upon whim devolved much of the work that was hers. The occasion was made a bright and happy one for the children, however, and the customary program was followed.

Addresses were made by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie and Superintendent H. C. Krebs of the borough schools.

Baptist Sunday-school Elects.

The officers and teachers of the Park Avenue Baptist church held their annual meeting at the Saturday night and these officers were re-elected for the ensuing year: Superintendent, George E. Hall; assistant superintendent, Miss Florence G. Hawkins; secretary, Henry F. Cuming, assistant secretary, Martin B. Stutsman; treasurer, Joseph M. Hawkins; librarian, E. Frank Vail; superintendent primary department, Miss Elmira C. Runyon; superintendent home department, Mrs. D. M. Runyon; blackboard artist, Charles Van Winkle; leader of orchestra, G. W. V. Moy. Miss Mamie Clark resigned as pianist, and the vacancy will be filled later.

Third Chamber Music Concert.

The third McIntyre Music Concert will be given at the Casino on Thursday night, at which time Mr. McIntyre, pianist, will be the soloist. A change in the arrangement for the concert was found neccessary and Paul Dufault, tenor, who was heard here last year, will be the assisting artist instead of Daniel Beddoe.

SEEKING AID FOR BLIND

Meeting in Newark Tomorrow to Interest Legislature in Proposed Home.

MR. FISK ENDORSES PLAN.

Percy Cannon Enlisting Support of Local People in the Worthy Cause—The Plans.

Those interested in the meeting to be held in the Free Public Library, Newark, tomorrow, when steps will be taken to seek legislative aid in behalf of the State blind, have been busy securing the endorsement of men prominent in all walks of life throughout New Jersey. The idea is to establish a State Industrial Home for the Blind.

Percy Cannon, of this city, has enlisted the support of Secretary Robbie, of the Y. M. C. A., and also of Mayor Charles J. Fisk, who expresses his endorsement in the following letter:

"To the Association for the Blind,
"State of New Jersey.

"I understand, through Percy Cannon, of this city, that there is an association being formed to petition the State to pass a bill at the next session of the Legislature to form an Industrial School, in order to help the blind and educate them in various trades, and teach them in every way possible to help themselves, so that they will not become a burden on the community.

"I thoroughly endorse this matter and trust you will be able to secure the required legislation. Anything that I may be able to do to assist in bringing this matter about, I will do most cheerfully. As I consider anything that may be done to help people who are less fortunate than others, and help themselves, when they are willing to do so, is a step in the right direction.

"Yours very truly,
"CHAS. J. FISK,"
"Mayor."

Governor Fort, Senator Colby and others are interested in the movement.

MONTCLAIR Y. M. C. A. WINS LEAGUE GAME, 42-20

Pitted against the strong five of the Montclair Y. M. C. A., the local association basketball team went down to defeat in a league game played at Montclair Saturday night. The final score was 42-20. The Plainfielders were weakened by the absence of Loizeaux and Rumsey, who are out of town, but held their own against their fast opponents in the first half.

The local five started the game with a rush, scoring five points before the home team really got started in the play. Montclair finally woke up, however, and the Plainfielders could only score three more points before time was called, when the home team had piled up eighteen tallies. In the second half, "Jimmie" Calder, the right forward of the Montclair five, broke away from his man time after time for baskets in rapid succession, and the score grew more and more one sided. The local five kept in the game, however, and added twelve points to the score, picking up in team work and passing toward the end of the game. The whistle showed a twenty-two point margan for Montclair. The line-ups:

MONTCLAIR.	PLAINFIELD.
Calder	Miner
right forward.
Rohn	Gilmore
left forward.
Bunten	Collier
centre.
Keller	Jacot
right guard.
Lummis, Knowles	Gavett

Referee, G. L. Listman; umpire, H. E. Randal. Twenty minute halves.

Sermons on Great Questions.

Rev. A. E. Finn, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, began a series of special sermons last night on the subject, "Some Great Questions Considered." The others will be: January 12, "How Shall a Man Be Just With His Maker?" January 19, "Does the Soul of the Christian Go Directly to Heaven at Death?" January 26, "Is It Necessary to Join a Church to Be a Christian?" February 2, "Why Should a Business Man Be a Christian?" February 9, "Will There Be a Judgment?" February 16, "Will There Be Time for Argument at the Judgment?" February 23, What Is the Greatest Sin?" March 1, "Who Is Your Friend?" March 8, "Is Is Necessary to Be Baptized to Be a Christian;" March 15, "Who Cannot Be Saved?"

NEW POLICE ORDINANCE

City Fathers to Act Tonight on Plan to Adjust Pay and Grades.

POLICE BBOARD'S NEW POLICY.

Fellows Recommendation In Mayor's Message—The Annual Inspection to Be Held May 2.

Matters pertaining to a readjustment of the salaries of the members of the police force, the appointment of special and the question of classifying members of the department into grades, were discussed at the first meeting of the Police Board for this year, held Saturday night in Mayor Fisk's office. The Mayor, President R. I. Tolles, of the Common Council and Councilmen W. L. Cloak, Frank DeWitt Randolph and Robert E. Hall, were present. Mr. Hall was chosen secretary.

It was decided to re-arrange the list of special policemen and they will be divided into classes as follows: City employes, private watchmen, extras, banks, school panitors, factories, church janitors and automobile specials. It will not be the policy of the board to recommend the appointment of a long list of specials, including many who might use their badges as a means for riding on trolley cars and securing entrance to the theatre without pay.

As recommended in the Mayor's message an ordinance will be drafted and presented at tonight's meeting providing for a readjustment of all salaries and a subdivision of the members of the force into five different grades. The ordinance will specify the grades as follows.

Class A, five years and over; Class B, four years and under five; Class C, three years and under four; Class D, two years and under three; Class E, one year.

If this ordinance and the new salary schedule is adopted it will give the board the privilege of promoting a policeman from a lower grade to a higher for meritorious service, without waiting a whole year. This suggestion was that of Mayor Fisk, who believes that it will prove as an incentive to the younger men in the department to do good work. It is understood that the re-arrangement of salaries to be incorporated in the ordinance will meet with the approbation of the policemen and superior officers, who have thought the present scale unfair, and who was borne out in their opinion by Mayor Fisk, who suggested the changes to be made.

The annual inspection of the department will be held on the lawn of Mayor Fisk's West Seventh street residence on May 2.

Going South for the Winter.

J. Harry Campbell and family left today for Crescent City, Florida, where they will spend the winter. Mr. Campbell is interested with C. B. Clifton in the fruit growing business in the south. The firm has had an exceptionally large crop of oranges and will soon ship peaches which is a new industry with the firm.

S. S. Teachers' Meeting.

The Plainfield Sunday-school Teachers' Union will meet at the Y. M. C. A. tonight at 8 o'clock. John Ackor will lead the devotional services and E. E. Parvin will teach the lesson. There will be open discussion on "Necessary Equipment of the Sunday-school."

Mack for Townsend's Place.

It is probable that Edward L. Mack, of Elizabeth, will be named as clerk of the County Board of Taxation to fill the vacancy caused by William R. Townsend's resignation in November. Mr. Mack, who was formerly a resident of this city, is a compromise choice.

Leonce A. Texier to Wed.

Announcement is made of the approaching wedding of Leonce A. Texier, now treasurer of the new Majestic theatre at Perth Amboy, and Miss Eldora A. Beekman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Beekman, of this city.

Organ Recital Numbers.

These numbers were rendered at the organ recital at Grace church yesterday afternoon at 4 o'cloc: "Overture from Lohengrin," Wagner; gavotte, "Mignon," Thomas; Fourth Sonta," Guilmant.

Lincoln Now a "Dry" Town.

Because of Judge Theodore A. Booream's refusal to renew the liquor license of William J. Rapp, proprietor of the only saloon at Lincoln, the little Silas-Dewey-Drake-made town is now "dry."

RAPID GROWTH OF CITY

Comparison Between Plainfield of 40 Years Ago and Today is Startling.

MADE BY JOSEPH A. HUBBARD.

Retiring Assessor Tells of What It Was When He First Took Office and What It Is Now.

Joseph A. Hubbard, who has just retired as an assessor of this city, after forty years' continuous service, holds the record in this city and county for continuous public service. He was first elected in the spring of 1868. The community, then called Plainfield Township, had a population of less than 3,500.

Park avenue, then Cherry street, extended only to Seventh street, Madison avenue and Central avenue, then Mechanic street and Centre street, were opened beyond Seventh street about this time. South and west of Plainfield avenue, then William street, was occupied almost entirely by farms.

At the time Mr. Hubbard took up this work there were 672 voters paying a poll tax of $1 and a school poll tax of 50 cents. The military poll tax was assessed in those days against all men who had not gone to war, or were not exempt because of age. This amounted to $5 per year each.

The total of real and personal property assessed in 1867 amounted to $2,098,150. Last year the total real and personal assessment amounted to $22,196,625, or an increase of over one thousand per cent. In 1867 the tax rate was $1.60 per $100 and the amount raised 37,500; last year the rate was $1.47 per $100, and the amount raised $221,430. Poll tax $4,569.

As an example of the increase in values the farm of the estate of D. Martine, consisting of 152 acres, was taxed for $15,000, or just $100 per acre and considered high enough. Today this land, laid out in streets, but without buildings, is worth over $3,000 per acre.

COUNTY BOARD HEARS A LOCAL TAX APPEAL

The Union County Board for the Equalization of Taxes is in session at Elizabeth this afternoon for the purpose of hearing a number of appeal cases, one of the most important coming from the Plainfield Trust Company. The banking concern takes exception to an assessment of $75,000 on capital stock made by Assessor Harry C. Runyon, on the ground that its capital stock and undivided profits are invested in real estate and mortgages already covered. The company further, claims that the amount to be assessed under Mr. Runyon's interpretation is but $19,000.

The banking house has retained Borough Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed to present its claims while the city's interests will be looked after by City Corporation Counsel Marsh.

New Church Members.

Four members were received on confession and one by letter at the communion service at the First Presbyterian church yesterday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Jasper D. Sims were received by letter at a similar service held at the Park Avenue Baptist church. Additions were also made in the membership at communion services held in the Congregational and Crescent Avenue Presbyterian churches.

Annual Y. M. C. A. Dinner.

The annual dinner of the Y. M. C. A. will be held in the association auditorium Thursday evening. Addresses will be made by Richard C. SMALL DOG CAUSES AN AUTO ACCIDENT

While a large automobile holding A. N. Killgore, F. C. Killgore and J. A. Muskey, all of Short Hills, was speeding along South avenue, near Terrill road, at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, a small dog ran out of a yard directly in front of the machine. A. N. Killgore, who was driving, sought to escape striking the animal but it was hit by the front wheel, causing him to lose control of the steering gear. The car swerved to one side and plunged head-on into a tree, hurling all three men out of their seats to the sidewalk.

The two Killgores escaped with a severe shaking up and bruises but Muskey received several ugly cuts and a badly lacerated arm. He was rendered partially unconscious and with the assistance of Patrolman George Dobson, his friends took him to the office of Dr. Marcus L. Clawson for proper attention. He afterward recovered sufficiently to start for home.

The force of the collision demolished one wheel of the auto and stove in the front so badly it had to be placed in Martin's garage for repairs. The owner asserted before leaving for Short Hills that he would take steps to bring suit for damages against the owner of the dog.

DUNELLEN MAYOR RIGHT IN NAMING COUNCILMAN

When Mayor Swackhammer, of Dunellen, appointed John VanMiddlesworth as a member of the borough council to fill the vacancy by Fowler Vail, Dunellenites of both parties held heated informal discussions as to the legal right of the Mayor to fill the vacancy. This was because of the fact that Harry Bamhach and Mr. Van Middlesworth each received 173 votes in the balloting for councilman election day. Both men are Democrats and the figures were sent on the County Board of Elections without either candidate applying for a recount.

After the election there was some talk of a recount, but nothing was done by either candidate, so that at the organization meeting of the Council on New Year's Day, Mayor Swackhammer filled the vacancy by appointment. This proves a legal appointment and was unanimously endorsed by the members of the Dunellen Council. Section III of the borough law provides that the Mayor has the power to fill a vacancy in elective offices and the term in this case is for the full three years. Mr. Van Middlesworth would serve if elected at the polls on Election Day.

The appointment is legalized on the assumption that the County Board of Election, after receiving the figures from the polls, found no mistake in the recording, and Dunellenites assert that the figures were accepted, though nothing was done about the tie.

The first regular meeting of the Dunellen Council will be held in the borough building tonight and at this time Mayor Swackhammer is expected to announce his appointment for borough recorder. At the organization meeting of the Council held New Year's Day, the Mayor appointed H. L. Hathaway to fill this office, in place of David S. Campbell, the Dunellen recorder for many years. At the conclusion of the meeting, Mr. Hathaway resigned from the office claiming that his business would prevent him from giving the time necessary to the duties of the office. No intimation has been given as to who the Mayor will name at the meeting tonight, but many Dunellenites believe he will again bring up the name of D. S. Campbell, the former recorder.

The Rasores Club will meet tomorrow morning at the home of Mrs. B. O. Bowers, on Franklin place.

DR. RICHARDS TO PREACH IN EPISCOPAL PULPIT

Distinguished Presbyterian Has Bishop Potter's Consent to Officiate as Layman.

FIRST THUS TO BE HONORED.

Former Plainfielder to Take Part in Service at Christ Church, New York—Canon is Criticized.

The first minister of another denomination to be invited with the sanction of a bishop to preach at an Episcopal church service, as permitted by a canon which went into effect last Wednesday is a former Plainfielder. Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, the distinguished Presbyterian divine, is the man who has thus been honored. He is now pastor of the Brick Presbyterian church, Fifth avenue, New York.

Rt. Rev. Dr. Henry Codman Potter, bishop of New York, has formally given his consent and Dr. Richards will be heard at Christ church, New York, in the near future. For nearly twenty years, Dr. Richards was pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, of this city, and during that period attained national prominence as a preacher. Before coming here he had been pastor of a congregational church in Maine. Four years ago he accepted a call to the Brick church, after having declined many other big pulpits.

The New York Herald said yesterday:

"Storms of discussion and adverse criticism are being directed by numerous Episcopalians against the open pulpit canon which went into effect last Wednesday, because it is believed the new rule will permit 'Rome and Geneva to run rampant through the church.'

"Dr. Richards' status is that of a layman as fas as any connection with the services are concerned, the invitation is considered by the ultra conservative element as paving the way for Calvinism.

"No Catholic priest has yet been asked to preach from the 'open pulpit' in New York, but there is nothing to forbid his doing so if he is willing.

"'It is not at all likely,' said the Rev. Dr. David H. Greer, Bishop Coadjutor of the diocese of New York, yesterday, 'that any Catholic priest will at present deliver a sermon under such conditions, for none is likely to come, even if invited.

Open to Others.

"Ministers of the Baptist, Methodist and Presbyterian churches and such denominations would under the new canon simply make addresses as laymen. Catholic priests would preach as ministers, if they desired, although they are not specifically mentioned in the new canon. Those, however, who think this represents any drift toward Roman Catholicism do not thoroughly understand the question."

Among those who are most deeply concerned about the recent developments is the Very Rev. Frank E. Aitkins, dean of Trinity Cathedral, Michigan City, Ind., who sends a communication filled with forebodings to the Churchman, of New York city.

"What," he inquires, "is the terminus ad quem of the open pulpit, Geneva or Rome? When we behold this seesaw effect between Protestant ministers and Roman Catholic priests is it unreasonable to question the 'expediency' of the broad church project 'at this time?' And when they did it were they sincere in desiring Roman Catholic priests to come into their pulpits, or was it Protestant ministers only that they had in mind? It is well to remember that it is a poor rule which will not work both ways.

"And again, does it not send a quiver of chagrin through consistent minds to feel that one diocese in the land should expel a Dr. Crapsey, and at the first opportunity every other diocese in the land should open its pulpits to him without question or restraint? The General Convention has invited Rome and Geneva to fun rampant through the Church.

A Serious Blow.

"The blow of this 'open pulpit canon' has wrought a serious injury to the spiritual life of the Church and no litti setback to the efficiency of her work, and some of her clergymen are even now wavering with the dread anticipation of the possible legislation of 1910. Will it be federation 'open Bible' or 'open altar' in 1910? The implicit denial of Catholic orders contained in this 'open pul-

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The first meeting of the Baraca Bible Class for young men formed at the mid-week prayer meeting of the New Market Baptist church was held yesterday. Rev. George H. Gardner is teacher of the class and met the members in the gallery of the church at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. The class will hereafter meet regularly Sunday mornings, but yesterday's meeting place will only be used temporarily, until other arrangements can be completed.

Local ice dealers are hoping that the cold snap will last long enough to give them the opportunity for their annual cutting. The pond at New Market is entirely frozen over and the ice strong enough to give great pleasure to skaters, who are actively entering into the leading winter sport of the borough. If the cold is sustained this week, the cutting can be begun; the entire supply of ice cut last winter was exhausted about a month ago.

"Things Unseen and Eternal" is to be the topic of Rev. W. W. Casselberry's talk at the Presbyterian church tonight, when the third service of the week of prayer begun yesterday, will be held. The sermons morning and evening yesterday were well attended and much interest is being shown in the series of meetings for the week by churchgoers in general as well as by members of the parish.

The week of union services to be held at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, New Market, began last evening, when Rev. Henry N. Jordan, pastor of the church, was the preacher. The general topic for the week will be "Life with God." Rev. George H. Gardner will alternate with Rev. Mr. Jordan in the pulpit for the week, and will be the speaker at the service tonight, which will be held at 7:45 o'clock.

Tickets have been placed on sale for the minstrel entertainment to be given under the auspices of Friendship Council next Tuesday evening. The entertainment will be furnished by the Franklin Council minstrel troupe, of Plainfield, which has given several highly successful burnt cork entertainments already this season. The entertainment will be given in Friendship Hall.

Constable Robert L. Pierce, of New Market, is able to be about again after being confined to his home with an attack of the grip.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The Sunday afternoon meetings of the Port Watch Society of the Baptist church, which have been discontinued for several weeks, were resumed yesterday afternoon. Captain H. B. Saunders had charge of the meeting.

H. C. Smith has sold his candy and cigar business to Ernest Clark. The change took place Saturday. Mr. Clark intends making a number of improvements about the store.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Week of prayer services will be held at the First Baptist church this week Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, of West Seventh street, occupied the pulpit of the Congregational church, Bound Brook, yesterday morning.

The Women's Association of the Congregational church will hold a sewing and business meeting at the church tomorrow afternoon. Tea will be served.

The Women's Foreign Mission Circle of the Park Avenue Baptist church will meet tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. F. T. Ostrom, 40 Albert street. The subject will be "Medical Missions."

"What Is Worth While for the Christian?" will be the subject of the Young People's meeting for Bible study to be held at 209 East Front street, tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. All interested are invited.

A rather singular coincident was the fact that Saturday morning, Rev. George B. Shaw, former pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, preached for the first time at North Loup, Neb., and at the same hour, Rev. Dr. T. L. Gardner, formerly pastor of the North Loup church, preached in the local Seventh-Day church for the first time.

Commencing tomorrow and continuing until Friday night week of prayer services will be held at the Congregational church. The subject tomorrow night will be "Christ's Commands as to Prayer;" Wednesday night, "Triumphs of Faith;" Thursday night, "Why Are We Church Members?" Friday night, "The Glorious Gospel of the Blessed God."

Special services will be held this week under the auspices of the Park Avenue Baptist church at the homes of different members. The program for the week is as follows: Monday, "Preparation for Service," at the home of Lewis C. Meeker, 736 Kensington avenue; Tuesday, "Asking for Power," at the home of George F. Opdyke, 210 West Eighth street; Wednesday, "On the Firing Line," meeting at the church; Thursday, "Spiritual Health," at the home of C. K. Compton, 31 Duer street; Friday, "The True Centre of Life," Christian Endeavor meeting at the church.

He spent some time in the Council chamber in conference with Councilman Edward Smith, chairman of the fire and police committee. He suggested plans for conducting the business of the departments to the councilman relative to the technical details of his office.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

What has probably the greatest heart interest for all who will attend the Al. G. Field greater minstrels, which appear here at the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night, is the spectacle "The Night Before Christmas," which Mr. Field has prepared with exceeding care, and at great cost, as one of the many features with his show this year. Memories of Charles Dickens and his Christmas stories will be conjured, particularly the night before Christmas in Merry England, which that immortal author has sown deep in the memories and love of the English speaking people of the world; the night before Christmas in the Southland, the scent of the meadowsweet and the myrtle bloom, and the song of the mocking bird bidding welcome to the Redeemer's birthday; the night before Christmas in the Northland wrapt in its silvern sheen of frost and snow, the skating carnival on the ice and the children's delight, the arrival of Santa Claus, and his reindeer team, with their freight of toys and goodies. The pantomimists, skaters, animal impersonators, comedians, dancers and singers for this great spectacle, have been selected for their especial fitness as entertainers for the children, the big pantomime of Humpty Dumpty on skates being arranged specially for the especial entertainment of his youthful patrons by Mr. Field.

There's No Wolf At the Manufacturer's Door!

Don't be fooled!

What you may fancy to be the scratching of a hungry invader of your peace is more likely to be the gentle knocking of Opportunity at your door.

Don't be fooled!

Forget the wolf-scare, and don't keep Opportunity cooling her heels.

The mere fact that commercial nervousness exists and that so many manufacturers and wholesalers just now are affrighted and weakening, means the best sort of chance for the live, courageous business man to take hold and work out his biggest success.

We want to hear from that kind of manufacturers and wholesalers.

We have assisted in working out the advertising problems of a great many manufacturers who had real difficulties to encounter, and who have faced them, fought them out—and won!

And advertising—wise advertising in newspapers—has played a great big part in their successes.

We can be of the same kind of practical, profitable service to you.

May we call upon you, at your convenience, to discuss with you a co-operative plan for grasping the present advertising opportunity?

There's a way in which you can help your salesmen get more orders—or get them direct, if you want to. It's a way that gets the business, too. Our plan is not based on theory but on long and successful experience in getting business that is hard to get. It is remarkably economical and tremendously effective.

Just say you're interested, and we'll tell you all about it.

In the final disposition of the Lew Wiltse case by the National Commission, by which the player was given his absolute freedom to sign with any club he pleases for next season, Harry C. Pulliam, president of the National League, and a member of the commission, severely criticizes Manager Walter Burnham, of New York, for the attitude he showed in the case. Pulliam, in his review of the case, states that in his belief Wiltse has been greatly wronged, and urged upon the commission that that body exert its full power and demand and see to it that the player's rights are no further interfered with by any individual or club holding allegiance to organized baseball.

The Yale basketball team returned Saturday from its 4,000-mile trip, as far west as Chicago and as far south as Birmingham, Ala. The trip was the most unsuccessful of any taken by the team in years. Only three games of the twelve scheduled were won, although most of the defeats were by small scores. The officials have taken up with the Amateur Athletic Union the complaint that Yale played one unregistered team on its recent trip and another which contained two professional players, and hope that the matter can be adjusted without the formal disqualification of the Yale team, which will open its intercollegiate season in a few days.

Having given up all hope of securing Roger Bresnahan to manage the Cincinnati Reds this year, Garry Herrmann is now trying his best to secure Tommy Leach from the Pittsburg club. Leach, who is wintering in Cincinnati, says he is anxious to handle Herrmann's team and that he is tired of the Smoky City. Barney Dreyfuss, the owner of the Pittsburg club, who has never believed in strengthening rival clubs unless he is financially interested in them, does not care to turn Leach over to Cincinnati, and that means that unless Herrmann offers to put up a big bundle of cash there will be nothing doing. Herrmann, according to competent critics, made a serious mistake when he did not secure George Stallings to manage his team. Stallings would have been an excellent substitute for Ned Hanlon and was willing to take a chance with the Porktown hammer throwers. But Herrmann listened to the friendly tip offered by Dreyfuss, and Stallings was turned down. It is surmised that Barney feared that Stallings would make good. It is said that at the last moment Herrmann begged Hanlon to remain in charge of the team, but that the latter said he did not care to mix up further with the many self-appointed managers in the Cincinnati grand stand.

Willie Hoppe, the famous boy billiardist, has made up his mind that after the contests between Schaefer and Cutler for the 18-1 championship and the contest between Sutton and Morningstar for the 18-2 championship that he will get busy with challenges for both these titles. In order to be in perfect trim for these contests Hoppe has made arrangements with Sol Allinger, of Philadelphia, to play a 2,000-point match at 18-2, with A. G. Cutler, of Boston, for a purse of $500, seventy-five per cent to the winner and twenty-five per cent. to the loser. This contest will start next Monday night, the experts playing 400 points each night and 400 points Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons. They are both in excellent trim.

Melvin W. Sheppard, of the Irish-American Athletic Club, and Guy Haskins, of the University of Pennsylvania, acknowledged to be America's greatest middle distance runners, have ben matched by George V. Brown, of the Boston Athletic Association, to run 1,000 yards at the Boston Athletic Association's carnival in Mechanics' Hall, Saturday, February 1.

DR. WILSON FOR PRESIDENT?

In a lengthy editorial, followed by exhaustive quotations from his public speeches, the New York World today suggests Dr. Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton University, as an available and desirable candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination. After dilating upon the attributes essential to a successful candidacy, that progressive and aggressive spokesman for Jeffersonian doctrines, has something to say about the man.

"Dr. Wilson," the World states, "is primarily a scholar—an historical scholar—who in the course of his work and growth has become a statesman of breadth, depth and capacity, a true Democrat who, though steeped in Jeffersonian doctrines, asks not what Jefferson did a century ago but what Jefferson would do now; an able theorist but a no less competent executive, who has had much administrative experience as the head of a great university.

"Dr. Wilson is a Southerner, born at Staunton, Va., graduated from Princeton and educated in the law at the University of Virginia. Before he accepted the chair of history at Bryn Mawr he was a practising lawyer in Atlanta.

"He has been President of Princeton University since August 1, 1902. He is the author of a standard history of the United States and for twenty years he has been an illuminating writer on public questions. In another column of this page his attitude upon living issues is defined by extracts from his recent speeches and writings.

As to Dr. Wilson being an available candidate, the World asks:

"Who else could surely carry New Jersey? Who could stand a better chance of carrying New York? Who would more certainly restore Missouri and Maryland to the Democratic column and eliminate all possible doubt of the result in any other Southern State? Who has a stronger personal following, fewer enemies, nothing to retract, no entanglements, no commitments to capitalism or demagogism?

"Who would more surely command the undivided support of the powerful Independent Press? Who would appeal more strongly to the latent moral sense which twice elected Cleveland? Who would inspire a more helpful feeling of security and stability in the minds of all business men engaged in honest enterprise?"

Unquestionably Mr. Hughes has made a good Governor, but before closing the list of Presidential possibilities it might be well to wait until our own incoming executive shows the stuff that is in him.

Brownson will now take his seat along with the nature fakers and other victims of "the big stick."

IN EPISCOPAL PULPIT

pit canon' has only begun the havoc it portends.

"Let us pray that this crisis is only the 'horror of great darkness" and that the 'stil small voice' will reveal the faithfull Elijahs, many thousands who are not committed to this canonical enormity."

Several instances have recently come up in Episcopal dioceses. The Bishop was asked by a rector to sanction his invitation to permit a Baptist clergyman to preach from his pulpit on Thanksgiving Day, and from another to extend an invitation to a Roman Catholic priest on Christmas Day to preach a sermon at a special morning service, on the ground that the Feast of the Holy Nativity offered an exceptional opportunity to express the unity of Christian faith. The Bishop who hesitated about establishing a precedent, especially before the cannon was operative, declined to give his permission.

HOPE CHAPEL'S BIG DAY

Overflowing Congregations Participate in Twentieth Anniversary Services.

MR. ANDREWS REVIEWS WORK.

Eleven Charter Members of Sunday-school Present—Exercises Interesting Throughout.

In observance of the twentieth anniversary of its organization, the congregation and friends of Hope chapel assembled yesterday afternoon and last night for a "family reunion" and reminiscent services. At the gathering in the afternoon at the regular Sunday-school hour the attendance was close to 500 while at night the seating capacity in the church proper was overtaxed and extra chairs had to be provided. Many old Hope members came back for the first time in years and there were not a few who had travelled from distant cities in order to participate in the exercises.

The afternoon program was in charge of Rev. L. R. Howard, pastor of the chapel, and the platform was occupied by members of the Crescent Avenue church who have always taken great interest in the work at Hope. Among them were William D. Murray, Leander N. Lovell, A. W. Duxbury, E. E. Parvin, Henry B. Newhall and R. M. Boardman. Mr. Newhall was a visitor at the chapel on its opening day, January 1, 1888.

Following the reading of the Sunday-school lesson by Mr. Howard, Rev. F. D. Tildon, pastor of Bethel chapel, offered prayer and G. Herbert Condict, superintendent of the Sunday-school, gave an introductory address to an anniversary review by F. H. Andrews, a chapel worker who stood shoulder-to-shoulder with the late Henry C. Squires in the first years of its existence. Mr. Andrews withdrew from Hope some years ago to become superintendent of Warren chapel but always maintained his old relations so far as possible.

In his sketch he had prepared he told of Hope chapel's first inception among the members of the Crescent Avenue church and how step by step the plan assumed concrete form. Finally a lot was secured on West Fourth street opposite John, and a frame building 20 by 40 that had been serving as a home for Bethel chapel, was moved upon it. In this little building on New Year's Day, which happened to fall on Sunday, twenty years ago, the first session of Hope chapel was held. Henry C. Squires, who passed to his reward last spring, was the superintendent and remained in that capacity until death took him away; Mr. Andrews was his assistant and leader of the singing; Charles A. Hunter, then a resident of West Seventh street, was secretary, and Miss Nellie Day, now living in New York, was pianist. The teachers were Mr. Andrews, who taught the young women's Bible class; H. R. Munger, the men's and women's Bible class, and Stephen R. Struthers, Mrs. Struthers, Miss Nellie Day, Miss Jessie Day and Miss Lillie Newman.

There were twenty-nine pupils in all and these were divided as follows:

Mr. Munger's class—George Firstbrook, Sr. (deceased), William Firstbrook (deceased), D. F. Stewart, Fred Pearce, Robert Laughlin, Geo. R. Fountain, Fred C. Morris, Amos Andrews, Benjamin Hand, Mrs. William Firstbrook (now Mrs. Paul Symons), and Mrs. D. F. Stewart. Mr. Andrews' class—Mrs. Mary Johnson, Miss Lavinia Weston (now Mrs. Charles L. Holstein. Mr. Struthers' class—George E. Firstbrook, William Stewart (deceased), George Weston and Fred Firstbrook. Mrs. Struthers' class—Miss Lizzie Mowinkle (now Mrs. Charles Delahunt), Miss Lena Mowinkle. Miss Jessie Day's class—Miss Alma Johnson, Miss Elizabeth Firstbrook (deceased), Miss May Mowinkle (now Mrs. Lewis Kelley). Miss Lillie Newman's class, primary—Willie Tunison, Bertie Firstbrook, Mabel Firstbrook (now Mrs. Walter L. Hetfield, Jr.), Edna Tunison, Willie Firstbrook; visitors, Henry B. Newhall, Harry Newhall, W. H. Sampson and William H. Hillman.

Mr. Andrews made the request that as the original roll of names was called, many of the first day people who were present would announce the fact by standing up. As a result there were eleven responses, as follows: Mr. Newhall, Mr. and Mrs. Struthers, Mr. Munger, Mr. Andrews, Miss Lillie Newman, Mrs. Paul Symons, Mrs. Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., Fred Pearce, Mrs. Delahunt and Mrs. Lewis Kelley. After the roll call, Mr. Andrews spoke at some length on Hope chapel's growth since that first day, the school now numbering over 400 members while the original building has been enlarged and added to until it has been completely lost in a distinct chapel, a church and a gymnasium. He paid special tribute to the faithfulness of teachers during all these years and urged that the good work be continued.

Mr. Munger was the next speaker and supplemented Mr. Andrews' remarks relative to the devotion of the teaching corps. He raised the point—"Does it pay?" and answered it himself by declaring that the satisfaction the teachers themselves got out of the work was enough to reply in the affirmative. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue church, H. B. Newhall, and Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, Hope chapel's first pastor, were the other speakers. The singing was in charge of Judge William N. Runyon, who has been the Sunday-school pianist for ten years, and special numbers were given by the primary department.

At night the observance was in the form of a special song service and an anniversary address by Mr. Newell. Mr. Howard was again in charge and Mrs. Howard presided at the organ. A program of "old" chapel hymns had been arranged and the congregation was assisted in singing by a special chorus choir.

Mr. Newell dwelt but briefly on the events of the twenty years in leading up to his sermon but he declared that in starting on the third decade, there was one thing about Hope chapel's religion that always stood out forcibly, and that was its sincerity. There was never anything half-way about it, he said, and it was one of the secrets of the chapel's success. The subject of his sermon was "God, Not the God of the Dead But of the Living," and the discourse was a powerful argument for belief in the ever-present Saviour. Mr. Newell was called to the chapel in 1890 and remained twelve years, leaving to take up mission work in Brooklyn but now pastor of the St. Cloud church at East Orange.

Good Form for Girls.

In entering and leaving a room a young girl always permits an elder woman to precede her.

The elder woman precedes the girl on entering a car, carriage, restaurant or theatre.

When entertained at a house full of young people she will not fail to show courtesy and interest in the older members of the household.

A well bred girl will not absorb the conversation at an afternoon tea, lunch or dinner by telling flippant stories or petty gossip. She may secure a few laughs, but at the cost of respect for her good manners and girlhood.

When introductions are under way the youngest girl is the last to be introduced. She follows her mother, never precedes her, in advancing to meet her hostess.

After dancing the young girl does not thank her partner. She has conferred the favor, and he thanks her.

No well bred girl accepts any service from a man in a public place without acknowledging it by a graceful inclination of the head or a murmured "Thank you."

Miss Ethel A. Searing, of Park avenue, is confined to her home by illness.

Origin of His Name.

In correcting the exercises of her class a teacher recently observed a new name inscribed on one of the papers—Tom Brown.

She looked around the class, but could see no new boy. Not a little puzzled, she requested Tom Brown to stand.

Up jumped Tommy Smith, and the teacher got more puzzled still.

"Your name's Smith," she said, "not Brown."

Tommy looked not a little abashed and shifted uneasily from one foot to the other.

"Please, ma'am," he said, "it's owing to family trouble. I didn't do it, please, ma'am."

"But," she said sternly, "I repeat, your name is Smith."

"Please, ma'am," said the boy, "it's changed now. Ma's married the lodger."—London Mail.

GRIP EFFECTS SCHOOLS

Teachers as Well as Pupils Prevented from Returning by Illness.

SCORES HAVE GRIP OR MUMPS.

At Opening Day In City and Borough Schools, Attendance is Noticeably Lessened and Many Empty Seats.

After two weeks of vacation from school work, pupils of the public schools in the city and borough resumed their duties with the opening of the schools after the Christmas vacation this morning. In all the class rooms, high school as well as lower grades of grammar and primary classes, the attendance has fallen off, considerably due to sickness and reports of cases of grip and mumps among the school children are numerous. Among the teacherss, too, illness is responsible for the non-return to duty of nearly a half dozen instructors in the schools of city and borough.

Superintendent Henry M. Maxson, of the Plainfield schools, said today that it has been necessary to secure six substitutes in place of teachers absent from duty by illness, and in four of the cases the trouble is the grip. Speaking of the absentees among the pupils in the local schools, he said that he believed it to be caused in many cases by the prevalence of the grip and the mumps. At the city high school there is no special difference in the attendance, but in the grades there is much illness among the younger children. Superintendent Henry C. Krebs, of the borough schools, reports that one teacher has not returned because of the grip, and on both sides of the brook there have been cases of this sickness among the teachers during the Christmas holidays. Principal Ira W. Travell, of the Plainfield High School, and Principal Benjamin Phelps, of the Somerset street school, both suffered from the grip during their absence from school duties.

Miss Mary Lock, of the English department at the Plainfield High School, is dangerously ill at her home on West Seventh street as a result of complications following the grip. Her condition today shows slight improvement, inasmuch as she is resting more comfortably. Her classes at the school are being taken by Miss Anna Walrad, who has been teaching in the Syracuse High School. Miss Walrad is a graduate of Wellesley College in the class of 1906 and of the Cortland Normal School last June. Miss Ellen K. Cumming, of the city high school faculty, is confined to her home at Fredonia, N. Y., by illness. She went to Fredonia to spend her vacation and was not well enough to return. She may be absent for several weeks, and her place is being taken by Miss Laura H. Smith, who has recently been teaching in Auburn, Mass., and New Britain, Conn. She is a graduate of Colby College, Maine, and has done post graduate work at Radcliffe. Miss Ferry, of the local high school German department, was also stricken with grip at her home in Saratoga, N. Y., where she went to spend the Christmas holidays, and will not be able to return to this city for several days.

In the teaching ranks of the Washington school, the grip is responsible for the non-return of Miss Theresa Fisher, of the second grade. Miss Fisher's class is now in charge of Miss Margaret Corey. Grip also keeps Miss Anna Stillman, of the Irving School, from returning to her teaching duties. Miss Elizabeth Anderson is temporarily taking her place. Miss Adelaide Van Liew, of the Irving School teaching staff, who has been seriously ill with typhoid fever, shows consistent improvement, but is not able to resume her duties as teacher. At the Watchung School, Miss Amanda Tyler, teacher of the first grade, is confined to her home at Cortland, N. Y., with the grip, which has prevented her from resuming her duties. Her place is being taken by Miss Clara Van Fleet, a graduate of the North Plainfield High School.

Business Changes.

Robert Schreiner, who has been associated with L. W. Randolph, the West Front street druggist, as head clerk for several years, resigned his position Saturday night and is now engaged with his brother, Bertholde J. Schreiner, in the drug business at Park avenue and Second street. Mr. Schreiner is succeeded at Randolph's by Prentice Minturn, formerly of Red Bank.

McAll Auxiliary Tea.

The women of the McAll Auxiliary have issued invitations to a birthday tea to be held Thursday afternoon, January 16, at 3 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Frederick Goodhue Mead, 537 East Front street. The tea will also afford an opportunity for the members and friends to meet Mrs. A. R. Perkins, of Philadelphia, one of the national officers of the auxiliary.

—Joel Manning and family from Plainfield avenue, have moved into town and are occupying their residence just completed on West Front

CITY JOTTINGS.

—For the present week only Newman Brothers will quote a special price on White Label canned goods. Just the opportunity to secure a supply.

—Wire trouble at the local telephone office was responsible for a tap of the city fire gong at about 9 o'clock last night and the alarm system in the borough was also effected so that the North Plainfield bell sounded several taps. The trouble was almost immediately remedied.

—Miss Sadie Searing, formerly of this city, but late of East Orange, has returned here and taken her old position with J. A. Fass, proprietor of The Paris cloak store on West Front street. She was with Mr. Fass for three years and when her father moved to East Orange, she accompanied him, taking a position in a Newark store. She assumed her old position this morning.

DOMESTIC SUPERSTITIONS.

Strong Tea.—To make tea too strong is a sign you will make friends.

Weak Tea.—If you make it too weak, then you will lose friends.

Burned Bread.—If you burn bread while cooking, some one is angry with you.

Opening Canned Fruit.—If while opening a can of fruit or any similar thing the juice should happen to spurt up in the operator's face, it is a sign of some coming good.

Burning Bread.—When bread, cake or pie will burn in spite of you, your husband or lover is angry.

Cork Jumping Out of Bottle.—If a cork pops out of a bottle suddenly, you have an unknown enemy.

Making Bread.—If you sing while making bread, you will cry before it is eaten.

Apron Strings.—If your apron becomes untied, it is an indication that somebody is speaking of you.

Making Coffee.—To forget to put coffee in the coffeepot is the sign of a coming gift.

Boiling Soup.—When soup continues to boil after it has been removed from the fire, the cook will live to a good old age.

Kettle Spout Backward.—To accidentally place the teakettle on the stove with the spout toward the back is sign of company.

Burning Coal.—If a coal of fire falls on the floor, it is a sign a stranger is coming to see you.

When Awakened.—When you are sleeping and somebody comes and your drowsiness at once is gone, the person that came will be rich before long.

Things He Saw.

A gentleman in a Liverpool restaurant the other day thought he would have a joke with the waiter and asked him if he had ever seen a sausage roll.

"Yes," replied the waiter. "I have not only seen a sausage roll, but I have seen a biscuit box, a table spoon, a bicycle pump, a penny stamp, a chimney sweep, a chain link, a nose gay, a camera slide, a garden fence, a sword fish, a spoke shave, a wall flower"—

But when he got to "a fire escape" the gentleman thought it was time he escaped too.

As he was going the waiter went on with "a tap turn, a cake walk, a mountain climb, a sky lark, a honey comb"—

But by this time the customer was hurrying down the street in a dazed condition.—Liverpool Mercury.

A Fudge Tip.

Many people have difficulty in making fudge that is creamy, rich and smooth.

The trouble lies in overboiling. The candy should always be taken from the stove the minute it makes a soft ball that can just hold together when dropped in ice water.

If allowed to cook longer, the fudge will be stiff. If less time is given, it will be gritty and sticky.

Beat hard with a wooden spoon. It is better than the wire beaters, as it permits more vigorous whipping.

Do not add the vanilla until the chocolate has caaled slightly..

Pour into greased pans while the mixture is still thin enough to smooth or the surface will not be glazed when cold.

An Electric Monarch.

A million of men have died to preserve the constitution as it is, but Providence has passed no law exempting Americans from the pressure of events or the operation of necessities. They will have to accept them, willingly or unwillingly, and will gradually find that the only effect of the changes is to make their choice of a president, and therefore of his cabinet, for cabinet ministers in America are legally only clerks—more and more a matter of vital importance. The president of the United States will in no long period of time be the greatest elective monarch history has ever known—London Spectator.

Coldest Morning Yet.

According to the official figures furnished by Weather Prophet John Neagle, this morning was the coldest of the season. The mercury touched the point of twelve degrees above zero. Yesterday morning at 8 o'clock the official thermometer registered 22 degrees above and at 8 o'clock last night it was 17 degrees above.

Mr. Stryker Injured.

Mrs. Irving Weaver, of Orchard place, has received word that her nephew, Peter C. Stryker, is in a critical condition at the Memorial Hospital in Morristown as a result of injuries received by falling from a train near his home in Wharton, N. J. His left arm was so badly crushed that it was amputated at once as were the toes of his right foot.

H. C. Rockey, a prominent member of the order of the Knights of the Golden Eagle in Philadelphia, will visit Freedom Castle, No. 42, K. G. E., of this city, tomorrow night, when three candidates will receive the first degree. Officers will be installed by District Deputy Granville T. Moore and staff of New Brunswick Castle, No. 71.

THE MERCY OF THE KING

By EDWARD F. ROBERTS

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"The Comte de Sevres is the man."

The speaker, a sinister-looking man, whose thin figure was attired from head to foot in black, leaned across the table as he spoke and directed a piercing look at his companion, who sat back partially concealed in the gloom.

At the other's words, however, he started violently forward.

"Ventresaintgris," he exclaimed; "it is impossible."

The oath, the rugged face with its great hawk nose and bold black eyes alike proclaimed Henry IV., yesterday of Navarre, to-day of France.

With characteristic vehemence the king continued:

"You grow old and foolish, Caduc. By the splendor of God, I would wager my head on the faith of de Sevres."

The celebrated astrologer and secret agent whom the king addressed remained unmoved at this outburst, and when his master had paused he resumed.

"It is, nevertheless, the truth, sire. De Sevres is, as you know, in love with Mlle. de Longchamps, the daughter of the man who hates you most in all France. It is she who has seduced him. At her father's bidding she has given him a powder which I prepared. De Sevres will serve your wine at the banquet to-night. He will put the powder in your cup, and if it was what they think it the house of Navarre would then end."

The king shuddered and turned pale at the suggestion of poison, a fear which shadowed the life of a warrior famous for his reckless courage on the battlefield. He strode hastily up and down the apartment before he spoke again.

"Caduc," he said, "the Comte de Sevres is a Catholic, and in my court has many enemies. Look to it that you are not one. Sangdieu, if you are you will hang for it. Say nothing and do nothing. I shall settle this matter myself."

The astrologer rose, bowed silently and passed out of the room with a curious noiseless step. At the door he almost collided with a young man who entered the room without knocking, taking advantage of that lack of ceremony which the first of the Bourbons loved to affect among his intimates.

Henri started slightly when he saw the newcomer, then greeted him boisterously.

"Ha! Ha! My dear count. What fair lady has kept you from your allegiance so long on this our first day in Paris, as king at last?"

The Comte de Sevres appeared somewhat confused at the king's raillery. He hesitated a moment, then said rapidly:

"In truth, sire, it was of a lady I wished to speak to you. I wish your permission to marry the Mlle. de Longchamps."

At the mention of the name Henri's face clouded. He looked long and searchingly into the face of the young courtier, then he said:

"I will give you my answer at tomorrow night's banquet."

The count started at this strange reply, but before he could say anything further the king, with a suppressed sigh as he noted the movement, extended his hand in token that the interview was ended.

The banquet with which Henry the Great celebrated his victorious entry into Paris has passed into history. Its gorgeous barbarism far surpassed anything before attempted at a court famous throughout Europe for its riotous extravagance. Throughout the city great fires had been lighted at the cross streets and whole oxen and sheep roasted for the benefit of the burghers, while tons of wine broached at every corner sent a drunken and fickle populace uproarious with the praises of their new sovereign.

In the royal banquet room the envoy of Elizabeth of England had just concluded a long-winded greeting, couched in sonorous Latin, about one word in ten of which the king understood. As the envoy concluded, Henri, with that rude and simple good nature with which he had baffled so often the most skilled diplomatists, shouted:

"Ho, a cup to the health of our sister of England." He motioned to the Comte de Sevres, who stood at his elbow, and who turned to pour out the wine. As he did so the king fixed his eye on the further end of the room. As he watched, curiously intent, the tapestry on the wall was agitated and a hand shot out with a warning gesture.

At the sight, the king sprang from his chair and turned fiercely on the Comte de Sevres, drawing his sword as he did so.

"Assassin and traitor," he shouted, "down on your knees!"

The young count, pale as death, dropped on his knees before the king. In his hand he still clutched mechanically the cup of wine.

Henri, whose violent temper had completely mastered him, seemed for an instant about to run his sword through the kneeling man. He checked himself, however, and turned with a gesture to the astonished courtiers.

"Gentlemen," he said in a tone of suppressed passion, "this puppet that I have made has this night attempted to assassinate me. What is your verdict?"

A confused murmur of astonishment and incredulity ran through the hall, breaking suddenly into a tremendous babel of shouts, above which rose ever clearer and louder the ominous cry:

"Death on the wheel!"

Suddenly into the midst of this tumult swept a woman, radiantly fair, but with a look of terror and despair distorting her features. She made her way rapidly to where the king was standing and throwing herself on her knees before him cried:

"Mercy, sire, mercy! It is I who am the guilty one."

Henri, ever master of men and slave of women, softened perceptibly as his eye fell on the beautiful girl.

"Sdeath," he muttered, "so you would poison me."

At the word poison the Comte de Sevres, who up to this had appeared dazed, gave a convulsive start, but before he could speak the girl continued:

"I never knew it was poison, sire. I was told it was a charm to save your grace from the stain of heresy and bring peace to our unhappy land. I learned the truth too late."

The king smiled enigmatically, then he said:

"Ventresaintgris. Since it is merely a charm the comte will surely not object to drink it."

In a dead silence the comte, a flush spreading over his pale features, rose to his feet and holding aloft the wine cup, which through the whole scene he had never relinquished, he cried: "God save the king!" Then he drained the cup.

The girl who had watched her lover, motionless with horror, now sprang to her feet and drawing a dagger from beneath her cloak raised it aloft with a bitter cry.

"I go, too!"

But quick as she was the king was quicker. Seizing her wrist he twisted the dagger from her grasp, and then to the amazement of the courtiers who had watched the near tragedy in silent fascination, he burst into a great roar of laughter. Still holding the girl's hand he took the unresisting hand of the count and placing the two together said:

"I forgive your strange method of conversion, my dear comte. Take your bride, but learn in future," and his eye grew stern, "that kings are not to be played with."

TRIBUTE TO AMERICAN GIRL.

Well-Intentioned Rhapsody That Hardly Does Subject Justice.

We like poetry, we do, a whole lot. Whether it comes in the form of rhythmic verse or mellifluous prose, it hits us in a tender place. That is why we feel good thrills coming over us when we find the Oklahoma State Capital quoting some one as saying that "when God made the American girl, He sent His angel messengers throughout all the star-strewn realism of space to gather all there was of beauty and brightness, of enchantment, of glamour. When those angels returned from their harvesting of beauty and threw down their glittering burden at His feet He began, in their wonderful presence, the fashioning of the American girl. He wrought with the gold and the gleam of the stars, shifting glories of the rainbow hues, and the pallid silver of the moon. He wrought with the crimson which swooned in the rose's rubied heart, with the pure sweet snow which gleams from the lilies' petals and the fire of the flames which dash and leap from jewel's depth. Then glancing deep into His own bosom He took of the love which gleamed there like some rare pearl beneath the wind-kissed waves of a summer sea, thrilled into the form He was fashioning, and all heaven and earth rejoiced, for lo! He had wrought the American girl." Yum, yum, also b'gosh.—Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser.

HAD WITNESSES IN PLENTY.

Whole Troop Rallied to Defense of Beloved Captain.

A story is told concerning a captain of cavalry in the old army days who was inclined to gaze too long upon the flowing bowl. He finally came to grief and was placed under arrest, charged with drunkenness. The judge advocate who was sent to conduct the court-martial was fond of the bluff old soldier, and in his heart hoped that he might be able to clear himself.

On the day of the trial the two, defendant and prosecutor, were talking.

"They have me at last," said the captain. "I do not see how I can clear myself."

"Have you no witnesses?" asked the judge advocate.

"None," replied the despondent officer.

"Suppose we call your first sergeant and ask him."

The first sergeant was duly called.

"Have I any witnesses?" asked the captain. The old Irishman was quite certain that the captain did have witnesses. He was dismissed with orders to bring the witnesses equipped with side arms, to the captain's tent in a half hour. At the time appointed the sergeant stepped into the room, saluted, and reported: "Sor, the troop is ready to be sworn."

Loss of Life Increased.

In 1905 fiscal year, according to the annual report of United States Supervising General Uhler, with a total of 600,000,000 passengers carried on waters coming under the United States steamboat inspection service, only one life was lost out of every 2,300,438. In 1906 fiscal year, owing to the stranding of the steamer Valentia on Vancouver island, with a loss of 121 lives, and the unprecedented number of casualties on Lake Superior that year, the loss of life was increased to one out of every 1,796,000 people caried.

"For what do you drop men?"

"For falsehood, deception, any dishonesty."

"And you don't drop a man when you read in the papers that one of the best two clubs in town has expelled him?"

She gave him a troubled glance, and, naively, "But you are still a member of the other, are you not?" Then, hardening, "It was common, common, thoroughly disgraceful and incomprehensible!" And with every word uttered insensibly warming in her heart toward him whom she was chastening: "It was not even bad. It was worse than being simply bad. It was stupid!"

He nodded, one hand slowly caressing the dog's head where it lay across his knees.

She watched him a moment, hesitated, then, smiling a little, "So now I know the worst about you, do I not?" she concluded.

He did not answer. She waited, the smile still curving her red mouth. Had she been too severe? she wondered. "You may help me to my feet," she said sweetly. She was very young.

He rose at once, holding out his hands to aid her in that pleasantly impersonal manner so suited to him, and now they stood together in the purple dusk of the uplands—two people young enough to take one another seriously.

They walked for awhile, subdued, soberly picking their path through the dusk. After a few moments she began to feel doubtful, a little uneasy, partly from a reaction which was natural, partly because she was not at all sure what either Quarrier or Major Belwether would think of the terms she was already on with Siward. Suppose they objected? She had never thwarted either of these gentlemen. Besides, she already had a temporary interest in Siward—the interest that women always cherish, quite unconsciously, for the man whose shortcomings they have consented to overlook.

As they crossed the headland through the deepening dusk the acetylene lamps on a cluster of motor cars spread a blinding light across the scrub. The windows of Shotover House were brilliantly illuminated.

"Our shooting party has returned," she said.

They crossed the drive through the white glare of the motor lamps. People were passing—grooms with dogs and guns and fluffy bunches of game birds; several women in motor costumes, veils afloat; a man or two in shooting tweeds or khaki.

As they entered the hall together she turned to him, an indefinable smile curving her lips; then, with a little nod, friendly and sweet, she left him standing at the open door of the gunroom.

CHAPTER THREE

THE first person he encountered in the gunroom was Quarrier, who favored him with an expressionless stare, then with a bow, quite perfunctory and noncommittal. It was plain enough that he had not expected to meet Siward at Shotover House.

Kemp Ferrall, a dark, stocky, active man of forty, was in the act of draining a glass when through the bottom he caught sight of Siward. He finished in a gulp and advanced, one muscular hand outstretched. "Hello, Stephen! Heard you'd arrived, tried the Scotch and bolted with Sylvia Landis. That's all right, too, but you should have come for the opening day. Lots of native woodcock—eh, Blinky?" turning to Lord Alderdene, and again to Siward, "You know all these fellows—Mortimer yonder"— There was the slightest ring in his voice, and Leroy Mortimer, red necked, bulky and heavy eyed, emptied his glass and came over, followed by Lord Alderdene, blinking madly through his shooting goggles and showing all his teeth like a pointer with a tick. Captain Voucher, a gentleman with the vivid coloring of a healthy groom on a cold day, came up, followed by the Page boys, Willis and Gordon, who shook hands shyly, enchanted to be on easy terms with the notorious Mr. Siward. And, last of all, Tom O'Hara arrived, reeking of the saddle and clinking a pair of trooper's spurs over the floor—relics of his bloodless Porto Rico campaign with Squadron A.

It was patent to every man present that the Kemp Ferralls had determined to ignore Siward's recent foolishness, which indicated that he might reasonably expect the continued good will of several sets the orbits of which intersected in the social system of his native city. Indeed, the few qualified to snub him cared nothing about the matter, and it was not likely that anybody else would take the initiative in being disagreeable to a young man the fortunes and misfortunes of whose race were part of the history of Manhattan Island. Siwards, good or bad, were a matter of course in New York.

So everybody in the gunroom was civil enough, and he chose Scotch and found a seat beside Alderdene, who sat biting at a smoky pipe and fingering a tumbler of smokier Scotch, blinking away like mad through his shooting goggles at everybody.

"These little brown snipe you call woodcock," he began—"we bagged nine brace, d'you see? But of all the damnable bogs and covers"—

"Rotten," said Mortimer thickly. "Ferrall, you're all calf and biceps, and it's well enough for you to go floundering into bogs."

"Oh, go and pot Beverly Plank's tame pheasants," retorted Ferrall amiably. "Captain Voucher had a blank day, but he isn't kicking."

"Not I," said Voucher. "The sport is capital if one can manage to hit the beggars."

"Oh, everybody misses in snap shooting," observed Ferrall—"that is, everybody except Stephen Siward with his unholy left barrel. Crack, and," turning to Alderdene, "it's like taking money from you, Blinky, which reminds me that we've time for a little preference before dressing."

His squinting lordship declined and took an easier position in his chair, extending a pair of little bandy legs draped in baggy tweed knickerbockers and heather spats. Mortimer, industriously distending his skin with whisky, reached for the decanter. The aromatic perfume of the spirits aroused Siward, and he instinctively nodded his desire to a servant.

"This salt air keeps one thirsty," he observed to Ferrall. Then something in his host's expression arrested the glass at his lips. He had already been using the decanter a good deal. Except Mortimer, nobody was doing that sort of thing as freely as he.

He set his glass on the table thoughtfully. A tinge of color had crept into his lean cheeks.

Ferrall, too, suddenly uncomfortable, stood up, saying something about dressing. Several men arose a trifle stiffly, feeling in every joint the result of the first day's shooting after all those idle months. Mortimer got up, with an unfeigned groan. Siward followed, leaving his glass untouched.

One or two other men came in from the billiard room. All greeted Siward amiably, all excepting one, who may not have seen him—an elderly, pink, soft gentleman with white downy chop whiskers and the profile of a benevolent buck rabbit.

"How do you do, Mr. Belwether?" said Siward in a low voice without offering his hand.

Then Major Belwether saw him, bless you—yes, indeed! And, though Siward continued not to offer his hand, Major Belwether meant to have it, bless your heart, and he fussed and fussed and beamed cordiality until he secured it in his plump white fingers and pressed it effusively.

There was something about his soft warm hands which had always reminded Siward of the temperature and texture of a newly hatched bird. It had been some time since he had shaken hands with Major Belwether. It was apparent that the bird had not aged any.

Slipping his arm through the pivot sleeve of Lord Alderdene's shooting jacket, hooking the other in Siward's reluctant elbow and driving Mortimer ahead of him, Major Belwether went garrulously away up the stairs, his lordship's bandy little legs trotting beside him, the soaking gaiters and shoes slopping at every step.

Siward turned off down his corridor, unaware that the Sagamore pup was following close at his heels until he heard Quarrier's even, colorless voice, "Ferrall, would you be good enough to send Sagamore to your kennels?"

"Oh, he's your dog! I forgot," said Siward, turning around.

Quarrier looked at him, pausing a moment.

"Yes," he said coldly; "he's my dog."

For a fraction of a second the two men's eyes encountered; then Siward glanced at the dog and turned on his heel with the slightest shrug, and that is all there was to the incident—an anxious, perplexed puppy lugged off by a servant, turning, jerking, twisting, resisting, looking piteously back as his unwilling feet slid over the polished floor.

So Siward walked on alone through the long eastern wing to his room overlooking the sea. He sat down on the edge of his bed, glancing at the clothing laid out for him. He felt tired and disinclined for the exertion of undressing. The shades were up, so that they were like a dark mirror reflecting his face. He inspected his darkened features curiously. The blurred and somber tinted visage returned the stare.

"Not a man at all—the shadow of a man," he said aloud, "with no will, no courage, always putting off the battle, always avoiding conclusions, always skulking. What chance is there for a man like that?"

As one who raises a glass to drink wine and unexpectedly finds water, he shrugged his shoulders disgustedly and got up. A bath followed. He dressed leisurely and was pacing the room, fussing with his collar, when Ferrall knocked and entered, finding a seat on the bed.

"Stephen," he said bluntly, "I have not seen you since that break of yours at the club."

"Rotten, wasn't it?" commented Siward, tying his tie.

"Perfectly. Of course it doesn't make any difference to Grace or to me, but I fancy you've already heard from it."

"Oh, yes. All I care about is how my mother took it."

"Of course she was cut up, I suppose?"

"Yes. You know how she would look at a thing of that sort—not that any of the nine and seventy jarring sets would care, but those few thousands invading the edges, butting in, half or three-quarters inside, are the people who can't afford to overlook the victim of a fashionable club's displeasure—those and a woman like my mother and several other decent minded people who happen to count in town."

Ferrall, his legs swinging busily, thought again, then, "Who was the girl, Stephen?"

"I don't think the papers mentioned her name," said Siward gravely.

"Oh, I beg your pardon. I thought she was some notorious actress. Everybody said so. Who were those callow fools who put you up to it? Never mind if you don't care to tell. But it strikes me they are candidates for club discipline as well as you. It was up to them to face the governors, I think."

"No, I think not."

Ferrall's legs swinging busily, considered him.

"Too bad," he mused. "They need not have dropped you."

"Oh, they had to. But as long as the Lenox takes no action I can live that down."

Ferrall nodded: "I came in to say something—a message from Grace—confound it, what was it? Oh, could you—before dinner—now—just sit down and with that infernal facility of yours make a sketch of a man chasing a gun shy dog?"

"Why, yes, if Mrs. Ferrall wishes."

He walked over to the desk in his shirt sleeves, sat down, drew a blank sheet of paper toward him and, dipping his pen, drew carelessly a gun shy setter dog rushing frantically across the stubble and after him, bareheaded, gun in hand, the maddest of men.

"Put a Vandyke beard on him," grinned Ferrall over his shoulder. "There! O Lord, but you have hit it! Put a ticked saddle on the cur—there!"

"Who is this supposed to be?" began Siward, looking up. But "Wait!" chuckled his host, seizing the still wet sketch and making for the door.

Siward strolled into the bathroom, washed a spot or two of ink from his fingers, returned and buttoned his waistcoat, then, completing an unhurried toilet, went out and down the stairway to the big living room. There were a number of people there—Mrs. Leroy Mortimer, very fetching with her Japanese-like coloring, black hair and eyes that slanted just enough; Rena Bonnesdel, smooth, violet eyed, blond and rather stunning in a peculiarly innocent way; Miss Caithness, very pale and slimly attractive, and the Page boys, Willis and Gordon, delightfully shy and interested and having a splendid time with any woman who could afford the intellectual leisure.

Siward spoke pleasantly to them all. Other people drifted down—Marion Page, who looked like a schoolmarm and rode like a demon; Eileen Shannon, pink and white as a thorn blossom, with the deuce to pay lurking in her gray eyes; Kathryn Tassel and Mrs. Vendenning, whom he did not know, and finally his hostess, Grace Ferrall, with her piquant, almost boyish, freckled face and sweet, frank eyes and the figure of an adolescent.

She gave Siward one pretty sun browned hand and laid the other above his, holding it a moment in her light clasp.

"Stephen, Stephen," she said under her breath, "it's because I've a few things to scold you about that I've asked you to Shotover."

"I suppose I know," he said.

"I should hope you do. I've a letter tonight from your mother."

"From my mother?"

"I want you to go over it—with me—if we can find a minute after dinner." She released his hand, turning partly around. "Kemp, dinner's been announced, so cut that dog story in two. Will you give me your arm, Major Belwether? Howard," to her cousin Mr. Quarrier, who turned from Miss Landis to listen, "will you please try to recollect whom you are to take in—and do it?" And as she passed Siward in a low voice, mischievous and slangy, "Sylvia Landis for yours, as she says she didn't have enough of you on the cliffs."

The others appeared to know how to pair according to some previous notice. Siward turned to Sylvia Landis with the pleasure of his good fortune so plainly visible in his face that her own brightened in response.

"You see," she said gayly, "you cannot escape me. There is no use in looking wildly at Agatha Caithness"—he wasn't—"or pretending you're pleased," slipping her rounded bare arm through the arm he offered. "You can't guess what I've done tonight. Nobody can guess except Grace Ferrall and one other person. And if you try to look happy beside me I may tell you—somewhere between sherry and cognac—oh, yes, I've done two things—I have your dog for you!"

"Not Sagamore?" he said incredulously as he was seating her.

"Certainly—Sagamore. I said to Mr. Quarrier, 'I want Sagamore,' and when he tried to give him to me I made him take my check. Now you may draw another for me at your leisure, Mr. Siward. Tell me, are you pleased?" for she was looking for the troubled hesitation in his face, and she saw it dawning.

"Mr. Quarrier doesn't like me, you know"—

"But I do," she said coolly. "I told him how much pleasure it would give me. That is sufficient, is it not, for everybody concerned?"

"He knew that you meant to"—

"No; that concerns only you and me. Are you trying to spoil my pleasure in what I have done?"

"I can't take the dog, Miss Landis."

"Oh," she said, vexed, "I had no idea you were vindictive."

There was a silence. He bent forward a trifle, gravely scrutinizing a "hand painted" name card, though it might not have astonished him to learn that somebody's foot had held the brush. Somewhere in the vicinity Grace Ferrall had discovered a woman who supported dozens of relatives by painting that sort of thing for the summer residents at Vermilion Point, down the coast. So, being charitable, she left an order and, being thrifty, insisted on using the cards spite of her husband's gifts.

People were now inspecting them with more or less curiosity. Siward found his "hand painting" so unattractive that he had just tipped it over to avoid seeing it, when a burst of laughter from Lord Alderdene made everybody turn. Mrs. Vendenning was laughing; so was Rena Bonnesdel, looking over Quarrier's shoulder at a card he was holding—not one of the "hand" decorated, but a sheet of note paper containing a drawing of a man rushing after a gun shy dog.

The extraordinary cackling laughter of his lordship obliterated other sounds for awhile. Rena Bonnesdel possessed herself of the drawing and held it up, amid a shout of laughter, and, to his excessive annoyance, Siward saw that unconsciously he had caricatured Quarrier, Ferrall's malicious request for a Vandyke beard making the caricature dreadfully apparent.

Quarrier had at first flushed up; then he forced a smile, but his symmetrical features were never cordial when he smiled.

"Who on earth did that?" whispered Sylvia Landis apprehensively. "Mr. Quarrier dislikes that sort of thing, but of course he'll take it well."

"Did he ever chase his own dog?" asked Siward, biting his lip.

"Yes—so Blinky says—in the Carolinas last season. It's Blinky; that's his notion of humor. Did you ever hear such a laugh? No wonder Mr. Quarrier is annoyed."

The gay uproar had partly subsided, renewed here and there as the sketch was passed along and, finally making the circle, returned, like a bad penny, to Quarrier. He smiled again symmetrically as he received it, nodding his compliments to Alderdene.

"Oh, no," cackled his lordship; "I didn't draw it, old chap!"

"Nor I. I only wish I could," added Captain Voucher.

"Nor I, nor I. Who did it?" ran the chorus along the table.

"I didn't do it," said Sylvia gravely, looking across at Quarrier. And suddenly Quarrier's large handsome eyes met Siward's for the briefest fraction of a second, then were averted. But into his face there crept an expressionless pallor that did not escape Siward—no, nor Sylvia Landis.

Presently under cover of a rapid fire of chatter she said, "Did you draw that?"

"Yes; I had no idea it was meant for him. You may imagine how likely I'd be to take any liberty with a man who already dislikes me."

"But it resembles him in a very dreadful way."

"I know it. You must take my word for what I have told you."

She looked up at him. "I do." Then: "It's a pity. Mr. Quarrier does not consider such things humorous. He—he is very sensitive. Oh, I wish that fool Englishman had been in Ballyhoo!"

DR. MORGAN'S ADDRESS

Newark Pastor Gives Powerful Talk at Y. M. C. A. Theatre Meeting.

ON THE CHOICES IN LIFE.

Citations from History of Men Who Have Decided for Right In Their Lives.

In a powerful, straight-forward talk at the men's mass meeting held in the New Plainfield theatre yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., Rev. W. H. Morgan, D. D., pastor of the Central Methodist Church at Newark, spoke from the tet: "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve." His thought developed the idea that there is a problem before every Christian man, weekdays in business as well as on Sunday; and this problem is the one of choice.

At the outset of his remarks, the speaker dwelt especially on this problem as it came in the life of the Prophet Moses. He spoke of Moses as a child of the Oppression, who, though brought up in the Egyptian court, was early instilled with the idea that he was not of the patrician, Pharasee class, but rather a champion of the oppressed Hebrews. Though this was taught him by his mother, who, according to Bible history, was his nurse during te early years of his life at the Egyptian court, he was forced to choose for himself when he became of age. Moses' choice was to champion the Hebrew peoples in their suffering, rather than to live the luxurious life of an Egyptian nobleman. He sacrificed everything of this life in which he had been reared and went forth as leader of the Israelitish tribes through the wilderness. Dr. Morgan stated that Rameses, who was doubtless a companion of Moses, in his belief that the greatest things of life lay in connection with the court, has not as prominent a place in history today as had the Hebrew prophet Moses. The speaker cited other instances where men had been called upon to make decisions, mentioning especially the case of Horace Bushnell, the evangelist, whom he said elected to the work of saving souls rather than following the laws, in which he undoubtedly had a great future before him. Dr. Morgan's concluding remarks were of a more personal nature. He said that every man, in his living, must some time come face to face with situations which demand decisions, and he urged his hearers to deliberate carefully over such decisions, choosing rather lasting benefits that present gain and advancements.

The meeting was well attended and was led by Superintendent James R. Joy, of the First M. E. Sunday-school. The scripture reading was by Rev. Abel C. McCrea, pastor of the First M. E. Church, and the full choir of that church rendered several selections in connection with the meeting. A feature of the musical part of the service was the singing of Miss Anna Lucretia Case, of the First Presbyterian church choir. E. C. Martin led the choir singing.

THE LARGEST FINANCIAL INSTITUTION IN PLAINFIELD

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Eliza P. Smock.

Mrs. Eliza Smock, widow of George Smock, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Penfield, of Park avenue. She had been ill but a short time. Mrs. Smock was in her eighty-first year and had lived in Plainfield for a long time, residing for many years on what was known as the Smock farm on Rock avenue, afterward purchased by the city for the location of its sewage system disposal beds. The funeral will be held at her late home Wednesday afternoon at 2:30.

Albert M. Bowzer.

Albert M. Bowzer, son of William Thomas and Mary Grace Bowzer, died yesterday at the home of his parents on East Third street, near Richmond, following a long illness. He was twenty years old. The funeral will be at the parents' home and will be strictly private.

—For a delicious cup of coffee, nothing can equal Neuman Brothers' special blend of Mocha and Java. They guarantee it to be perfection itself.

Mice and Matches Started It.

Some pet white mice and parlor matches were the cause of a small fire at the home of Joseph Schwalbach on Westfield avenue, Scotch Plains, Saturday night, about 8 o'clock. Mrs. Schwalbach had been doing her usual shopping and when she returned home she discovered the house afire. The loss will be about $100.

Week of prayer services will be held at the First Baptist church tomorrow, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss will be in charge.

MORE PAY FOR POLICE

Ordinance Gives Raise All Around from Patrolmen to Captain Inclusive.

PASSED ON SECOND READING.

Only Costs City $820 More a Year But Means Much to the Superior Officers.

One of the most important matters acted upon by the Common Council at its adjourned meeting last night was an ordinance readjusting the salaries in the police department. It was presented by Councilman Frank Randolph, adopted on two readings and ordered advertised, but not until considerable discussion and a ten minute recess had been taken.

The opposition to the adoption of the ordinance came from Mr. Hibbard, chairman of the fire and building committee, who believed that his department should be included in the readjustment. Mr. Tyler took the same position.

Although Mr. Randolph explained that the Police Board had gone into the matter thoroughly and decided that the increase would about cover the expense entailed by the superior officers in purchasing their uniforms, Mr. Hibbard urged that the Common Council should go into a committee of the whole and discuss all salaries, including those in the fire department.

Mr. Buxton said he thought the ordinance a step in the right direction. He suggested that the fire committee recommend similar changes. It could be seen that a majority of the members favored the ordinance, but Mr. Tyler asked for executive session, subsequently all voted in favor of the ordinance on both readings.

Ever since the salary question was fixed in the police department last year there has been a feeling that not enough distinction was shown between the patrolmen and superior officers' pay. It was argued that while Chief Kiely's salary was raised to $1,600, where it still remains, the pay given the captain, sergeant and detective sergeant was insufficient.

The ordinance raises the salary of captain from $1,100 to $1,200, that of sergeant and detective-sergeant from $1,020 each to $1,040, while according to the new classification of five grades, the patrolmen who have been in the service five years or more will receive $1,000 a year instead of $996.

The pay in the other four grades for patrolmen will be as follows: Four years, $960; three years, $924; two years, $864; one year, $792, which will be the same as at present. The establishment of the various grades will give a policeman an incentive to do good work and secure promotion through meritorius service. The roundsmen who are at present receiving $996, the same salary as a patrolman, will under the new schedule get $1,080, while the doorman will get $60 a month as now. The total increase is about $820 a year.

As far as the sergeants and detective-sergeants are concerned the new salary basis puts Plainfield in about a class with Elizabeth, where these officers are paid $1,186, which is the lowest salary paid these officers out of eleven cities in the State. In Orange they are paid $1,200, East Orange, $1,288; West Orange, $1,200, and Montclair, $1,200.

Mayor made the customary appointment of special policemen, the same being confirmed. A glance through the list following, shows that it has been reduced considerably, which is in accordance with Mr. Fisk's idea to have only such men serving as specials as the city actually needs. The list is divided to comprise city employes, private watchmen, extras, banks, school janitors, factories, church jaintors and automobile specials, and includes the following:

Charles A. Peterson, Alexander D. Ayers, William Addis, Jacob Dunham, Thomas O'Gorman, Jeremiah Cash, Ameiga Branatti, Harry Berlowitz, James Babbitt, Jacob Kriney, William Forrestel, Robert McCormack, Tucker Johnson, Henry Pugh, Charles Harris, Frank Kelso, Jesse M. Scull, Joseph B. Morrison, Benjamin W. Evans, George A. Broadbent, J. J. King, H. A. Peterson, Thomas A. Clarkson, Samuel J. Robinson, Rutherford B. Dally, C. J. McCarthy, William Jaeger, Isaac Kennedy, Edward Maynard, George Dean, Edgar Brokaw, F. W. Pearce, Elias H. Bird, Daniel McCarthy, Dr. F. C. Ard, Benjamin Wood, Albert A. Tilney, William A. Coddington, Willard Wadsworth, M. B. Mellor, J. P. Stevens, Siemon A. Cruikshank and Edwin Dobbs.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clark, Jr., of Jackson avenue, spent Sunday at the home of their son, Robert M. Clark, in Brooklyn. Mrs. Clark will remain until tomorrow.

N.P. EXEMPTS MAY GET WARREN'S OLD EDIFICE

At a regular meeting of the North Plainfield Exempt Firemen's Association held at Debele & Stahl's, last night, action was taken toward securing a regular meeting place for the organization. A committee composed of Frank Kesselring, William Mills and James Walker was appointed by President J. C. Anderson to arrange for securing a hall where the firemen will in future hold their regular meetings. While nothing definite has been done about the matter, it is believed that the firemen will attempt to secure Debele Hall as their meeting place, and the committee is planning to make a visit of inspection to the place early next week.

For some time past, the firemen have been meeting at Saengerbund Hall, but the accommodations there have proved unsatisfactory to them and last night's meeting was held at Debele & Stahl's store. It is understood that William G. Debele, owner of the hall, which was formerly Warren chapel, will offer the building to the firemen, after consultation with the North Plainfield High School Athletic Association.

At the meeting last night, resolutions on the death of Lieutenant Elden G. Smalley, who was a member of the organizatiton, were framed by the firemen and a copy of these will be forwarded to Mrs. Smalley.

SOME BIG THEATRICAL OFFERINGS ARE BOOKED

Beginning with Saturday, when Al. G. Field and his peerless troupe of minstrel men hold the boards, Manager Counihan has arranged a series of high class theatrical offerings for local playgoers. The list includes several of the season's reigning successes and the heaviest productions on the road.

On Monday, Wilton Lackaye will come to Plainfield with his new play, "The Bondman," considered by the critics the greatest drama he has ever undertaken. He is appearing at Newark this week and will go to New York for a run the latter part of the month. On Tuesday, January 14, will be presented George M. Cohan's latest and greatest success, "Fifty Miles from Boston," bringing to Plainfield the greatest cast that has ever been in the theatre. It is headed by dainty Edna Wallace-Hopper and includes Emma Janvief, who will be remembered as "Madame Stitch" in "The Mayor of Tokio;" Fritz Williams, Master Russell Pincus, James G. Marlowe, Donald Brian and James H. Bradbury. "Fifty Miles from Boston" is described as "a play with music," and calls for a company of sixty people.

Later in the month will come Eddie Foy in "The Orchid;" Joseph Wheelock, Jr., in "Just Out of College," and several other well known productions. In February dates have been closed for Grace George, Digby Bell and Virginia Harned and later on the Rogers Brothers will return in their new play.

Trinity's Supper.

At the meeting of the Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church, yesterday afternoon, the subject of holding an annual supper was again brought up for discussion and while it was not thought advisable to hold the regular turkey supper, it was unanimously agreed that the society hold an oyster supper the last Tuesday night of this month, January 28, or February 4. A special meeting of the society will be held Tuesday afternoon of next week to fix upon a date and arrange for the supper, which is to be planned as a social function rather than a financial affair.

Miss Cardner Injured.

Miss Mabel Cardner, of Orange place, slipped and fell on the icy sidewalk on Watchung avenue, near the railroad bridge, today noon, receiving a deep and painful wound in the back of the head. She was assisted to Cadmus Brothers' drug store, given temporary treatment and then sent home. Later Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan was summoned and it was found necessary to take several stitches to close the wound.

Third Complaint Against Reed.

Truant Officer Miss Adelaide Ball appeared in the city court this morning and for the third time since she has been in office preferred a charge against Patrick Reed, colored. She complained to Judge Runyon that Reed not only refused to allow his daughter to go to school but would not permit the school physician to examine her. A formal summons was made out and Reed will be arraigned tomorrow morning.

SCHOOL BOARD OFFICERS

J. B. Probasco Re-elected President at the Organization Meeting.

PAY BILLS TOTALLING $1,650.

All Committees Reappointed—December's Receipts Aggregate $48,-516.84.

At the annual meeting of the Plainfield Board of Education held at the Plainfield High School last night, the present officers were re-elected to serve for another year. These are: Dr. J. B. Probasco, president; Leander N. Lovell, vice-president; Floyd T. Woodhull, secretary; Frank B. Clark, clerk of the board. This election was practically the only business of the January meeting. Charles F. Abbott was the only member absent.

After the roll-call and acceptance of the minutes, the Board formally adjourned sine die and Mr. Lovell was made chairman of the meeting as the new Board proceeded to the election of officers. The usual budget of bills was audited and ordered paid, amounting in all to about $1,650. The city tax collector's report was read, showing collections for December amounting to $45,597.92. The total receipts of the Board for the month of December were 48,516.78, and the balance on hand at the end of the year was $23,768.84. The report of the school medical inspectors was read, and showed that during the month of December 215 pupils had been examined at the various schools of the city.

President Probasco appointed the same committees of the Board as served during the past year. These as as follows: Teachers and Text Books, Messrs. Probasco, Lovell and Abbott; Books, Stationary and Supplies, Messrs. Woodhull, Cave and Probasco; Building and Repairs, Messrs. Abbott, Probasco and Woodhull; Fuel, Messrs. Cave, Lovell and Woodhull; Finance, Messrs. Lovell, Abbott and Cave.

TO PUBLISH NAMES OF TAX DELINQUENTS

Following the suggestion of Mayor C. J. Fisk in his annual message, Chairman Buxton of the finance committee of the Common Council, offered a resolution at the adjourned meeting last night, authorizing the tax collector to publish the list of delinquent taxpayers, exclusive of poll and dog, up to January 21, twice a week for two weeks in the local newspapers and that if the various amounts are not then paid, the collector is to proceed in the usual way in collecting the tax.

This plan suggested itself to Mayor Fisk as a good one to reduce the list of delinquents and get as much as possible of all taxes in the city treasury early in the year.

ANNOUNCE PROGRAM FOR THIRD M'INTYRE CONCERT.

A feature of the third McIntyre Chamber Music Concert to be given at the Casino Thursday night, will be the rendition of Beethoven's opus 11, trio for piano, violin and 'cello. The program, as at previous concerts, will be of a very high standard. Mr. McIntyre will be the piano soloist, and the assisting artist will be Paul Dufault, tenor, whose singing last year was received so favorably last year.

Other assisting artists will be Vladimir Dubinsky, 'cellist, who is no longer a stranger to local music lovers, and Maurice Kaufman, violinist, whose work at preceding concerts has won for him many admirers. The program will be as follows:

Beethoven, opus 11, trio and piano, violin and 'cello; Allegro con brio, Adagio, Allegretto and finale; song, Pensee d'Automne; piano solo, Papillons, Schumann; songs, The Poet's Life and Through the Long Days, Elgar; Allegro con brio, trio for piano, violin and 'cello, Sternberg.

Week of Prayer at Trinity.

William R. Kriney, president of the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church, will be the leader of the meeting of the week of prayer at the church tonight. The topic will be "Triumphs of Faith." Last night's meeting was in charge of Elder F. E. Smith, and the topic was "Things Unseen and Eternal." In the absence of the pastor, the following elders of the church will preside at the services to be held nightly in the church during the week of prayer: Wednesday, Elder Robert Clark, Jr., topic, "The Church Made Glorious;" Thursday, Elder Horace J. Martin, Sr., topic, "Missions, Home and Foreign;" Friday, Elder George L. Van Emburgh, topic, "Temperance."

MISS COCK'S LECTURE

Illustrated Talk on Venetian Artists Before Monday Afternoon Club.

THE BELLINIS AND CARPACCIO.

Philadelphian to Give Another Lecture, On Giorgione and Veronese on January 20.

To the art-lover the creations of the old masters are always full of interest, and the lecture before the Monday Afternoon Club on "Venetian Artists," by Miss Marion Cock, of Philadelphia, drew a large audience yesterday afternoon at the Casino, where the club meetings are held. With slight reference to Giotto, Michel Angelo, Leonardo da Vinci and otther early painters, Miss Cock spoke mainly of the Bellinis and Carpaccio, who lived in the fifteenth century. The illustrations of their paintings were of a high order of excellence, the stereoscopic views having been made from photographs taken by herself.

The descriptions of the pictures and the reflections of Miss Cock showed her to be in thought and feeling an artist with thorough knowledge of her subject. She said of Venice it was that city of the Adriatic that in art was never an infant or stripling but that walked alone in its early efforts, for in the study of Venetian art we always miss the faulty attempts of artists of other cities and nations. In her comments on Byzantine art, Miss Cock claimed that art is always a reflection of a people's life.

The lecturer showed many beautiful Madonnas and pictures of the Bellinis that decorated the altars of churches and the walls of the ducal palace in the fifteenth century. The elder brother, Gentile Bellini, was summoned to Constantinople by Mohammed 2nd and there painted a number of pictures, among them a portrait of the sultan, which was one of those exhibited. Giavanni Bellini, the younger brother, surpassed the ider in grace and execution, his excellence increasing with his years and some of his finest work was done when he was eighty years of age.

The lecturer concluded with many fine views of the pictures of Carpaccio, who was a wonderful story teller with his art, depicting in beautiful combinations pageants full of glorious coloring and artistic incident.

Miss Cock will give another lecture before the club on January 20, her subject being a continuation of Venetian artists, Giorgione and Veronese.

N. P. H. S. A. A. GETS BUSY ON ITS NEW GYM SCHEME.

To defray the expense of maintaining Debelee Hall as a gymnasium and basketball floor, the North Plainfield High School Athletic Association will sell tickets to the pupils of the school allowing them the privileges of the floor, locker room, and use of the gymnasium the school-pupils are planning to have there. Membership tickets, giving the above mentioned rights and privileges were placed on sale at the Somerset street school today. The rights to use the hall, which was formerly Warren chapel were given to the borough school athletic association about a month ago by William G. Debele, the owner. No provision is made for the girls of the school, who, it is understood, were meant by Mr. Debele to have the use of the hall for basketball and general exercises.

The athletic association of the school, composed of the boy pupils, had a meeting in the assembly hall at the close of school yesterday. A committee composed of George Parsons and Harry Smith, was appointed to arrange for the purchase of jerseys, which will be black with the sleeves ringed with maroon. The monogram insignia of the school will be embroidered in maroon on the jerseys.

George Parsons, Fred McClintock and Harry Smith were appointed a committee to frame regulations and rules to govern the use of Debele Hall by the pupils, assigning certain times for basketball and general exercise. The girls' athletic activities of the school were not represented at the meeting.

Broken Wire Delays Trolley Cars.

All of the trolley cars in the city and borough were stalled for three-quarters of an hour last night the result of a broken trolley wire beneath the Richmond street railroad bridge. The break occurred at 10:15 o'clock and there were many disgruntled passengers, some of whom decided to walk home in preference to waiting for the return of the power.

MORE SCHOOL TEACHERS

Four Appointments are Made by Plainfield Board of Education.

SOME TO FILL VACANCIES.

The Misses Catharine Carman, Gladys Brown, Anna Walrod and Laura H. Smith the Appointees.

Upon the recommendation of Dr. J. B. Probasco, president of the Plainfield Board of Education and chairman of the board committee on teachers, four new teachers were formally appointed at the January meeting of the board held at the Plainfield High School, last night. None were selected from New Jersey, the lucky ones being Miss Catherine Carman, of Pottsdam, N. Y.; Miss Gladys Brown, of Providence, R. I.; Miss Anna Walrad, of Syracuse, N. Y., and Miss Laura H. Smith, of New Britain, Conn. These new teachers will begin their duties in the various schools within a week.

Miss Carman is to take the place of Miss Grace Jansen, of the Washington School, and has already begun her teaching duties, starting in with the opening of the local schools after the Christmas vacation yesterday. Miss Gladys Brown will begin teaching here about February 1, as general assistant, and will probably be assigned to the Bryant School. Miss Mary Decker, who has been acting as general assistant at the Bryant School, has been transferred to the Franklin, where she is now in charge of a class. Miss Brown is a graduate of the Rhode Island State Normal School, and comes to this city to take the place of Miss Martha E. Dean, whose resignation was accepted by the board last night.

Miss Anna Walrad, who has been on the faculty of the Syracuse High School, will begin her teaching duties at the Plainfield High School tomorrow morning, when she will take Miss Ellen K. Cumming's classes. Miss Laura H. Smith, who comes to this city from New Britain, Conn., will appear in the class room for the first Monday morning, when she will be put in charge of Miss Mary Lock's class at the city high school.

BOROUGH FATHERS ASK FOR REFERENDUM BILL

Endorsing the proposition to introduce bills in the Legislature to consolidate Plainfield and North Plainfield and to annex the latter's territory to Union county, North Plainfield's Council has framed resolutions which were sent this morning to Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, chairman of the Bi-Municipal Consolidation Commission, which recently made a favorable report on consolidation with annexation of city and borough. The resolutions follow:

"Be it resolved by the Mayor and Council of the borough of North Plainfield that we heartily approve the recommendation made by the Consolidation Commission favoring the presentation to the Legislature of a bill providing for the consolidation of the borough of North Plainfield with the city of Plainfield under one county government, and that the request as mad by the Mayor and Council of 1907 that the said commission have prepared such a bill is hereby approved and reaffirmed.

"Resolved, That the clerk transmit a copy of the foregoing resolution to the Consolidation Commission with the assurance that as a body and individually we stand ready to assist the commission in every way possible."

BOROUGH MAYOR SWEARS IN 12 SPECIAL MARSHALS.

At the North Plainfield police court last night, Mayor Samuel Townsend administered the oath of office to twelve special marshals. This is an increase in numbers. The Mayor also made a short address to the newly sworn officers, urging a conscientious discharge of duty.

Frank Whiteley, who has served as special officer "over the brook" for the past twenty-two years, was again appointed special officer and duly sworn in by the Mayor last night. The others who took the oath last night were Dr. D. C. Adams, John H. Smalley, Theodore Martin, Herman Klinsman, John H. Johnson, Peter Burns, Ambrose Campbell, John Barrett and the janitors of the two borough schools, Richard MacDonald and Eric Soule.

MRS. COLBY PRESENTS $500 TO THE Y.W.C.A.

In memory of her father, the late Charles Hyde, who was a prominent resident of this city for many years, Mrs. Colby, wife of State Senator Everett Colby, has given the Young Women's Christian Association of Plainfield, $500. Announcement of the generous gift was made at the meeting of the Board of Directors of the association last night, and was a source of great encouragement.

This is another evidence of the interest shown in Plainfield institutions by Mrs. Colby. Since her marriage to the State Senator she has on several occasions remembered worthy objects here, including Muhlenberg Hospital, the Children's Home, while together with her husband, she contributed a generous amount toward the purchase of the parish house property for St. Stephen's church.

The money will be applied to the fund established to reduce the mortgage of $12,000 on the association property at 212 East Front street, and it is hoped that Mrs. Colby's gift will be an incentive to others who may wish to help in this work. There are still a few subscriptions unpaid and the treasurer, Mrs. James R. Joy, would be pleased to receive them before the annual meeting on Monday, January 20.

CITY FATHERS MAY BUY SMALLEY BUILDING

After the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last night, the members went into a committee of the whole to discuss the proposition submitted by David T. Kenney to sell the city the Smalley building for $39,000. It is said that sentiment seemed to be in favor of accepting Mr. Kenney's proposal and rejecting that of Powlison & Jones, who offered their property on East Front street for $40,000.

It is said that the fact that several thousand dollars would be necessary to equip the Powlison & Jones structure for city purposes, while the Smalley building is already provided with such equipment, has led the members to favor the purchase of the latter property.

There is only one thing that appears to stand in the way of the deal, and that is the question of suitable quarters for the police department. If arrangements can be made to take care of the police, there appears to be no doubt but that the finance committee will recommend the purchase of Mr. Kenney's property. It would be necessary to build a stable back of the building in which to keep the patrol wagon and horse and this, it is thought, could be done at a nominal cost. The easy access from Second street to the building is desirable. The police board is of the opinion that the store now occupied by Smalley Brothers as a market is of sufficient size for a court room and to allow room for the six cells in the rear.

In case the city should decide to purchase this building it would mean the removal of all other tenants, including the Union County Investment Company, which occupies half of the top floor; Lawyer Arthur Murphy, who has two large rooms on the second floor; H. C. VanEmburgh, civil engineer, who has two rooms on the second floor and Smalley Brothers, who occupy one-half of the first floor.

With these rooms vacant it would allow the city plenty of room in which to provide dormatories for the policemen and all of the city departments could be taken care of nicely, it is said. The finance committee will hold a meeting tomorrow night, when some definite plans will be decided upon for presentation to the Common Council at an early date.

Mrs. Peck Acting President.

The Plainfield Children's Home Association announced today that Mrs. J. C. Peck, one of the vice-presidents, is now acting president in place of the late Mrs. M. E. Kimball, no regular election having been held to fill the office for a definite time. This action was taken because of the absence of Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, another vice-president, who is now in Cuba, and who has always taken the most active interest in the Home. It is probable that Mrs. Peck may be chosen as the head of the association when the election is held, but until such time she will act in that capacity.

In the City Court.

In the city court, yesterday morning, J. Rosenthal, a junkman, was fined $5 for a violation of the junk ordinance in not keeping a proper record book. Sentence was suspended on John Ahearn, arrested on Park avenue Saturday afternoon for drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

CAUGHT ONLY TO ESCAPE

Frank Rose, "Dutch" Ides Lieutenant, Gains His Freedom Soon After Capture.

THREE COMPANIONS JAILED.

Plainfield Youth Included in Quartet Nabbed at Greenbrook Tanks By Detective Laveratt and Staff.

Three hours after he and three other youthful desperadoes had been captured by railroad detectives at the Green brook tanks, Frank Rose, lieutenant of the "Dutch" Ides gang, made his escape shortly after eight o'clock last night. While being taken from Dunellen to the Middlesex county jail at New Brunswick in charge of Constable Wesley Blaine, a change of trolley cars at Bound Brook gave him the opportunity he sought. Though his wrists were bound together by the usual set of chains, he suddenly leaped away from the officer who was walking directly back of him totally unprepared for a hostile move, and disappeared under the railroad subway even before a pistol shot could be directed toward him.

Rose has always been regarded as one of the worst of the Ides gang and has a record for law-breaking as long as that charged up to the leader. For the past few months he has been jogging up and down the New Jersey Central from Jersey City to Easton and there is hardly a city or town in between where he and his pals have not "pulled a job." Detective Michael Laveratt has been on his trail without cessation for weeks and at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon located his quarry at a camp fire midway between Dunellen and the railroad tanks. With him were three of his cronies and marshalling four of his staff, Laveratt surrounded the crowd. They were taken by surprise and submitted to arrest when they found themselves looking down the barrels of several revolvers.

Beside Rose, the capture yielded George Lowden, eighteen years old, who lives at West Third street and Stebbins place, this city; Herman Ludwig, twenty-four years old, of Elizabeth, and William Conway, twenty-one years old, of Elizabeth. Though the youngest of the lot, Lowden has long been under surveillance by the local police as he is wanted in Elizabeth and other places for robberies. The bluecoats also assert that he was a member of the gang that held up and robbed Joseph Konack, of Bound Brook, on a Lehigh Valley freight train several weeks ago, after which they jumped off at Samptown and ran into Plainfield. Konack followed and one of the gang was caught in a backyard within a stone's throw of Lowden's home. The others escaped and it is believed thaey hid in his house. So far as known, however, Lowden or none of the others ever committed any crime within Plainfield's limits.

Ludwig is unknown to Chief Kiely and Laveratt and in appearance is an improvement over the others. He is noticeable through a large lot of gold filling in his teeth and generally dresses in a neat and careful way. Conway is an old offender and with Lowden is wanted in Elizabeth and Bayonne, while the Central Railroad would like to have them for freight car thieving.

Immediately after the capture, Laveratt had the quartette locked up in the Dunellen jail but took steps to have them taken to New Brunswick as soon as possible. He made arrangements with Constables Robert Pierce and Blaine to get Rose, Ludwig and Conway to the Middlesex jail, while Lowden was turned over to County Detective George Totten, of Somerville, who has a claim against him for a store robbery at Bound Brook. The officers assured him that the men would be taken care of and Laveratt and his men came on to Plainfield to report to Chief Kiely. They brought with them three loaded revolvers taken from Rose, Conway and Lowden.

Laveratt was greatly chagrined when informed of Rose's escape but though fagged out by his long pursuit, immediately took up the trail at Bound Brook. The entire Jersey Central staff joined him today and they have hopes of landing him within a short time.

WESTFIELD.

There is no all-night telephone pay station in Westfield, and a movement is under way to have a telegraph office and pay station on Broad street that will be open all night. The only telegraph office in town now is at the railroad depot.

Westfield skaters had the first good skating of the season on Westfield Park Lake yesterday. Echo Lake, at Branch Mills, is partly frozen over, but will not be safe for skating for several days if the weather continues cold.

The program arranged for the union evening services in Westfield churches are as follows: Tuesday, Baptist church; Wednesday, Congregational church; Thursday, Presbyterian church; Friday, Methodist church.

Charles Kimball announces the engagement of his sister, Miss Mabel Kimball, of Westfield, and Spencer Gales, of Elizabeth.

Dr. Sherman Cooper, of the Westfield Board of Health, is ill at his home with pneumonia.

BASKING RIDGE.

Owing to this being the week of prayer the regular monthly business meeting and social of the Christian Endeavor Society has been postponed for one week as has the meeting of the Shakespeare Club.

The funeral services of Mrs. Walter Holmes, of Stirling, were held yesterday in the Myersville church. The interment was in the burying grounds adjoining the church.

The public schools opened yesterday morning after a two weeks' vacation.

Joseph Holman and family have been visiting at Belle Mead.

Miss Grace Kelley has been visiting relatives at Bayonne.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Contrary to expectations, Mayor Harry J. Swackenhammer made no appointment for the office of borough recorder, left vacant by the resignation of H. L. Hathaway, at the Council meeting last night. At the organization meeting of the Council New Year's Day, the Mayor appointed H. L. Hathaway as borough recorder in place of David S. Campbell. At the conclusion of the meeting, Mr. Hathaway resigned, and the Mayor was to have filled the office at the first meeting of the Council held last night. No appointment was announced, however, and Dunellen is now without a borough recorder. The Mayor has made no announcement regarding when he will name a successor to Mr. Campbell.

The public schools opened yesterday after the two weeks vacation of the Christmas holidays, and pupils of the borough and New Market schools took up their work again. There are many absences reported and a large percentage of these are attributed to the great prevalence of the grip. The school children are not the only sufferers from the disease, for many of the boroughites are confined to their homes with either the grip or the mumps.

"The Triumphs of Faith" is to be the topic of the special service in the week of prayer to be conducted at the Presbyterian church tonight by Rev. W. W. Casselberry. Last night's meeting, the topic of which was "Things Unseen and Eternal," was well attended, and much interest is being shown by the parishioners in these meetings of the week of prayer, being observed all over the world.

The weather today looks more like work for the borough government in enforcement of the snow and ice ordinance than work for the local ice cutters or enjoyment for the skaters. The temperature was several degrees higher this morning than yesterday, when the thermometer, registering 14 degrees, showed it to be the coldest day of winter so far.

D. Kenyon, of New Market, has made a great improvement in the appearance of his property on Main street by the removal of shrubbery and the trimming of the trees.

The January meeting of the Dunellen Board of Education will be held tonight in the school building.

The appearance of W. R. Hetfield's building on North avenue has been much improved by re-painting.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The annual election for fire department officers will be held in the town rooms, tonight. The usual contest will be on between Excelsior and Bucket and Engine Company. Philip Jahn, foreman of Excelsior, will be that company's candidate. The Bucket and Engine Company has not announced its ticket yet.

Henry C. Meyer, who has purchased the Marsh property, corner of Front street and Park avenue, intends making a number of improvements about the place. When done he will occupy the house, renting his Park avenue property.

Funeral services of Rose Carrono, the six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Carrono, were held from the parents' home on Stanbery avenue this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Daniel T. Hendrickson, principal of the school, who has been spending his holiday vacation at his home in Port Monmouth, N. J., returned yesterday.

Charles Eller is the local member of the January petit jury. W. H. Carter being drawn from the borough.

Special meetings will be held in the Baptist church at 8 o'clock every night this week, except Saturday.

Miss Caroline Lent has returned from a two weeks' visit at her home at Palmyra, N. Y.

Skating was good yesterday on Marsh Lake and the other small ponds near here.

POINTS FOR THE BUYERS

When you get ready to build let Titus H. Laury, the contractor, furnish you with an estimate. His work always stands the test of time.

If you are discouraged looking for a suitable home either to purchase or rent, don't give up. Call on M. F. Gano, of Park avenue. He always has a list of desirable properties.

When you want a pair of shoes or your old ones repaired let George Stagaard, of Church street, do the work. He uses only the best leather and the workmanship cannot be excelled.

SACHAR & SACHAR - - - 139 E. Front St.

Plainfield, N. J.

—Miss Ella De Camp, of West Front street, has resigned her position at the Paris Cloak Store.

The Board of Commissioners held its regular monthly meeting at Firemen's Hall last evening.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Week of prayer services are being held at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, commencing last night and continuing until Thursday night.

The Men's Club of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church has arranged to have an address by Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, former pastor, at its next meeting.

The Sunshine Mission Band of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will meet in the church parlors Thursday afternoon. Miss Beatrice Hedges will be the leader.

Howard H. Williams has been chosen one of the editors of "The Messenger," the monthly publication of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, succeeding L. R. Hopton.

A young men's Bible class has been formed at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church and Frank L. Holt has been secured as teacher. A similar class for women has been formed and Mrs. I. C. Pierson is the teacher.

The sewing meeting of the Women's Home Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will be held Friday afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock. New work will be undertaken by direction of the Board of Ministerial Relief.

A meeting in the interest of Hampton Institute, to be addressed by Dr. Fussell, the president, and a graduate, Captain Washington, will be held at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church Wednesday night, January 15. The Hampton Male Quartet will sing.

The Young People's Association of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will resume its meetings Friday night, with their Bible classes—one by Dr. Zelie in the Epistle to the Ephesians, one by Howard H. Williams in Isaiah and one by Miss Elsie Goddard for younger members in The Life of Christ.

Miss Etta Raybert, soprano soloist at Trinity Reformed church, whose singing is a delight to the congregation, rendered Rudyard Kipling's "Recessional," Sunday morning, as an offertory in a manner that called forth the highest commendation. This selection, the music for which was written by Reginald De Koven, was rendered by Miss Raybert without notes and was very effective.

PERSONAL.

Hugh Baldwin, of Park avenue, is spending the winter in Texas.

Mrs. J. L. Ludlum, of East Front street, is spending the winter in Madeira.

Mr. and Mrs. William Campbell, of Somerset street, are confined to their home with the grip.

Mrs. Cornelius W. Lockwood, of Newburg, N. Y., has taken up her residence at 936 Arlington avenue.

Dr. Harry Bull, of Syracuse University, is visiting his sister, Miss Dorothea Bull, of West Fifth street.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Abbott, formerly of Central avenue, are living at the Berkley, New York, for the winter.

Mrs. John T. Baker and son, J. Whitney Baker, of Stelle avenue, are living this winter at the Ormond, Broadway and 70th street, New York.

Mrs. M. A. Carman, Miss Julia M. Carman and Mrs. Margaret Cavill, formerly of Franklin place, have decided to make their home at Miami, Florida, permanently.

CLOSED PORTALS.

H. C. Rockey, of Philadelphia, a prominent member of the Knights of the Golden Eagle, will visit the local Eagles at the meeting of Freedom Castle tonight. At this time three candidates will be initiated in the first degree and the recently elected officers will be installed by District Grand Chief Granville Moore, of New Brunswick, who will come to the local lodge with the installation team from New Brunswick Castle.

Amusement at Proctor's Elizabeth Theatre.

Originally, novelty and surprise can always be found at Proctor's Elizabeth theatre and go hand in hand with the many good things in the varieties which patrons expect, and which are furnished in every one. For this week a show composed almost entirely of new acts will be presented.

The Reid Sisters are the headliners. As dainty dancers they are above par, presenting a turn that is fetching and artistic in its poetry of motion.

Kane with his two wonderful mechanical figures doing one of the best ventriloquist acts on the vaudeville stage.

The Bradfords, colored entertainers, present a neat and refined singing and dancing specialty.

Laura Morris, Harry Morgan and Lealy Dean Hart present playlet of New England Life entitled "Cynthia's Visit."

William Williams appears in character impersonations.

Amita, the electrical fire dancer, presents one of the most novel and startling fire dancing acts on the vaudeville stage. Motion pictures, illustrated songs take a very prominent part in the week's offerings.

Thomas Morgan, the illustrated song singer, next week will render some of the latest and most popular songs of the day.

Plainfield, N. J., January 7, 1908.

In Newark the authorities propose to establish a rigid poster censorship. Already the new aldermanic committee has placed the ban on a number of objectionable theatrical advertisements. The condemned pictures are considered injurious to public morals and particularly harmful for children to view. Plainfield has not been afflicted by such an abuse in late years, the present theatrical management showing no inclination to cause to be displayed posters of an offensive character.

If Mr. Jerome wants to redeem himself, he should bring all the power in his command to bear in the effort to prevent the publication of the filthy testimony in the Thaw case. It is to be expected that the Postmaster-General will also take prompt action to prevent a repetition of the first trial when reports of the offense testimony were circulated through the mail.

Now just try and imagine the Jersey Democracy being "safe and sane" enough to send a Dr. Woodrow Wilson delegation to Denver.

To pick Bryan in preference to Wilson would be like taking a rhinestone instead of a diamond.

Philathea and Baraca Classes Elect.

The annual meeting of the Philathea and Baraca Bible classes was held at Faith chapel, last night, in the new class room. Encouraging reports were presented by the retiring officers and after the transaction of routine business officers were elected by the societies as follows: Philathea—President, Mrs. Christopher Myers; vice-president, Mrs. Gilbert Van Nest; secretary, Miss Ida M. Hodgin; treasurer, Mrs. E. Frank; teacher, U. B. Crane. Baraca—President, David C. Patterson; vice-president, Ira L. LaRue; secretary, D. McInness; treasurer, Christopher Utzinger; teacher, Rev. J. W. Musson; assistant teacher, Frank Stewart. After the election refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed.

Will Answer Perplexing Questions.

Under the caption, "Pandora's Box," Rev. E. E. Roberson, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, announces that it will be opened at the church every Sunday night when some perplexing questions will be found therein and answered in sermons to be preached by him as follows January 19, "Why Did God Make Man After Angels Had Fallen?" 26, "Who Was Cain's Wife?" February 9, "Did God Destroy the Whole World by the Flood?" 16, "Could the Life of Man Be as Long Now as in Olden Times?" 23, "Does the Devil Look Like His Picture?" March 1, "What Do Angels Look Like?" 8, "What Is the Lake of Fire and Brimstone?"

To Repeat Lecture on Scotland.

George N. Cross, a companion of Rev. A. C. Nickerson, pastor of All Saints' Unitarian church, on his recent trip abroad, will lecture on "Scotland, the Land of Lochs and Braes," at the Plainfield High School tomorrow morning. On this occasion he will repeat the lecture given last week at the Unitarian church, and will again show the slides of views he took with his camera while abroad. Up to a short time ago, Mr. Cross was a private tutor at Haverhill, Mass., but has recently entered the field of public lecturing.

Week of Prayer at Hope Chapel.

The first of a "week of prayer" meetings will be held at Hope chapel tonight. It will be in charge of James Penny and "Intemperance will be the subject. Thursday night will be a preparatory service and Friday night Fred Wharton will lead a meeting, subject: "The Triumph of Faith." The sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be celebrated at the chapel next Sunday.

ABOUT NEW LEGISLATURE

Meeting of the 132nd Legislature of New Jersey a Week from Today.

PERSONNEL OF MEMBERSHIP.

Governor Fort's Inauguration—Veterans of the Two Houses—Occupations and Ages.

A week from today the one hundred and thirty-second Legislature of New Jersey will be organized in Trenton, and on the same day a week later the new Governor will be inaugurated. Governor Fort will begin his administration with a Republican majority of two-thirds in each House, which will make easy accomplishment all party legislation which may be agreed upon by him and his associate leaders. It was desired by the Governor-elect that the inaugural ceremonies should be free of all unnecessary pageantry and that he be permitted to take the oath of office in as simple a manner as possible. He has been dissuaded of this idea, however, and the ceremonies will take place in Taylor Opera House with customary ostentation. Fifty-seven years ago George T. Fort, uncle of the new Governor, and a Democrat, was sworn into office as the Chief Executive, and he served a full term of three years.

John Franklin Fort will be the fifth consecutive Republican Governor since 1896, when the election of John W. Griggs broke the long line of Democratic Governors since Marcus L. Ward retired from office in 1869. Those Democrats who served in the chair of State from 1869 to 1896 were Randolph, Parker, Bedle, McClellan, Ludlow, Abbett (two terms), Green and Werts. With the exception of Werts, all of them have departed this life. When Governor Stokes retires from office there will be five ex-Governors living — Werts, Griggs, Voorhees, Murphy and Stokes.

The New Legislature.

The Legislature will be organized by the election of Thomas J. Hillery, of Morris, as President of the Senate, and Howard L. Tyler, of Cumberland, as secretary, and Frank B. Jess, of Camden, as Speaker of the House, and James Parker, of Passaic, as clerk. Mr. Robbins, of Burlington, will lead the majority in the Senate, and Mr. Silzer, of Middlesex, the minority. The majority leader in the House will be William P. Martin, of Essex, and the minority leader Mark A. Sullivan, of Hudson. Most of the Senate employes of 1907 will retain their places in the new organization, while in the House there will be an entire change from the personnel of last year.

The political complexion of the Legislature will consist of fourteen Republicans and twenty Democrats in the House, making a Republican majority of twenty-seven on joint ballot. The Legislature of 1907 was composed of forty-four Republicans and thirty-seven Democrats, giving a Republican majority on joint ballot of seven.

The Veterans of the Senate.

This year's Senate will contain several members of much ability and experience, such as Bradley, Colby, Minch, Wakelee, Hillery, Robbins, Avis, Silzer, Gebhardt, Ackerman, Frelinghuysen and Cornish. There are four new Senators—Wilson, Leavitt, Harrison and Fielder. Mr. Wilson is entirely new to legislation, while Messrs. Leavitt, Harrison and Fielder were former members of the Assembly. Messrs. Minch, Wakelee and Hillery were re-elected last November. The oldest Senator in point of service is Mr. Cornish, who is entering upon his ninth year, but not consecutive. Mr. Wakelee is entering upon his eighth consecutive year, and so is Mr. Hand, but the latter, however, had a lapse between his second and third terms. Messrs. Bradley and Brown are beginning their sixth year of service; Messrs. Gebhardt, Price and Hinchliffe, their fifth, and the third-year Senators are Messrs. Plummer, Frelinghuysen, Colby, Avis and Ackerman. Those in their second year are Messrs. Robbins and Silzer.

There are three ex-Speakers—Robbins, Bradley and Avis—and twelve former Assemblymen in the Senate. The oldest in years is Dr. Price, of Sussex, who is 58, and next to him is Mr. Hinchliffe, who is 57. The youngest Senator is Mr. Avis, of Gloucester, and Mr. Colby comes next. There are eight Senators over 50 and seven under 40. The average age of twenty-one Senators is 46 years, being only six years more than that of the sixty Assemblymen.

Fifteen Senators Native Jerseymen.

Of the Senators fifteen are natives of New Jersey; three New York, and one each of Pennsylvania, Maryland and Wisconsin. There is not a foreign-born Senator in the lot. The New Yorkers are Wakelee, Hinchliffe and Ackerman. Mr. Bradley comes from Maryland and Mr. Colby from Wisconsin.

The Senate has seven lawyers—Wakelee, Robbins, Avis, Fielder, Gebhardt, Silzer and Hillery. There are four manufacturers, three bankers, a merchantt, physician, druggist, brewer, contractor, civil engineer and insurance broker. There isn't a farmer in the bunch.

The House Personnel.

"Dory" Gibbs, of Camden, is the father of the House. He has just passed his 69th milestone and is entering upon his sixth consecutive year of service. Mr. Buck, of Cumberland, is also a sixth-year member. Mr. Keffer, of Atlantic, is the "baby" of the House, being only 24 years old. Mr. Braun, of Essex, is about five months older than Mr. Keffer. These young men are lawyers by profession. Mr. Irick, of Burlington, is 62, and he and Mr. Gibbs are the only members over 60. Ten members are over 50 and eight under 30. The youngsters, besides Keffer and Braun, are Lake, Lowrey, Tumulty, Olwell; Sullivan and Burpo. The average age of the sixty Assemblymen is 40 years.

There are only three foreign-born Assemblymen—Potter, of Camden, who came from England; Holtzapfel, from Germany, and McCoid, from Scotland. Two are natives of Ohio—Kerstein and Moxon, of Union; one of Nevada—Mr. Martin, of Essex; one, New Hampshire—Mr. Clark, of Essex, and one Virginia—Dr. Ginnelley, of Mercer. All the others are natives of New Jersey, Hudson supplying nine; Essex, eight; Middlesex, five; Burlington, four; Cumberland and Mercer, three each; Passaic, two, and there is one each from Gloucester, Monmouth, Morris, Salem, Sussex and Warren.

The third-year Assemblymen are Irick, Cattell, Holcombe, Thompson, Morris and Firth. Twenty-five are in their second year of service, while there are twenty-seven new members, seven of whom are from Essex. The other Essex men—Martin, Morgan, Hines and Colgate—served in 1906, but were not members in 1907.

Occupations of Members.

Seventeen of the Assemblymen are lawyers, Hudson producing seven and Essex three. The latter are Martin, Young and Braun. There are seven manufacturers and seven merchants, five farmers, three editors, two physicians, two clerks and two professors, a Mayor without an occupation, a blacksmith, miller, undertaker, insurance agent, surveyor, painter, bottler, dentist, livery keeper, broker, machinist, and one is retired from business altogether. One physician, Dr. Lowrey, of Essex, is a Republican, and the other, Dr. Ramsay, of Middlesex, is a Democrat. The college professors are Dr. Prince, of Passaic, and Dr. Thompson, of Mercer. The druggist is Mr. Kirstein, of Rahway, and the dentist, Mr. Ginnelley, of Mercer. The undertaker is Mr. Potter, of Cumberland. With several lawyers, a bottler, two physicians, a druggist, a dentist and an undertaker, the House should be fully equipped for business and protected from any casualties which may occur.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Among the many singers that A. G. Field has with his Greater Minstrel Show this season may be mentioned John C. Dickens, an eminent baritone, who has made a study of sacred music and was for years a chorister in churches and cathedrals. The ever-living song, "My Rosary," with which he thrilled thousands last season, has been supplemented this season with the answer which as been written to that song, entitled, "The Door of Hope." George T. Martin, the tenor who has delighted audiences on both sides of the Atlantic, has left the concert stage for the broader field of minstrelsy, and is with Mr. Field. Walter Sherwood, whose clear, sweet tenor was heard to advantage in simple minstrel melodies last season, is again duplicating his success and Harry Van Fossen is a headliner with new comic songs and dances. Billy Clark, the quaintest comedian on the minstrel stage, is again with the Al. G. Field show, and from all accounts he is still the sparkling essential to oldtime minstrelsy. Boardman S. Carnes is interlocutor. The Al. G. Field show will appear here next Saturday, afternoon and night.

Resolutions of Condolence.

The Official Board of Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, overwhelmed by its sense of the loss sustained by the church in the death of its beloved pastor, the Rev. Charles Wesley Parsons, calls upon God, the all-wise and merciful Father, in the hour of man's extremity, to be very gracious to our stricken church, and give to it divine comfort and aid. Pastor and people have been very near to each other in Christian love and fellowship and the joy of perfect understanding and of successful co-operation makes the remembrance of the association very precious. As preacher and as pastor Dr. Parsons filled our ideal of ministerial service. His intercourse was greatly blessed to those who had the privilege of his counsel and sympathy. We grieve for the church and for ourselves and for the community over the loss of so choice a leader and man. We give to his beloved wife and children the sympathy that comes from hearts stricken with the same affliction which has fallen upon them so heavily, and pray God that He will lighten their burden of grief with divine consolation.

Talk on "Literature and Life."

Prof. Louis Bevier, Jr., of Rutgers College, will address the Men's Club of the First Baptist church, Monday night, on the subject of "Literature and Life." Prof. Bevier was one of the speakers before the club last year and was heard with considerable pleasure.

PRUDENTIAL'S PROSPEROUS YEAR AS TOLD BY PRESIDENT.

The Prudential Insurance Company announces that the year 1907 was an exceptionally good year for that company.

In a statement to the Prudential agency staff President John F. Dryden gives the following brief resume of the Prudential record for 1907:

"Increased assets; largest income in the history of the company; claims, dividends, etc., paid to policyholders largest amount in the history of the company; greatest persistency of new business and more permanent agency force; decreased expense in management of business; betterment of the business in all departments; public approval of new low rate industrial and ordinary contracts; twenty-six thousand free policies issued since April, 1907; most effective advertising campaign and public approval of Prudential methods."

In the City Court.

Frank Crosby and John O'Keefe, two New England men, were arraigned in the city court, this morning, charged by Patrolman John Payne with vagrancy. They claimed to have come to Plainfield in search of work in a machine shop and their general appearance corroborated the statement. Sentence was suspended.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Evarts Tracy and daughter, formerly of West Eighth street, are residing in Elizabeth Court, 421 West 118th street, New York.

P. S. C. Reports On Street Light Test—Senate Bills to Be Placed On File.

The suggestion made by President Telles at the first meeting of the new Common Council that the members be prompt in their attendance at all meetings, appeared to have a good effect, for at the adjourned session last night they were present and ready for business at 8 o'clock and no unnecessary time was lost in disposing of the several matters introduced.

In a communication from the Public Service Corporation a statement was presented regarding the test made on five incandescent lamps removed from the streets of the city for that purpose. The location of the lamps and the candle power shown after a careful photometric test was as follows:

Seventh and Sycamore streets, 24; Sycamore street, near Seventh, 19.5; Madison avenue and Front street, 27.2; Fourth street and Watchung avenue, 18.9; Crescent avenue and Third place, 32. This, the company indicated 4.3 above the minimum or an average of 24 3-10 candle power. The lamps tested were ones picked by President R. Henry Depew, of the Plainfield Protective Association, as being unfit for use. The report was submitted by Farley Osgood, superintendent of electric distribution, and after being read was filed.

The Inter-urban Realty Company, through its agent, E. M. French, asked for a reapportionment of taxes on property owned by the company, some of it being sold and the taxes assessable on different owners. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

Corporation Counsel Marsh reported back the petition of R. W. Emerson, given to him for an opinion, and he advised that if Mr. Emerson produced an affidavit showing that he had paid $16.88 for a piece of property on Maple street, in error, which price included $10 for the search, the city could cancel the same and refund the money. Regarding another petition from Mr. Emerson about a property on Willever street, in the opinion of Mr. Marsh the city is not liable as that thoroughfare has never been laid out and accepted as a street.

The petition of the Central Land and Improvement Company asking the city to vacate Hill street, between South and Woodland avenues, was introduced by Chairman Gloak, of the street committee, and followed with an ordinance to grant the wish of the petitioners. After it was read once, it was decided to give the matter further consideration and at the request of Mr. Gloak the petition was returned to the street committee.

A resolution by Mr. Gloak authorized the street committee to clean streets and sewers at an expense not to exceed such amounts as the Council shall appropriate from time to time.

For the purpose of hastening the work of preparing the annual budget, Mr. Buxton offered a resolution which was adopted, instructing the city clerk to request the chairmen of all committees and heads of departments to prepare their estimates on or before January 16. It was stated in connection with the resolution that it would be impossible to comply with the resolution, as the time set is too early in the year.

Another resolution by Mr. Buxton and adopted, authorized the city clerk to arrange with W. M. Daly, Senate bill clerk, to send two copies of all bills in the Senate to Plainfield, one set to be kept on file in the office of the city clerk and the other in the office of the corporation counsel. The expense is not to exceed $30. It is understood that the bills filed in the city clerk's office are to be open at all times for the inspection of anyone desiring to see them.

LITERARY

The January number of The Circle is a splendid tonic for the blues. The destroyers have done their work ably during the past year or so, but the hour for the Builders has come, and this issue if The Circle is an auspicious beginning of the work laid down in the plain of the magazine for 1908. The opening article is by Francis Augustus Carl, Commissioner of Imperial Chinese Customs, entitled, "Modern China — America's Share in Her Awakening." The mere mention of Mr. Carl's office lends authority to his statements. Lyman Beecher Stowe has made a study of "The School City and Its Work," and has a great deal to say about the miniature governments which have been established in our public schools to teach children the duties of the American citizen.

COUNTY COURT IS OPEN

Justice Swayze Refers to Homocide Cases in Charging Grand Jury.

APPORTIONMENT OF THE CASES

Judge Vail to Set in Supreme Court and Judge Atwater in the Circuit Court.

The January term of the Union County Courts convened at Elizabeth, this mornin, with Justice F. J. Swayze on the bench. There was a large attendance of lawyers and other interested spectators from all parts of the county.

Justice Swayze's charge to the Grand Jury was brief. He said that two homicide cases might probably be brought to the attention of the jury and if the evidence warranted it indictments for murder should be returned, it being within the power of the jury to determine the degree. He said that at present he could not officially refer to these cases, but if indictments were found he asked the jury to promptly apprise him of the fact so that an early date could be fixed for trial.

After the appointment of Constables Lawrence and Teitel as assistants to the Grand Jury, Justice Swayze announced that inasmuch as he would not be able to sit for an extended time in thte Union County Court, he would refer all Circuit Court cases to Judge Atwater and all Supreme Court cases to Judge Vail and that the trial of these cases would begin tomorrow.

J. Edward Rowe, of Summit, is foreman of the Grand Jury, and the other members are as follows:

Plainfield—John G. MacLaughlin, James F. Buckle; Elizabeth—C. S. Chandler, John Voorhees, Augustus S. Crane, S. Merchant Meeker, Joseph Kaufman, George E. Woodruff, Pierre A. Banker, Nelson Barton, J. E. Febrey, George Frogeott; Rahway—H. Dayton Crowell, Willard H. Coles; Fanwood—John Robison; Linden—J. P. Winans; New Providence—A. A. Potter; Cranford—Whitfield A. Stephens; Westfield—Edward P. Dietter; Springfield—Richard Trivitt.

TRUST CO'S PROTEST HEARD BY TAX BOARD

At a session of the Union County Board for the Equalization of Taxes in the Court House at Elizabeth, yesterday, argument was heard in the appeal of the Plainfield Trust Company against its 1907 assessment of personal property. Craig A. Marsh appeared in behalf of Assessor Harry Runyon and the city and the Trust Company was represented by Charles A. Reed. Three hours were consumed in the taking of testimony and statement of the lawyers, after which the board announced that decision would be rendered within a week.

The argument brought out many points for both sides and the appeal is without doubt one of the most difficult that has yet been before the commissioners. From the sworn testimony it appeared that the trust company had followed its usual custom in furnishing to the assessors a signed statement showing the full amount of undivided profits, giving in detail a list of real estate and tax exempt securities owned by it in which a portion of the said capital account was invested. From the statement it appeared that the Trust company was assessable on nearly $70,000 of real estate and $30,000 personal property, $100,000 in all, making a tax of $1,500, which the concern considered fair and was perfectly willing to pay.

The company maintained, however, that the assessor ignored this statement this year and assessed the personal property at $75,000, taking the ground that the statement had not been sworn to as prescribed by law. Assessor Harry Runyon testified that the Trust company had been asked to appear before the Board of Assessors with other local banking officials when the figures were being prepared but had failed to send a representative.

Secretary J. Herbert Case was the only witness for the Trust Company while the city produced Assessors H. C. VanEmburgh, J. A. Hubbard and Harry C. Runyon and Mayor Charles J. Fisk.

Mack Assumes Duties.

Edward LeRoy Mack, Councilman from the Twelfth ward, Elizabeth, assumed the office of clerk to the Union County Board of Taxation yesterday after formal appointment by that body, which had postponed filling the office, vacant more than two months, since the resignation of William R. Townsend. Mr. Mack was busy getting acquainted with the office routine all yesterday morning.

SAYINGS OF PAUL.

"Time and tide waits for no man," and for very few women.

New Jersey will never go "broke" as long as she can boast of having in its possession at least a Little Silver.

Mrs. Katharine Goeller.

Mrs. Katharine Goeller, widow of Henry Goeller, died this morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. William Meier, of Washington street. She was in her eighty-second year and had been a resident of the city for a long time, coming here from Germany. Mrs. Goeller and her husband lived in the West End the greater part of the time and for many years conducted a shoe repairing shop and candy business on Plainfield avenue. They made a number of property investments in that section and at one time were comfortably situated. Mrs. Goeller suffered a bad fall last summer and since then her strength had been gradually failing. Beside Mrs. Meier she leaves one son, William Goeller, of Plainfield avenue.

Resolutions on Pastor's Death.

The Official Board of Grace M. E. church at the home of Dr. H. K. Carroll on Westervelt avenue last night and approved a set of resolutions on the death of Rev. Dr. Charles Wesley Parsons. They were ordered published in The Daily Press and a copy sent to the family of Dr. Parsons. The board decided to fill the pulpit on Sundays with supplies until the Newark Conference meets here in April.

Ennui

A certain rich young gentleman in New York gave a dinner, and appealed to his guests with the inquiry:

"And what in God's name am I to do to-morrow night?"

"Go out," suggested some one.

"I have been everywhere."

"Stay in."

"There is no one I want to see."

"Try solitude."

"That has become insupportable."

"Start a journey."

"Where could I go? I have been everywhere"

"Go again."

"But I have been many times. I detest traveling."

"Get married."

"I know too much about women."

"Get drunk."

"I have been drunk so often—and on so many things! It extinguishes me to think of it."

"Be good"

"But how?"

Nobody could answer, though they were all willing enough to be witty about it. When the next night came he had blown out his brains. He had to find some new way of spending the evening.—The Reader.

Rose From the Ranks.

Sir William White, who till recently was director of naval construction of Great Britain, began life as a shipwright's apprentice, but his genius carried him up the ladder with a rapidity which startled his fellow workers. He nearly lost his life once through taking an experimental trip with a submarine boat which on being submerged stuck in the mud. It was only after furious work with the pumps that he was rescued.

BURGLAR RETURNS ROSARY TO CHILD

GIRL OF SIX FOUGHT ROBBERS UNTIL THEY TOOK MOTHER'S MOST VALUED GEMS.

THEN LITTLE ONE JUST SOBBED

But This Proved More Effective Than Warfare, for the Thief Returned The Precious Heirloom.

New York.—Touched by a child's grief, one of two masked burglars who entered the apartments of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Crespi, in the Hotel Endicott, and stole jewels worth about $7,000, after threatening six-year-old Pacifica Crespi and her nurse, returned to the little girl a pearl-studded rosary. The piece of jewelry had been a wedding gift to Mrs. Crespi from her father, Jose Maria Castro, formerly president of a Central American republic.

The little girl's tears, when she saw the men taking the rosary, followed a fit of passionate rage, during which she flew at one of the men and bit him on the hand so severely that she drew blood. But this man was the one who, when he saw the child's grief, told the other it would be a shame to take the rosary, and handed it back to her.

The nurse, Katharine Creaton, was putting little Pacifica and her baby sister to bed when the two men, masked to their chins, came down the fire escape from the roof and entered the window.

The child, relating what occurred, said:

"Mamma and papa had just gone to the theater, and Katie was getting the baby—that's my little sister, Tulita—ready for bed, when two men, wearing masks, came in the window. Katie screamed and one of the men, a big man, pointed a revolver at her and told her he would kill her if she didnt keep still.

"Then the little man—he had a pistol, too—asked me if I was afraid. I think he was afraid, because his hand shook so. I told him I wasn't, and asked what he wanted. He laughed and told Katie to go into the other room, but I stayed.

"The men began to take mamma's diamonds, and then I knew they were robbers. I called them thieves and told them it was wrong to steal, but they wouldn't stop. Then I got mad and I ran up to the little man who was taking the diamonds and bit his hand until the blood came. He pushed me away and swore, and then the big man took the diamonds.

"Then Julia started to cry, and Katie called to them and said she didn't care whether they killed her or not—she was going to the baby. The big man told her not to, but the little man said it would be all right.

"They kept right on hunting for things, and pretty soon one of them found Grandfather Castro's rosary and started to put it in his pocket. I began to cry then, because I knew mamma thought more of that than anything she had. The little man asked me what I was crying for, and I told him. Then he told the other man it would be a shame to take the rosary, and he gave it back to me. I thanked him and he laughed, and then they locked us in the other room and went away."

Every drawer and every possible hiding place in the room was ransacked by the two men. Many of the jewels stolen were family heirlooms and valued by Mr. Crespi and his wife at far more than their intrinsic worth. When the Crespis returned from the theater they found the nurse crying hysterically and little Pacifica trying to comfort her, telling her that her father and mother would be home soon. The nurse and the two children had been locked in a side room by the burglars before they left. They were liberated and then Mr. Crespi made out a list of the stolen jewels and took it to police headquarters.

The best clew the police have to work on is the wounded hand of one of the men and they are searching every man with a bandaged hand. Among the jewels stolen were two gold watches, gold chain set with diamonds and sapphires; rings and a gold necklace.

A CLEAR CASE.

Eminent Lawyer—Gentlemen of the jury, according to all the testimony presented, the evidence against my client is purely circumstantial. A murder was committed, and the autopsy showed that deceased had been hit by a club. A few persons saw my client standing over the prostrate man. My client had a club in his hand. The club was bloody. He was seen to strike, or, I should say, gently tap the prostrate man a few times with the aforesaid club; but, gentlemen of the jury, remember the injustice which has been done in the sad, regretted, unrecoverable past, and be cautious. Remember the hundreds of innocent men who would have suffered unjustly if, at the last moment, some happy circumstance had not thrown doubt on their guilt. Now, gentlemen, it is very evident to me that my client, in returning to his peaceful home from a prayer-meeting, or something, just happened to see the deceased committing suicide by beating himself on the head with a club, and my benevolent client, true to instincts of humanity, rushed up, jerked the fatal club away, and playfully patted him with it as an admonition that he should not try to commit suicide again.

Fred Had Weakened.

Sweet Girl (anxiously)—Did Fred—I mean, Mr. Nicefellow, call to see you to-day, papa?

Papa—Yes, and to oblige him I consented. I suppose time hangs heavy on his hands.

Sweet Girl (mystified)—Why—why, what did he say?

Papa—He requested the pleasure of a series of games of chess with me. The first ones we will play this evening, and after that every third evening during the winter. I hope, my dear, you will keep out of the library, as chess is a very absorbing game.—N. Y. Weekly.

The Servant Trouble Again.

"I've gone every day this week," sighed little Mrs. Wimple, "to look at a perfect love of a hat in Smith's window. Such a darling white chiffon affair, Edward, with great big bunches of perfectly exquisite white roses and such heavenly lace! But the price—well, I wanted it tremendously, but I couldn't afford to buy it."

"Perhaps——"

"You're a dear, but there isn't any perhaps. I paid the cook to-day, and what do you think? She marched right down and bought that very hat!"

No Return Ticket.

"Is Mike Clancy here?" asked the visitor at the quarry, just after the premature explosion.

"No, sor," replied Costigan; "he's gone."

"For good?"

"Well, sor, he wint in that direction."

"But he didn't do it."

"No, but he put you up to it, or Grace Ferrall did. I wish Grace would let Mr. Quarrier alone. She has always been perfectly possessed to plague him. She seems unable to take him seriously, and he simply hates it. I don't think he'd tolerate her if she were not his cousin."

"I'm awfully sorry," was all Siward said, and for a while he gloomily busied himself with whatever was brought to him.

"Don't look that way," came a low voice beside him.

"Do I show everything as plainly as that?" he asked curiously.

"I seem to read you—sometimes."

"It's very nice of you," he said.

"Nice?"

"To look at me—now and then."

"Oh," she cried resentfully, "don't be grateful!"

"I—really am not, you know," he said, laughing.

"That," she rejoined slowly, "is the truth. You say conventional things in a manner—in an agreeably personal manner—that interests women. But you are not grateful to anybody for anything. You are indifferent, and you can't help being nice to people, so some day some girl will think you are grateful and will have a miserable time of it."

"Miserable time?"

"Waiting for you to say what never will enter your head to say."

"You mean I—I"—

"Flirt? No. I mean that you don't flirt; that you are always dreamily occupied with your own affairs, from which listlessly congenial occupation, when drawn, you are so unexpectedly nice that a girl immediately desires to see how nice you can be."

"What a charming indictment you draw!" he said, amused.

"It's a grave one, I assure you. I've been talking about you to Grace Ferrall. I asked to be placed beside you at dinner. I told her I hadn't had half enough of you on the cliff. Now, what do you think of yourself for being too nice to a susceptible girl? I think it's immoral."

They both were laughing now. Several people glanced at them, smiling in sympathy. Alderdene took that opportunity to revert to the sketch, furnishing a specimen of his own inimitable laughter as a running accompaniment to the story of Quarrier and his dog in North Carolina until he had everybody, as usual, laughing, not at the story, but at him, all of which demonstration was bitterly offensive to Quarrier. He turned his eyes once on Miss Landis and on Siward, then dropped them.

The hostess arose. A rustle and flurry of silk and lace and the scraping of chairs, a lingering word or laugh, and the color vanished from the room, leaving a circle of men in black standing around the table.

Here and there a man, lighting a cigarette, bolted his coffee and cognac and strolled out to the gunroom. Ferrall, gesticulating vigorously, resumed his prepprandial dog story to Captain Voucher. Belwether buttonholed Alderdene and bored him with an interminably facetious tale until that nobleman, threatened with maxillary dislocation, fairly wrenched himself loose and came over to Siward, squinting furiously.

"Old ass!" he muttered. "His chop whiskers look like the chops of a Southdown ram, and he's got the wits of one. Look here, Stephen, I hear you fell into no end of a scrape in town"—

"Tu quoque, Blinky? Oh, read the newspapers and let it go at that!"

"Just as you like, old chap!" returned his lordship unabashed. "All I meant was—anything Voucher and I can do—of course"—

"You're very good. I'm not dead, you know."

"'Not dead, you know!'" repeated Major Belwether, coming up behind them with his sprightly step. "That reminds me of a good one"— He sat down and lighted a cigar; then, vainly attempting to control his countenance as though roguishly anticipating the treat awaiting them, he began another endless story.

The Page boys, very callow, very much delighted and a little in awe of such a celebrated personage, laughed heartily. And altogether there was sufficient attention and sufficient laughter to make a very respectable noise. This being the major's cue for an exit, he rose, one sleek hand raised in sprightly protest as though to shield the invisible ladies, to whose bournes he was bound, from an uproar too masculine and mighty for the ears of such a sex.

"Ass!" muttered Alderdene, getting up and pattering about the room in his big shiny pumps. "Give me a peg—somebody!"

Mortimer swallowed his brandy, lingered, lifted the decanter, mechanically considering its remaining contents and his own capacity, then:

"Bridge, captain?"

"Certainly," said Captain Voucher briskly.

"I'll go and shoo the major into the gunroom," observed Ferrall—"unless"—looking questioningly at Siward.

"I've a date with your wife," observed the man.

The Page boys, Rena Bonnesdel and Eileen Shannon were seated at a card table together, very much engaged with one another, the sealed pack lying neglected on the green cloth, a vast pink box of bonbons beside it not neglected.

O'Hara and Quarrier, with Marion Page and Mrs. Mortimer, were immersed in the game, already stony faced and oblivious to outer sounds.

About the rooms were distributed girls en tete-tete, girls eating bonbons and watching the cards, among them Sylvia Landis, hands loosely clasped behind her, standing at Quarrier's elbow to observe and profit by an expert performance.

As Siward strolled in she raised her dainty head for an instant, smiled in silence and resumed a study of her fiance's game.

A moment later, when Quarrier had emerged brilliantly from the melee, she looked up again triumphantly, supposing Siward was lingering somewhere waiting to join her. And she was just a trifle surprised and disappointed to find him nowhere in sight. She had wished him to observe the brilliancy of Mr. Quarrier's game.

But Siward, outside on the veranda, was saying at that moment to his hostess, "I shall be very glad to read my mother's letter at any time you choose."

"It must be later, Stephen. I'm to cut in when Kemp sends for me. He has a lot of letters to attend to. Tell me, what do you think of Sylvia Landis?"

"I like her, of course," he replied pleasantly.

Grace Ferrall stood thinking a moment. "That sketch you made proved a great success, didn't it?" And she laughed under her breath.

"Did it? I thought Mr. Quarrier seemed annoyed"—

"Really? What a muff that cousin of mine is. He's such a muff, you know, that the very sight of his pointed beard and pompadour hair and his complacency sets me in fidgets to stir him up."

"I don't think you'd best use me for the stick next time," said Siward. "He's not my cousin, you know."

Mrs. Ferrall shrugged her boyish shoulders: "By the way," she said curiously, "who was that girl?"

"What girl?" he asked coolly, looking at his hostess, now the very incarnation of delicate mockery with her pretty laughing mouth, her boyish sunburn and freckles.

"You won't tell me, I suppose?"

"I'm sorry"—

"Was she pretty, Stephen?"

"Yes," she said sulkily. "I wish you wouldn't"—

"Nonsense! Do you think I'm going to let you off without some sort of confession? If I had time now—but I haven't. Kemp has business letters. He'll be furious, so I've got to take his cards or we won't have any pennies to buy gasoline."

She retreated backward, with a gay nod of malice, and turned to enter the house and met Sylvia Landis face to face in the hallway.

"You minx!" she whispered. "Aren't you ashamed?"

"Very much, dear. What for?" And, catching sight of Siward outside in the starlight, divined perhaps something of her hostess' meaning, for she laughed uneasily, like a child who winces under a stern eye.

"You don't suppose for a moment," she began, "that I have"—

"Yes, I do. You always do."

"Not with that sort of man," she returned naively. "He won't."

Mrs. Ferrall regarded her suspiciously. "You always pick out exactly the wrong man to play with"—

They had moved back side by side into the hall, the hostess' arm linked in the arm of the younger girl.

"The wrong man?" repeated Sylvia, instinctively freeing her arm, her straight brows beginning to bend inward.

"I didn't mean that—exactly. You know how much I care for his mother—and for him." The obstinate downward trend of the brows, the narrowing blue gaze, signaled mutiny to the woman who knew her so well.

"What is so wrong with Mr. Siward?" she asked.

"Nothing. There was an affair"—

"This spring in town. I know it. Is that all?"

"Yes, for the present," replied Grace Ferrall uncomfortably. Then: "For goodness' sake, Sylvia, don't cross examine me that way! I care a great deal for that boy"—

"So do I. I've made him take my dog."

There was an abrupt pause, and presently Mrs. Ferrall began to laugh.

"I mean it, really," said Sylvia quietly. "I like him immensely."

"Dearest, you mean it generously, with your usual exaggeration. You have heard that he has been foolish, and because he's so young, so likable, every instinct, every impulse in you is aroused to—to be nice to him"—

"And if that were true"—

"There is no harm, dear"— Mrs. Ferrall hesitated, her eyes softening to a graver revery. Then looking up, "It's rather pathetic," she said in a low voice. "Kemp thinks he's foredoomed, like all the Siwards. It's an hereditary failing with him—no, it's hereditary damnation. Siward after Siward, generation after generation, you know"— She bit her lip, thinking a moment. "His grandfather was a friend of my grandparents, brilliant, handsome, generous and—doomed! His own father was found dying in a dreadful resort in London, where he had wandered when stupefied—a Siward! Think of it! So you see what that outbreak of Stephen's means to those whose families have been New Yorkers since New York was. It is ominous, it is more than ominous. It means that the master vice has seized for him. It's a pity, I know he meant to make himself the exception to the rule—and look! Already one carouse of his has landed him in the daily papers!"

Sylvia flushed and looked up. "Grace, may I ask you a question?"

"Yes, child," she answered absently.

"Has it occurred to you that what you have said about this boy touches me very closely?"

Mrs. Ferrall's wits returned nimbly from woolgathering, and she shot a startled, inquiring glance at the girl beside her.

"You—you mean the matter of heredity, Sylvia?"

"Yes. I think my uncle, Major Belwether, chose you as his august mouthpiece for that little sermon on the dangers of heredity—the danger of being ignorant concerning what women of my race had done—before I came into the world they found so amusing."

"I told you several things," returned Mrs. Ferrall composedly. "Your uncle thought it best for you to know."

"Yes. There was, if I understood you, enough of divorce, of general indiscretion and irregularity to seriously complicate any family tree and coat of arms I might care to claim"—

"Sylvia!"

The girl lifted her pretty bare shoulders. "I'm sorry, but could I help it? Very well; all I can do is to prove a decent exception. Very well; I'm doing it, am I not—practically scared into the first solidly suitable marriage offered, seizing the unfortunate Howard with both hands for fear he'd get away and leave me alone with only a queer family record for company? Very well! Now, then, I want to ask you why everybody in my case didn't go about with a sanctimonious face and a dolorous mien repeating: 'Her grandmother eloped! Her mother ran away! Poor child; she's doomed, doomed!'"

"Sylvia, I"—

"Yes; why didn't they? That's the way they talk about that boy out there." She swept a rounded arm toward the veranda.

"Yes, but he has already broken loose, while you"—

"So did I—nearly. Had it not been for you, you know well enough I might have run away with that dreadful Englishman at Newport, for I adored him—I did, I did, and you know it. And look at my endless escapes from compromising myself! Can you count them? All those indiscretions when mere living seemed to intoxicate me that first winter, and only my uncle and you to break me in!"

"In other words," said Mrs. Ferrall slowly, "you don't think Mr. Siward is getting what is known as a square deal?"

"No, I don't. Major Belwether has already hinted—no, not even that, but has somehow managed to dampen my pleasure in Mr. Siward."

Mrs. Ferrall considered the girl beside her, now very lovely and flushed in her suppressed excitement.

"After all," she said, "you are going to marry somebody else. So why become quite so animated about a man you may never again see?"

"I shall see him if I desire to."

"Oh!"

"I am not taking the black veil, am I?" asked the girl hotly.

"Only the wedding veil, dear. But, after all, your husband ought to have something to suggest concerning a common visiting list"—

"He may suggest, certainly. In the meantime I shall be loyal to my own friends and afterward, too," she murmured to herself as her hostess rose, calmly dropping care like a mantle from her shoulders.

"Go and be good to this poor young man, then—I adore rows—and you'll have a few on your hands, I'll warrant. Let me remind you that your uncle can make it unpleasant for you yet and that your amiable fiance has a will of his own under his pompadour and silky beard."

"What a pity to have it clash with mine!" said the girl serenely.

Mrs. Ferrall looked at her. "Mercy on us! Howard's pompadour would stick up straight with horror if he could hear you. Don't be silly: don't er, never admit it to his mother."

Mrs. Kemp Ferrall.

The younger girl sat, wide eyed, silent. The elder's gaze was upon her, but her thoughts, remote, centered on the hapless mother of such a son.

"Such indulgence was once fashionable. Moderation is the present fashion. Perhaps he will fall into line," said Mrs. Ferrall thoughtfully. "The main thing is to keep him among people, not to drop him. The gregarious may be shamed, but if anything, any incident happens to drive him outside by himself, if he should become solitary, there's not a chance in the world for an impulse, for a caprice, break off anything desirable on account of a man for whom you really care nothing, whose amiable exterior and prospective misfortune merely enlist a very natural and generous sympathy in you."

"Do you suppose that I shall endure interference from anybody—from my uncle, from Howard?"

"Dear, you are making a mountain out of a molehill. Don't be emotional; don't let loose impulses that you and I know about, knew about in our school years, know all about now and which you and I have decided must be eliminated"—

"You mean subdued. They'll always be there."

"Very well. Who cares as long as you have them in leash?"

Looking at one another, the excited color cooling in the younger girl's cheeks, they laughed, one with relief, the other a little ashamed.

"Kemp will be furious. I simply must cut in," said Mrs. Ferrall, hastily turning toward the gunroom. Miss Landis looked after her, subdued, vaguely repentant, the consciousness dawning upon her that she had probably made considerable conversation about nothing.

"It's been so all day," she thought impatiently. "I've exaggerated. I've worked up a scene about a man whose habits are not the slightest concern of mine. Besides that, I've neglected Howard shamefully!" She was walking slowly, her thoughts outstripping her errant feet, but it seemed that neither her thoughts nor her steps were leading her toward the neglected gentleman within, for presently she found herself at the breezy veranda door looking rather fixedly at the stars.

The stars, shining impartially upon the just and the unjust, illuminated the person of Siward, who sat alone, rather limply, one knee crossed above the other. He looked up by chance and, seeing her star gazing in the doorway, straightened out and rose to his feet.

Aware of him apparently for the first time, she stepped across the threshold, meeting his advance halfway.

"Would you care to go down to the rocks?" he asked. "The surf is terrific."

"No—I don't think I care"—

They stood listening a moment to the stupendous roar.

"A storm somewhere at sea," he concluded.

"Is it very fine—the surf?"

"Very fine—and very relentless," he laughed. "It is an unfriendly creature, the sea, you know."

She had begun to move toward the cliffs. He fell into step beside her. They spoke little, a word now and then.

The perfume of the mounting sea saturated the night with wild fragrance. Dew lay heavy on the lawns. She lifted her skirts enough to clear the grass, heedless that her silk shod feet were now soaking. Then at the cliffs' edge, as she looked down into the white fury of the surf, the stunning crash of the ocean saluted her.

For a long while they watched in silence. Once she leaned a trifle too far over the starlit gulf and, recoiling, involuntarily steadied herself on his arm.

"I suppose," she said, "no swimmer could endure that battering."

"Not long."

"Would there be no chance?"

"Not one."

She bent farther outward, fascinated, stirred, by the splendid frenzy of the breakers.

"I—think"— he began quietly; then a firm hand fell over her left hand, and, half encircled by his arm, she found herself drawn back. Neither spoke. Two things she was coolly aware of—that, urged, drawn by something subtly irresistible, she had leaned too far out from the cliff and would have leaned farther had he not taken matters into his own keeping without apology.

She found herself drawn back.

"Was I in any actual danger?" she asked curiously.

"I think not. But it was too much responsibility for me."

"I see. Any time I wish to break my neck I am to please do it alone in future."

"Exactly—if you don't mind," he said, smiling.

They turned, shoulder to shoulder, walking back through the drenched herbage.

"That," she said impulsively, "is not what I said a few moments ago to a woman."

"What did you say a few moments ago to a woman?"

"I said, Mr. Siward, that I would not leave a—a certain man to go to the devil alone!"

"Do you know any man who is going to the devil?"

"Do you?" she asked, letting herself go swinging out upon a tide of intimacy she had never dreamed of risking, nor had she the slightest idea whither the current would carry her.

They had stopped on the lawn, ankle deep in wet grass, the stars overhead sparkling magnificently and in their ears the outcrash of the sea.

"You mean me," he concluded.

"Do I?"

He looked up into the lovely face. Her eyes were very sweet, very clear—clear with excitement, but very friendly.

"Let us sit here on the steps a little while, will you?" she asked.

P.H.S. WALLOPS Y.M.C.A.

School Boys' Five Defeats the Association Team by a Score of 62-52.

WINNERS FIND THEM EASY.

P. H. S. Aggregation Scores at Will —Caldwell and Gilmore Do Good Work.

The Plainfield High School basketball five sprung a big surprise on the Y. M. C. A. team when they trimmed the association players, entered in the New Jersey State Y. M. C. A. championship basketball league by a score of 62-52. The Y. M. C. A. five, believing that everything was going their way, gave a loose exhibition of basketball even up to prep school standard, while their opponents played whirlwind ball from whistle to whistle, showing a big improvement in team work over their showing in the last scholastic league game.

Starting the game with a rush, the schoolboys piled up eight points on the association five before these players woke up sufficiently to cage the ball. The Y. M. C. A. team literally "played" basketball all through the first half, and when the whistle blew, the score was 29-23 against them. In the second half they played in spurts, actually beginning to play real basketball about five minutes before time was called. A feature of the playing was the work of Caldwell and Mortimer for the schoolboys, and Gilmore for the association. Collier at centre was removed in the second half and Rumsey took his place.

The High School five had no difficulty in scoring at will, and in the second half Caldwell, captain of the school boys' team, made four points on one only. This happened when a foul was called on an association player for interfering with him while shooting a goal. Hhe scored the basket, despite the interference, shot the goal from foul, and the team was awarded a point on the technicality. The line-ups and summaries:

P. H. S.	Y. M. C. A.
Morris	Rumsey, Hoagland left forward.
Mortimer	Gilmore right forward.
Caldwell (Capt.)	Collier, Rumsey centre.
Parsons	Miner right guard.

Baskets from fouls: Gilmore, 11; Caldwell, 10; Mortimer, 10; Collier, 7; Snyder, 6; Morris, 3; Miner, 2; Gavett, 2; Hoagland. Goals from fouls: Collier, 5; Caldwell, 3; Gavett. P. H. S. awarded a point on technicality. Referee, Charles B. Morse; scorer, Gus Nash; timer, G. L. Listman. 15 and 20 minute halves.

Y.M.C.A. SECONDS WIN FROM BOROUGH FIVE

The second team of the Y. M. C. A. won handily from the basketball five of the North Plainfield High School in a snappy game at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last night. The final score was 35-17. With the score 15-5 against them in the first half, the school boys braced up at the beginning of the second, but could not pull out a victory, for the association players excelled in team work and shooting. A feature of the play was the work of Stuart Freeman and Woodland, two subs, each of whom caged the ball five times from the floor. Conroy excelled for the boroughites. The lineups and summaries follow:

Y. M. C. A. 2nd.	N. P. H. S.
Bentley (capt)	Smith left forward
Templin	Conroy (capt.) right forward
S. Freeman	B. McClintock centre
Woodland	Steiner left guard
Hoagland	F. McClintock right guard

Baskets from the floor: S. Freeman, 5; Woodland, 5; Conroy, 1; Templin, 3; Hoagland, 2; F. McClintock, 2; Bentley, B. McClintock and Smith. Goals from fouls: Woodland, 3; Conroy. Referee, Charles B. Morse. 15 and 20 minute halves.

BOWLING.

On Campbell's alleys, tonight, Nash and Willett, of this city, will roll Millen and McMahon, of Westfield, the first half of a home and home series, the conditions of which call for the best out of eleven games, six to be rolled here and the remaining games at Elizabeth.

Plans for a two man tourney to be rolled afternoons, on Campbell's alleys, are underway and to date three teams have entered. It is expected that there will be at least ten teams in the tourney.

BASEBALL.

President Pulliam, of the National Baseball League, talks rather plainly in his final decision regarding the long disputed case of "Lou" Wiltse, of this city, and pays his compliments to Manager Burnham, of the Newark Club. His review of the troubles follow:

"The National Commission saw fit, last summer, to temporarily reinstate this player, and there was no clamor raised in any quarter, and there would have been none had the commission made a present of Wiltse's services to the Newark club. The commission, however, held that Wiltse was a ward of organized baseball by reason of the fact that the Baltimore club renounced all claim to his services when the Tri-State League was admitted into organized baseball, and that, therefore, if any club desired to have his services, they should pay a reasonable sum into the treasury of the National Commission, the fund that is used to pay the operating expenses of the work of the National Commission in protecting and advancing the interests of club owner and player alike.

"Then Mr. Burnham, the manager, and president of the Newark club, chagrined at not getting a player of some value for nothing, raised a cry that could be heard above the fog whistles that were anchored off Sandy Hook, and ran to the National Association at its New York meeting, and inflamed the minds of the delegates with an awful tale of how the National Commission was trying to blackjack him out of a million dollars; and as a result of his tirade the National Association stands against the National Commission and a most unjust and unfair position against this player by attempting to blacklist him for life among the clubs of the National Association, simply because he had been patient with years of wrong.

"In this connection, it is interesting to note that since the operation of the national agreement and the creation of the National Commission, no one in organized baseball has been more persistent in appealing to the National Commission for his rights under organized baseball, to the finest degree, than Mr. Burnham himself, on behalf of the Newark club. The rights of the Newark club have always been sustained by the National Commission, a notable decision being in the case involving the territory rights of Newark when it was threatened with invasion by a club in Elizabeth, yet within the five-mile limit, but that five-mile limit was only determined by the rod and glass of the surveyor."

Wiltse's troubles began four years ago, shortly after his purchase by the Baltimore club from the New York Americans. The Oriole management found itself unable to pay the player the big salary his contract called for and Wiltse was given the alternative of accepting his release or a $140 cut in salary. Wiltse accepted the latter, but afterward, agreed to finish the season with the Orioles on the understanding, the player asserts, that he would not be reserved. This verbal agreement was broken by the Baltimore club, so Wiltse declares, but he was unable to secure any relief from the National Commission, to which body he appealed. Wiltse disclaimed the right of the Baltimore club to hold him and claimed further that he was unable to advance himself for the reason that the club sold him to Brooklyn, and the latter club in turn would turn him back to Baltimore every spring. This was made possible owing to the fact of the clubs being controlled by the same syndicate.

Owing to his inability to secure any justice Wiltse jumped to the Tri-State League, for which he was placed on the blacklist. Last summer he received a temporary reinstatement from the commission, and afterward secured his release from the Johnstown club. This accorded him the opportunity of going to New York where he finished out the season.

GOLF.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Metropolitan Golf Association held recently J. E. Erickson of the Plainfield Country Club was elected chairman of the handicap committee for 1908, succeeding Leighton Calkins, who has been chairman since 1904. The other members of the committee will be F. J. Phillips and Findlay S. Douglas, who have served on Mr. Calkins' committee and have benerously agreed to serve another year. Mr. Calkins, while prevented by other golfing duties from assuming the detail work of the handicap committee next season, has offered to render such assistance as the new chairman may need in the beginning. Mr. Erickson, however, is an expert at handicapping and is thoroughly familiar with the details of the metropolitan system. He is a hard worker and the association is fortunate in securing his services.

Mr. Erickson himself is fortunate in having Phillips and Douglas on his committee, as they are familiar with the work and are men of fine judgment. Furthermore, all clubs in the association are now thoroughly acquainted with the form of report required, sa that the labors of the committee are not as arduous as they were a year or so ago before the system of handicapping became generally understood. Handicapping is now on an established basis and it only requires careful work of the clubs in making up their reports to produce a good handicap list.

Unless all signs fair hundreds of golfers who have for years been in the habit of playing over the public links at Van Cortlandt Park and Forest Park will soon rise in vigorous protest over what they regard as the unwarrantable early closing of these courses. Ever since Park Commissioner Berry unexpectedly ordered the Van Cortlandt eighteen hole circuit closed on December 1, local devotees of the game have been put to no end of inconvenience.

It is true that a few temporary holes have been laid out on the polo field, but this is a poor substitute for what they have been accustomed to the greater part of the year. What makes it particularly aggravating to the Van Cortlandt Park frequenters is the fact that the public course at Pelham Bay has been allowed to remain open. The Pelham course is, according to golfers, in poorer condition than Van Cortlandt and in far greater need of attention.

In the past it has not been customary to close the Van Cortlandt course save during a few weeks in the spring when the frost is coming out of the ground. There are also times when the regular summer greens have been closed, but nothing approaching the present state of affairs has previously been attempted. Over at Forest Park the Brooklynites are up in arms as they had expected to be able to play there throughout the winter.

Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Musson, of West Front street, are spending a couple of weeks at Wilmington, Del.

MEET TO AID THE BLIND

Robert Love, Ira LaRue and Others Participate in Conference in Newark.

PLANS FOR AN ORGANIZATION.

Committee Appointed — Ackerman, Fisk, Colby and Martin Interested In Movement.

The meeting held in the Free Public Library, Newark, yesterday afternoon in the interest of the blind of the State, was largely attended, there being a number of people from this city present. Rabbi Myers, of Paterson, was appointed temporary chairman, until the arrival of the permanent chairman, Assemblyman W. P. Martin, of Newark. Ira L. La Rue, of this city, was chosen secretary, but declined in favor of Theodore Osborn, of Newark.

Percy Warren Cannon, of this city, received an enthusiastic welcome and was congratulated upon his efficient work in securing so many endorsements for prominent Plainfielders.

The opening address was by Robert Love, of North Plainfield. He said that it was love emanating from a Supreme God that had brought the people together in an effort to work out a definite plan to aid the unfortunate by legislation. It was suggested that there are a great many sightless people in the State who could be taught various trades and when the sensitive finger ends are sore and aching they could take up some other work and thus obtain rest and comfort.

An interesting address was also delivered by Rabbi Myers, in which he quoted statistics showing the cost of maintaining the epileptic institution. In his opinion an institution for the blind could be maintained with a smaller expenditure.

During the business session W. F. Morgan, of Short Hills; Miss C. A. L. O'Neil, of Newark, and Rabbi Myers were appointed a committee to confer with the association organized at Hoboken, December 28, last, to name a time for a general mass meeting when officers for a permanent society will be chosen. Already many prominent citizens and legislators are interested in this work, including Governor-elect J. Franklin Fort and State Senator Everett Colby. In Plainfield the movement has the support of such men as Mayor Charles J. Fisk, State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman and others.

MISS ADA MILLS SURPRISED ON EIGHTEENTH BIRTHDAY.

Miss Ada Mills was tendered a surprise party at her home on Grandview avenue last night by about a score of her friends. The occasion was her eighteenth birthday, and the guests, who came from New York, Newark and Westfield as well as this city, brought many birthday remembrances. The affair, which was arranged by the Misses Pauline Smith, Lillian Hartfelder, Alice Mills and Mrs. Mills, proved a complete surprise, and the evening was passed with games and music, after which refreshments were served.

Among those present were the Misses Marie Hicks, and Violet Sansdown, Hugh Kesseler, Arthur Hicks, and Fred Chippit, of New York; the Misses Olive Sands, Mabel James and Nanette Dearborn, Fred Birmingham, Raymond Wills and William Lovegrove, of Newark; the Misses Edna Marsh and Florence Holmes, A. Cox and Howard Lambert, of Westfield; and the Misses Pauline Smith, Lillian Hartfelder, Ada Mills, Alice Mills, Olive Mills, Mabel Farley, Violet Hope, and Sadie Schultise, F. Hartfelder, M. B. Squier, Richard Shoemaker, William James, Horace Earle, Richard Cameron, O. Compton, Harry Ising and Carlos Fillipi.

Y. M. C. A. Boys Outing.

About a dozen members of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. will have an outing in New York city Saturday, when one of the secretaries of the association will act as guide to the party in a sight seeing trip to include visits to Ellis Island, the New York Stock Exchange, and the Brooklyn Navy Yard. Another party of members of the department will spend the day skating on a local pond, and will cook their own dinners over a camp fire.

Hugh Sweeney Undergoes Operation.

Hugh Sweeney, of Liberty street, underwent a serious operation at Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday. It was performed by Drs. Endicott and Lufburrow and today he was resting easily.

Receiver for Great Western.

Announcement was made today in New York that application had been made for the appointment of a receiver for the Chicago and Great Western Railroad.

PERKINS TAX LAW VALID

Highest Court Sustains Decision on Railroad Main Stem Taxation Law.

2ND CLASS UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

Sweeping Opinion Re-affirming the Supreme Court's Decision—About $3,500,00 Annual Tax.

The Court of Errors and Appeals at Trenton yesterday handed down an opinion sustaining the constitutionality of the Perkins railroad tax law, which provides for the taxation of main stem railroad property at an average State tax rate. This class of property was previously taxed at the rate of 50 cents on each $100, and the total revenue to the State therefrom was about $1,000,000. Under yesterday's decision the railroads will pay on main stem railroad property upward of $3,000,000 a year. The average tax rate for 1907 was $1.62 on each $100.

The court also rendered a decision in the matter of the assessing of second class railroad property by local assessors, declaring the law to be unconstitutional. This means that the assessing of this class of property will go back to the method as prescribed by the Duffield act, by which the assessments were made by the State Board of Assessors. This decision does not affect the rate of taxation of second class railroad property, which will continue to be taxed at the rate prevailing in the municipality in which the property is situated.

The Perkins acts have been fought vigorously by the railroads. The upholding of the main stem act means that the railroads must pay into the State treasury an account of the tax levied for 1906 a total of $3,503,529.70, an increase of $2,652,538.49 over the tax paid to the State in 1905 on the same class of property. The total tax for 1907 on the same property is $3,257,126.65, a decrease from the amount in 1906, but still an increase over that of 1905. Under the law the State retains an amount equal to $5 on each $1,000 for the use of the State, which sum amounted in 1906 to $969,662.35, an increase of $18,663.14 over the preceding year, when the total railroad State tax was $950,999.21.

The remainder, amounting to $2,533,869.35, will, under the Perkins law, be distributed among the various municipalities to reduce the State school tax, and may be available for use during the current year.

The Errors Court also held that the "transit tax" law was annulled by the law of 1868, authorizing the lease of the United Railroads to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. Under the "transit tax" law the Pennsylvania paid taxes in accordance with the original Camden & Amboy Railroad charter. Under that charter the Camden & Amboy was absolved from all but State taxes. The original merger was attacked when it was made as illegal, but in 1869, at the railroad's behest, the merger or lease was ratified by the Legislature, and that act is now held to have nullified the tax exemption clause of the charter.

Justice Reed was not present when the vote was taken, but he had signified his concurrence in the views of the court. When the court convened Chancellor Magie announced that because of the importance of the questions involved the court had decided to consider them ahead of the other cases on the calendar.

Chief Justice Gummere, who will write the opinion, then arose and made a verbal statement of the finding.

Those behind the test of the Perkins act were the United Railroad and Canal Company and the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, lessee; the Central Railroad Company and Trenton Railroad Company, represented by Richard V. Lindabury, James B. Vredenburgh, George B. Holmes and other counsel; the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, Morris Canal and Banking Company, Bergen County Railroad Company and Long Dock Company, of the Erie Railroad system, represented by William D. Edwards and other counsel.

The State's interests were looked after by Attorney General Robert H. McCarter, Bennet Van Syckel, a former Supreme Court Justice, and John R. Hardin.

The principal grounds set up by the appellants for setting aside the act were, in brief:

Because the act is special and not general and in this respect violates Paragraph 12 of Section 7 of Article IV of the Constitution.

The act prescribes a rule for assessing property not according to its true value but contrary thereto, in further violation of the Constitution.

The act denies to the railroads the equal protection of the laws in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United

MRS. COLBY'S FINE GIFT

Senator's Wife Send Children's Home Association Her Check for $1,000.

GOES TO ENDOWMENT FUND.

Young Women's Christian Association Is Remembered By Her With a Check for $500.

The announcement in The Daily Press of yesterday that Mrs. Colby, wife of State Senator Everett Colby, had given $500 to the Young Women's Christian Association, is followed by another one today that Mrs. Colby has given to the Plainfield Children's Home Association the sum of $1,000 which will be placed in the endowment fund from which interest will acrue to the Home.

In sending her check for $1,000 to Miss Ella Serrell, treasurer of the association, Mrs. Colby explained that the gift was from a fund established by her father, the late Charles Hyde, and specified in his will to be given to Plainfield charities. The Children's Home was mentioned especially, it being known that Mr. Hyde always evinced a particular interest in this charity. The gift was gratefully received by the treasurer on behalf of the association and it will prove of great benefit in carrying on the worthy enterprise established by the late Mrs. M. E. Kimball for which she worked so hard.

G. N. CROSS LECTURES AT CITY HIGH SCHOOL

Repeating his lecture on Scotland given at All Saints' Unitarian church, George N. Cross spoke in a highly interesting manner in explanation of some slides made from photographs taken on a recent trip abroad. At this time, Rev. A. C. Nickerson, pastor of the church, was a member of the party to which Mr. Cross belonged. The lecture was attended by many parents and alumni of the school in addition to all the pupils of the high school.

Taking as his topic "Scotland, the Land of Lochs and Braes," the lecturer spoke in an informal way about the country and the people, dwelling especially on the history of the Scotch people and showing slides reproducing famous paintings of Scotch royalty and public characters well known in history. He also spoke at some length on the literature of Scotland, showing pictures of the homes and birth places of the famous Scotch poets and authors.

Mr. Cross was introduced by Principal Ira W. Travell, of the school, through whose efforts the lecture was given. He introduced Mr. Cross as a college mate of Dr. Henry M. Maxson, superintendent of the local schools, at Amherst. After graduation, Mr. Cross was for many years principal of an academy in New Hampshire, and has but recently entered the field of public lecturing.

Firemen's Association Meets.

Routine business occupied the time of the North Plainfield Firemen's Relief Association at their regular meeting in the Borough Council chamber last night. William McCullough was appointed to fill the unexpired term of Walter Kettenring, representative of Company No. 2, who has recently been transferred to Company No. 1, and Walter Chandler will fill McCullough's place in Company No. 1, from which he was transferred.

1,080 Dentists in State.

The State Board of Registration and Examination in Dentistry has reported to Governor Stokes that with the closing of the year there were 1,080 licensed dentists in this State. The report says that the general public has been more thoroughly protected from charlatans and irresponsible dentists than ever before.

Likely to Give Up Vaudeville.

Proctor's theatre, at Elizabeth, it is said, is going to dispense with vaudeville performances, and to be devoted to moving picture exhibitions. It is asserted that since the playhouse opened last summer it has lost thousands of dollars, and that this is the reason why the change is to be made.

Will Elect Road Superintendent.

The Union County Board of Freeholders will meet at Elizabeth, tomorrow, in regular session, when among other things, a county superintendent of roads will be elected. The present incumbent, Mr. Fink will probably be chosen.

W. C. T. U. Meeting.

The regular weekly meeting of the W. C. T. U. tomorrow afternoon will be in charge of Mrs. Irving C. Cubberley. The subject will be "Railroad Men, Trolley Men and Firemen."

PREPARING FOR MERGER

Bi-Municipal Consolidation Commission Will Hold Important Meeting Tuesday.

PLAN REFERENDUM BILLS.

Legislature Will Be Asked to Pass Enabling Acts—Annexation Vote to Come First.

Plans for introducing in the Legislature measures paving the way for the consolidation of North Plainfield with Plainfield and the annexation of the former's territory to Union county will be discussed at a meeting of the Bi-Muncipal Consolidation Commission on Tuesday afternoon at Mayor Fisk's office. The formal call for the meeting was made this morning by the chairman of the commission, former Mayor Alexander Gilbert.

It is proposed to have two separate bills introduced at Trenton. One of these will provide for a popular election in North Plainfield to decide whether its territory shall be taken from the jurisdiction of Somerset county and be made a part and parcel of Union. The other referendum bill will provide for the merging of North Plainfield into the city of Plainfield. On both sides of "the brook" elections will be held simultenously to decide this question.

The vote on the annexation question will come first. If the people of North Plainfield should decree that they do not desire their territory to become a part of Union count, no consolidation election will be held. This would be because the commission has recommended that consolidation is only practicable and desirable providing there be annexation.

It is generally believed that State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of Somerset, will strenuously oppose the annexation referendum bill when it is introduced. As the representative of Somerset county it is believed that he will make a bitter fight to block any movement which has for its object the loss of the richest part of his own county.

FIRE COMMITTEE PLANS TO RAISE ALL SALARIES.

Following the action of the police committee, whose measure for an increase in pay in the department was passed on second reading on Monday night, the councilmanic fire committee will meet with Mayor Fisk tomorrow night for the same purpose. Chairman Henry D. Hibbard, of the fire committee, has called the meeting at which a plan of adjustment of all salaries in that department will be attempted.

It is also planned to establish a grade system in the department, the scale of pay to increase according to length and quality of service. Meritorious work in this way may be rewarded without delay. The chief alone is barred from a raise, his pay having been increased recently.

Double Birthday Celebration.

Jointly celebrating their birthday anniversaries by a single "spread" and jollification, Alfred S. DeNise and Frank Dentz entertained about forty of their local friends at a Somerset street hotel last night. DeNise's birthday was Saturday, and Dentz celebrates his on January 6. The guests included Councilman Edward Smith and Fire Chief Howard Woolston, and the time was spent in bowling and singing, supper being served late in the evening. In the vocal line, James Conroy met with the most applause, and "favored" the gathering several times. A feature of the evening's entertainment was an eating contest between George Baldwin and Howard Sharp, who won out by a drum-stick and part of the left wing. He was awarded the remainder of both fowls as a prize.

Mock Trial Financial Success.

As a result of the mock trial held at the Y. M. C. A. building Friday night, when Stephen B. Joseph was arraigned for trifling with the affections of Mrs. E. A. Lowe, as "Mrs. Jerusha R. Perkins," nearly $80 profit was netted by the Ladies' Auxiliary of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., under the auspices of which the affair was held. The money will be used to defray the running expenses of the organization.

Mrs. Goeller's Funeral.

The funeral of Mrs. Katharine Goeller, widow of Henry Goeller, who died yesterday morning, will be held at the home of her daughter, Mrs. William Myers, of Washington street, tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial will be in the Plainfield avenue cemetery.

DR. GROSZMANN HONORED

German Social-Scientific Society of New York Elects Him President.

LECTURE COURSE ANNOUNCED.

Scientists to Address Famous Society of Which Carl Shurtz Was a Founder.

Dr. Maximilian P. E. Groszmann, director of the Groszmann School at Watchung Crest, has been recently elected president of the German Social-Scientific Society of New York. This is one of the oldest and most prominent of the metropolitan German societies, having been founded back in the sixties by a number of the most prominent German physicians and scholars of the country, among whom were such men as Carl Shurtz, Dr. Abraham Jacobi and Prof. Franz Boas, of Columbia University.

It is not an exclusively scientific organization, but endeavors to mediate the work of scholars to the educated public, taking deep and sincere interest in scientific research and the development of modern thought.

Among the lecturers before the society this season are Prof. Clemmen, at present Exchange Professor at Harvard; Prof. Franz Boas, of Columbia, one of the curators of the Museum of Natural History; Rudolf Cronau; Prof. R. Leonhard, of Breslau, at present Kaiser Wilhelm Professor at Columbia; Prof. Learned, of the University of Pennsylvania; Prof. Kuno Francke, of Harvard, and Prof. Calvin Thomas, of Columbia.

DR. B. VAN D. HEDGES AGAIN CHOSEN PRESIDENT

Officers were elected and reports for the past month were received at the annual meeting of the Plainfield Board of Health, held yesterday afternoon. The officers chosen were as follows: President, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges; secretary, Dr. T. S. Davis; treasurer, F. W. Dunn.

The reports showed the sanitary condition of the city at present to be good. There was a decided decrease in the number of communicable disease during December, the following being reported: Diphtheria, 3; scarlet fever, 3; tuberculosis, 6; typhoid fever, 1; chicken pox, 5; measles, 1; total, 19. The one case of typhoid fever was brought from Rahway to Muhlenberg Hospital and the city was not responsible.

The following is the average of the total number of milk samples analyzed during December: Fats, 4.2 per cent.; solids, 13.21; solids, not fat, 9.01; basteria per thousand, 52.780; lactometer, 11.

Bert M. Waldron was granted a permit to sell milk and the applications for milk permits of W. A. Smith and John M. Hull were referred to the health officer with power. The applications for permits to collect garbage of Peter Robinson and John Ryan were laid on the table. The following returns were made to the health office during December: Marriages, 14; births, 33; deaths, 17; total, 64.

Y. M. C. A. Orchestra Concert.

The twenty-sixth concert of the Y. M. C. A. orchestra will be given in the association auditorium Monday evening, February 3. Martin A. Korff will be in charge of the players as leader of the orchestra, and a feature of the program will be the rendition of a discriptive piece, "The Forge In the Forest." Miss French, of Bound Brook, will sing several soprano solos, and Philip Van Ardsdale will sing a baritone solo.

Freeholders Meet Tomorrow.

The Union County Board of Freeholders will hold an adjourned meeting tomorrow afternoon, mainly for the purpose of deciding upon a county road supervisor to succeed J. W. Fink, of Westfield. The present incumbent was again advocated by the Republican members of the board while the Democrats have been seeking to elect Owen Farrelly, of Elizabeth.

Reed to Be Arrested.

The case of Patrick Reed, colored, charged by Truant Officer Miss Adelaide Ball with keeping his daughter from school, was called in the city court, this morning, but though he had been notified the defendant failed to appear. A warrant was immediately made out for his arrest and given to an officer to serve.

The Sesame Club to Meet.

The Sesame Club will meet tomorrow morning at the residence of Mrs. John H. Doane, 423 East Seventh street. The subject will be "English Holidays."

CITY TO LEASE BUILDING

Plan to Buy Either Smalley or Powlison and Jones Structures Abandoned.

TO ERECT A CITY HALL SOON.

All Departments, Except Fire, to Be Temporarily Located in the Smalley Building.

Arrangements will be made tonight, it is expected, by the city to lease the entire Smalley building in North avenue as a temporary home for all departments of the municipal government, excepting the fire department. If the deal goes through, and it is quite certain, all other tenants will have to find quarters elsewhere for the city will occupy all three floors.

Mayor Fisk has called the conference, which will be attended by Herbert Buxton, as chairman of the Councilmanic finance committee; Henry D. Hibbard, as chairman of the Councilmanic fire committee and the owner and architect of the Smalley building. David T. Kenney, the owner, has already expressed his willingness to lease the entire structure to the city, for a term of years, and it is expected that the Common Council will ratify any arrangements made at the conference.

The scheme to buy either the Smalley building or the Powlison & Jones building, in East Front street, for the purposes of a municipal building has practically been abandoned. Public sentiment appears to be strongly against the proposition. It is generally felt that the city itself should erect a handsome structure especially for the purpose; one that would be a credit to the town and would serve all purposes for many years.

According to report, if the deal goes through for leasing the Smalley building, the police headquarters will be located in the store now used as a butcher shop.

It is not expected that the proposed city hall will be erected for several years to come. Some officials say that in their opinion the city should wait until it is able to raise about $150,000 or $200,000 to build the hall. Several sites are being considered already but nothing definite will be done for some time.

SEVERAL COUNTY LICENSES RENEWED.

The following renewals for inn and tavern licenses throughout the county, applications for which were made yesterday morning in the Court of Common Pleas before Judge Atwater, were granted.

George B. Andelfinger, Jr., Clark township; Annie Warner, Union township; Fred Schultheis, Linden township; Gasper Buehler, Garwood; Fred Burrell, New Providence; Edward T. Earle, borough of Roselle; Paul Britts, Garwood; Bertha M. Hergert, Linden township; James C. Sickley, Springfield; Ferdinand Smith, Fanwood; Walter Dolin, Fanwood; Mary Doyle, Cranford; Gustave Deinlein, New Providence.

The application of John Kosen for an inn and tavern in the borough of Roselle, being a new one, was laid over until Saturday morning, a protest having been filed in behalf of the Mayor and citizens of Roselle. The application of Louis Schoonolf, for an inn and tavern in Union township, and one presented by Frederick Brodesser, for an inn and tavern in Linden township, were also laid over until Saturday, both applications being new.

WATER COMMISSION WILL MEET MAYOR TOMORROW.

The Mayor's Water Commission will hold a meeting on Friday night at which time a report from the engineering committee will be considered. The session will be held at Mayor Fisk's office in the Smalley building and will be attended by all members of the general committee.

It is desired that the work of investigation in charge of the commission be expedited so that an early report may be filed with the Common Council. The commission is intrusted with the task of ascertaining the feasibility and desirability of municipal control of the water supply. A favorable report is expected.

Honors for Van Wyck Brooks.

Van Wyck Brooks, Harvard, 1908, of East Seventh street, son of the late Charles Brooks, the winner of the Sewall Scholarship, as announced in the list of prizes and scholarships recently made public. Brooks is a graduate of the Plainfield High School in the class of 1904, and has done especially good work in English and Literature during his college course. Five other New Jersey Harvard men are included in the list of prize winners.

PLAINFIELD'S BIG SHARE

Local Schools to Receive $28,561.72 as Result of R. R. Tax Decision.

FANWOOD TO GET $2,372.65.

Elizabeth, $75,327.62; Westfield, $10,635.68; Summit, $7,969.12; Rahway, $15,768.89.

Plainfield's share of the tax under the Perkins act providing for the assessment of all main stem railroad property at the average municipal annual rate of the State, will be $28,561.72. The apportionment of this tax will date from July 1, 1907. Inasmuch as the local Board of School Estimate, as in the case of other school authorities throughout the State, had made provision in its budget for paying teachers' salaries and purchasing fuel, etc., for which purposes the money is intended, it is the intention of the school officials to secure, if possible, the adoption of an act which will permit them to use the railroad tax for school purposes other than those specified in the Perkins act.

The amount of tax that will be received by the various municipalities throughout the county is as follows:

Plainfield, $28,561.72; Clark Township, $340.41; Cranford, $6,336.72; Elizabeth, $75,327.62; Fanwood, $2,732.65; Garwood, $1,131.52; Linden, $2,279.56; Mountainside, $446.22; New Providence Borough, $953.07; New Providence Township, $899.91; Rahway, $15,768.89; Roselle Borough, $4,395.38; Roselle Park, $4,089.53; Springfield, $2,739.18; Summit, $7,969.12; Union, $4,819.91; Westfield, $10,635.68.

The railroad tax will be in the nature of a surplus and unless Legislative action permits, it cannot be used for other than teachers' salaries, fuel and other similar items of maintenance.

The railroads threaten to appeal from the decision of the Court of Errors and Appeals, rendered yesterday, and if they do it would still further tie up the vast amount of money to be distributed throughout the State. There is an opinion, however, that this action will not be taken by the railroads.

Surprised on His Birthday.

In honor of the birthday of her son, Edward Krausse, Mrs. Charles Krausse, of Vine street, arranged a surprise party for him Monday night. There were about a dozen guests present, and the evening was passed in playing games, after which refreshments were served. Among the guests was Mr. Krausse's cousin, from Bath Beach, L. I., and the young man was the recipient of many birthday remembrances.

Broker Kills Himself.

Charles Wadsworth Whitney, son of H. N. Whitney, and member of the firm of H. N. Whitney & Co., brokers, who occupy offices on the second floor of the Mills Building, at No. 15 Broad street, New York, committed suicide today at his father's home, No. 258 West Seventy-second street, New York, by shooting himself in the right temple with a revolver as he lay in his bed.

Joseph Kingston Against Freeholders

The contract case of Joseph Kingston against the Union County Board of Freeholders will be heard tomorrow before Judge Newcorn in the District Court. The action is to recover an amount alleged to be due for mason work performed on one of the county bridges. Freeholder S. P. T. Wilbur declared that the work was not satisfactory and in accordance with specifications.

Install Officers-elect.

The officers-elect of Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, were installed last night by the team from the New Brunswick Castle. After the installation and transaction of other business the Eagles enjoyed a spread provided by Freedom Castle. Among the visitors at the meeting was H. C. Rockey, a prominent member of a Philadelphia Castle.

Installation Postponed.

On account of the stormy weather Court Watchung, Independent Order Foresters, did not install the officers-elect last night. It was postponed to Tuesday night, January 21. A handsome jewel was presented to the retiring chief ranger, A. H. Throne, who leaves this week for his former home near Harrisburg, Pa.

Repairing Fire Bell Tower.

The W. T. Kirk Iron Company has secured the contract for repairing and painting the North Plainfield fire bell tower and have already begun work. The structure will be scraped and broken braces repaired and will then be painted.

NEW THEORY SUCCESSFUL IN INDIANAPOLIS

L. T. Cooper Makes Many Converts During Stay in That City.

The new theory (backed up by his preparation) advanced by L. T. Cooper with regard to the cause of most ill health of the present generation is being sown broadcast by this young man.

Cooper believes that the human stomach has become degenerate in civilized races and claims that good health is impossible unless the stomach is re-vitalized. This he claims to do with his preparation.

An article from the Indianapolis Star during Cooper's stay in that city has this to say of Cooper and his preparation: "Residents of this city are being astounded by L. T. Cooper and his new preparation.

"Reports that preceded Mr. Cooper's visit here told of his success in other localities, but the immense success of his medicine and the general belief in his theory was wholly unprecedented.

"So great is the rush of the public to this young man that people stand in line waiting their turn for hours in an effort to see him. The most interesting feature of this is statements made by reliable citizens as to the actual accomplishments of Cooper's medicine. Among recent statements of this character the following is a fair example:

"Mr. B. F. Campbell, of 3224 West Washington Street, had this to say of his experience with Cooper: 'I have been a victim of stomach trouble for the past five years—sick and suffering pain all the time. Everything I ate distressed me. I have been under the treatment of many physicians, and have taken all kinds of medicine, none of which afforded me relief. I was greatly discouraged, and was about ready to give up, when Mr. Cooper came to this city to introduce his preparations.

"'I was skeptical, of course, after spending so much money and taking such a large quantity of medicine, but, like the drowning man, I was ready to grab at a straw, so I secured some of Mr. Cooper's New Discovery medicine and began taking it. It seemed to help right from the first dose. I have been taking it for several weeks, and can now eat heartily and enjoy my meals for the first time in five years—eat anything, without pain or distress of any kind. I feel like a new being—life is worth living now.'"

Let us explain Mr. Cooper's remarkable medicine to you if your general health is not all that it should be.

—T. S. Armstrong.

ACKNOWLEDGE IT.

Plainfield Has to Bow to the Inevitable—Scores of Citizens Prove It.

After reading the public statement of this representative citizen of Plainfield given below, you must come to this conclusion: A remedy which cured years ago, which has kept the kidneys in good health since, can be relied upon to perform the same work in other cases. Read this:

Richard Day, of 208 East Front street, Plaineld, N. J., says: "I have given a statement which has appeared in our papers for several years. I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills because I know there is no reason why they will not do for others what they did for me. I had a miserable dull pain across my back and a sort of lameness across my kidneys. Standing any length of time or walking any distance aggravated it greatly. I was never sick much and did not like to take medicine but these attacks grew worse instead of better, and reading frequently about Doan's Kidney Pills I bought a box and used the contents. After taking the contents of two boxes I was cured."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

$10,000 Purchase Ruffled Net and Muslin Curtains

NOVELTY NETS, SASH AND LONG CURTAINS AND NET BED SETS.

It is a poor panic that brings nobody good luck. Weak-kneed merchants have been responsible for many good things which houses, having the courage of this one, are able to secure for you. For instance, this lot of curtains and bed sets was held awaiting the orders of a number of houses and the orders were canceled because of the recent financial flurry. So we were enabled to pick up the curtains at much less than they were intended to sell for—for manufacturers, too, were frightened and didn't care to hold ho much stock.

Thru this purchase we have effected a saving of from 33 1-3 to 50 per cent., notwithstanding the fact that the curtains and bed sets are all strictly new and perfect, so that you can expect a feast of values such as we have not been able to provide in a long while—another big attraction for this wonderful January Sale, during which all upholstery goods are reduced 10 per cent.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

William H. Taft, the Secretary of War and Presidential candidate, has been made the subject of a burlesque by Al. G. Field, the minstrel manager, who is here Saturday, matinee and night. The skit is most humorous, and touches upon the recent visit of Mr. Taft to the Philippines, Japan and Russia, while his recent political pronouncements on the government's policy toward our colonial possessions, and the political agitation at home, is handled in a manner, that if not instructing, it at least amusing. The Secretary's speech in the Philippine skit in which he is impersonated by Al. G. Field in black face, is hardly in line with his original utterances either at home or abroad, especially the speeches at home, in which the stage impersonation makes the Secretary attempt to contradict William Jennings Bryan. Mr. Field seizes upon any and every idea to make fun, and his latest effort is beyond anything in the same line ever attempted by him before. Under all of it, there are many little flings and darts that lend to the burlesque a tinge of sarcasm, particularly the allusions to the tariff question and the talk about the differences in the policies and platforms of the two parties. The bull fight in which Al. G. Field assumes the role of the matador with the leading comedians as toreadors, is unusually diverting, lots of comedy being introduced by the minstrel man in his capacity as bull fighter. There is one good thing about the fun of the minstrels, it is clean and wholesome, though some of the more critical might vote the bull fight a bit rough.

It is not often that we have an opportunity to see a big American production in advance of the larger cities, like New York and Chicago. The coming of Wilton Lackaye to the New Plainfield theatre Monday night is a big dramatic treat. Mr. Lackaye will be seen as "Jason" in Hall Caine's "The Bondman," which has been running for over a year at the Drury Lane theatre, London. Mr. Lackaye is making a flying trip through the South carrying with him a company of sixty people and three car loads of scenic effects. The first performance in America was given at St. Louis on September 16th and the press criticisms were unanimous in stating that both play and star had duplicated the English success. The story of the play is taken from Hall Caine's famous book of the same name and is one of extraordinary human interest. Three of the scenes are laid in the Isle of Man and three in the Islands of Sicily and give opportunity for exceptional scenic effects. It is certain that there will be a large demand for seats; reservation, therefore, should be made at the earliest possible moment.

Miss Edna Wallace Hopper in a Cohan play under the management of Cohan and Harris is booked for an engagement at the New Plainfield theatre next Tuesday night and will present Mr. Cohan's newest musical play, "50 Miles from Boston." The players who will interpret the several roles are people with reputations for conscientious work. In fact the company might almost be called an all-star one, including as it does such well known players as Miss Hopper, who is one of America's foremost comediennes; Emma Janiver, Laurence Wheat, George Parsons, James C. Marlowe, James H. Bradbury, Louise Rial and Hazel Lowry. For the scenes of his play, Mr. Cohan has gone to the village of Brookfield, Mass., which is about fifty miles from Boston, and he has there selected some of the types that make up the inhabitants of the little town, and has drawn them so carefully that they are said to live in the atmosphere of the play and plot he has devised.

May Omit Annual Banquet.

Because of the great expense and the fact that the organization is dependent solely upon its own resources, it is possible that Company K may decide to omit its annual banquet usually held in February and instead arrange for a less pretentious affair for the members to be held in the armory.

RAILROAD TAX VALID.

Reaffirming the decision of the lower tribunals, the highest court in the State, the Court of Errors and Appeals, by an unanimous vote, has declared the Randolph Perkins Main Stem Railroad Tax act constitutional. The victory is a sweeping one for the State for the railroads taxes will be increased at least 400 per cent. This means that at the lowest estimate they will be compelled to pay annually not less than $2,500,000, more than they have in the past, on main stem property alone.

Under former conditions, the railroads paid the trifling arbitrary tax rate of fifty cents on the $100. The Perkins law provides for taxation of the main stem at the average State tax rate. The average rate for 1907 was $1.62 on the $100. Heretofore the total revenue derived from this source has only amounted to $1,000,000 and even less. Now the State will get nearly $2,500,000 annually in this way.

The main stem includes one hundred feet width of running track. Second class railroad property includes everything else. So far as the latter classification is concerned, the new law is held unconstitutional. This means that the taxing of second class property will be done according to the provisions of the Duffield act. That is, it will be assessed at the local rate but the assessing will be done by the State board and not by the local assessors.

Governor Stokes, who urged the reform; Randolph Perkins, who fathered the bill, and all those who lent it their support in the Legislature, have every reason to feel proud of the work they have performed on behalf of the State, particularly as there is absolutely no chance now that the railroads can upset its provisions.

VOORHEES PRESIDENT OF BAR ASSOCIATION

Declining a fifth term as head of the association, Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh at a meeting in Elizabeth yesterday nominated former Governor Foster Voorhees for president of the Union County Bar Association. Leaving his chair, Mr. Marsh made a happy speech in which he admitted that he knew of a movement to make him president for a fifth term, but that while he esteemed the honor greatly he must decline. He then suggested Mr. Voorhees, whom he stated would be glad to succeed him. Governor Voorhees, whose election was unanimous, declared that he considered the honor second to none of the many that had been conferred upon him.

The other officers are: Vice president, former Judge William R. Codington; secretary, Fred Hyer; treasurer, Charles Colleth; trustees, Prosecutor English, Judge Atwater, James P. Connelly and Judge Gilhooley.

Contract for Lighting.

Together with Mayor Fisk and Corporation Counsel Marsh, the Councilmanic committee on lights will hold an important conference on Tuesday night. At that time final action will be taken to refer back with a favorable recommendation the electric lighting contract already presented to the Common Council. The provisions of this proposed agreement with the P. S. C. have already been enumerated in this paper. The contract will be approved at the next meeting of the Common Council.

GAS OVERCOMES PUPIL IN SCHOOL LABORATORY

Lying unconscious with his head and shoulders under a gas escapement hood, near a Bunsen burner, where gas was turned on full force, Walter Hammond, a member of the senior class of the Plainfield High School, was found by Miss Amanda Laughren, a pupil of the school, in the chemistry laboratory at about 9:30 this morning. Miss Laughren, who was passing through the laboratory on her way to a lecture, immediately notified Lindsey Best, science instructor at the school, and the lad was immediately taken to the school hospital, where he was later revived. Dr. G. W. Endicott was summoned and an examination showed the lad to be in no danger. He did not go home.

According to a somewhat disconnected story given by the lad later in the morning, he was overcome by illuminating gas as he leaned into the hood to write up an equation in connection with an experiment he had just completed at an adjoining hood. As he leaned into the hood, he smelled gas escaping, and that is the last he remembers uitil he was revived more than two hours later. Hammond, who is an enthusiast on the s ubject of chemistry, came to school early to perform some experiments. For this reason, he did not attend the illustrated lecture given in the auditorium, where the school was assembled until after 9 oclock. It was at the conclusion of this lecture that the classes were begun for the day, and then it was that Miss Laughren discovered him unconscious.

Hammond, who is subject to fainting spells, is popular as a school athlete. He played football with the high school eleven this fall and is captain of the senior class basketball team. He entered the school in the senior class this fall, coming to this city from Connecticut, where his parents live. During the morning he recovered sufficiently to continue his work in the various classes of the day. Nothing is known as to how the Bunsen burner became turned on. No one but Hammond had been working in the laboratory up to the time he was discovered unconscious, and it is believed that he must have turned the cock with his arm as he leaned against the experiment to write.

BODY OF MRS. GRIEB CREMATED AT LINDEN.

The body of Mrs. Sophia Grieb, who died suddenly at her home on East Front street, Monday morning, was cremated at Linden yesterday. No funeral service was held, it being her request, due to non-religious beliefs.

Mrs. Grieb was fifty-four years old and was the widow of Jacob Grieb who died about a year ago. He was employed in the Potter Press Works and the family resided for a long time on West Third street near Spooner avenue. Mr. Grieb was an advocate of cremation and his body was incinerated, a relative afterward throwing the ashes into the North river from a ferry boat according to his wishes. Mrs. Grieb was well known in the city and borough and was prominent in the social affairs of the Gesang and Turn Verein.

There are surviving a daughter, Miss Ella Grieb, and a son, Albert Grieb, living in New York. There are also four step-children.

CATS GETS INTO FURNACE.

Minister Accidentally Shuts Doors on It and Now Feline Is Singed.

Rev. Frank B. Ham, of Prospect street, Westfield, now has a singed cat, owing to the inquisitiveness of the feline. Mr. Ham yesterday went down cellar to shake the furnace. After two or three shakes he heard a cat meow and listened, as the sound seemed to come from overhead. He proceeded to shake the grate but stopped when the wails proceeded from the ash pit.

He opened the pit door and out bolted the maltese pet, covered with ashes. The animal darted out the cellar door to the yard, and Mr. Ham followed to see if his pet was injeuerd, but the cat fled under the front porch. Mr. Ham thinks the cat crawled in the ash pit of the furnace to get warm during the night, and that when he closed the door before shaking the furnace to keep in the dust he prevented the animal's escape until released.

Mrs. Catherine McClimont.

Mrs. Catherine McClimont, who resided in the borough for a long time, died yesterday in Muhlenberg Hospital. She was in her seventieth year and is survived by two sisters and a brother. The funeral will be held at her late residence, Duer street and Codington avenue, tomorrow morning at 7:15 and from St. Joseph's church at 8 o'clock. Burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Eagles Install Officers.

The recently elected officers of Plainfield Aerie, No. 866, Fraternal Order of Eagles, were installed last night in the aerie rooms on East Second street. The ceremony was in charge of Past Worthy President Michael Higgins as acting deputy and was followed by a social session. An informal program of addresses, songs and instrumental numbers entertained the members until midnight.

GOLF.

The next amateur championship tournament of the Metropolitan Golf Association will be held over the links of the Baltusrol Golf Club. At a recent meeting of the executive committee of the association it was decided to hold the tournament over the course near Short Hills on May 20, 21, 22 and 23. Grinnell Willis, of the Morris County Golf Club, is chairman of the tournament committee. His associates will be John R. Maxwell, Jr., of the Nassau Country Club, and a third members to be selected later.

This is one of the few important championships that have not been decided over the Baltusrol links, and it may be said that players who have not visited the course since the national amateur tournament was held there in 1904 will be surprised by the many changes. Although always an excellent course, Baltusrol has undergone wonderful improvement during the last two years. Something like $10,000 was expended on the course last season.

Many new traps have been built, for the most part along the sides of the fairway, thereby conforming to the latest idea, which favors the old-fashioned cross bunkers. Baltusrol is one of the most scientifically laid out courses in the country today. As it is always at its best in May and June, a capital contest seems assured.

Jerome D. Travers, of Montclair, gained his second 1907 title at Baltusrol last June, when he won the New Jersey State Golf Association tournament. Later in the season Travers also won the chief cup in an open tournament held there.

It was said yesterday that a Metropolitan Golf Association open championship is almost certain to be held this year. As the organization's treasury is in better condition now than ever before, the executive committee has decided that an open tournament will be given, provided some club offers its links and contributes $250. This is an improvement over last season's offer, when the association announced its willingsness to share half of the expenses. There was no metropolitan open championship contest last year. So confident is the committee of the affair being brought off during the coming season that it has decided to reserve the last week in September. In the association's last open championship, held at Hollywood in 1906, George Low, of Baltusrol, won the title.

BASEBALL.

The annual meeting of the National Baseball Commission began in Chicago Monday. August Herriman was re-elected chairman and John E. Bruce secretary. Most of the opening session was devoted to hearing the reports of the chairman and secretary. The chairman's report showed that the commission had decided ninety cases during the year and that 3,057 letters and telegrams figured in these decisions. During the year the commission expended $106,348.05, of which $97,729.50 was paid for the world's championship series.

The secretary's report showed that during the year the major leagues had paid $131,475 for players drafted and $82,026 for players purchased outright. A number of minor cases were decided. The Toledo American Association got sole title of J. J. Quinn, who, under the name of Jack Picus, had been signed by the Philadelphia National League Club. The commission ruled that he had not lived up to his obligations to the clubs to which he was assigned, and that his claim of bad treatment by Toledo was unfounded.

The committee from the National Association of Minor Leagues at the afternoon session, which was open to the public, presented a series of requests for changes in the national agreement. Ned Hanlon and Judge Kavennaugh represented the Class A leagues, Dr. F. R. Carson is here for Class B clubs, D. M. Shively for Class C and Frank Baumeister for Class D. Changes in classification for the American and the Eastern League and a proposition to give the minor leagues a representative on the national commission were discussed prior to the meeting.

A new baseball organization, to be known as the Pennsylvania and New Jersey League, was formed in Philadelphia, Monday, when delegates representing Camden, Chester, Hoboken, Trenton, Lancaster and Pottstown met and agreed on minor details. Another meeting will be held later in the week for the purpose of selecting a president. Application has been made to the national commission for protection under Class A, but if this is refused the league will be run as an outlaw.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The resignation of William H. Kuhns from the Borough Council, presented and accepted at the Council meeting Monday night, came as a surprise to Dunellenites of both parties. Mr. Kuhns gave as his reason the fact that business will prevent him from giving the time to the borough duties. This leaves five councilmen and no recorder in the borough, but Mayor Swackhammer has said nothing as yet regarding the appointment of men to fill either position. There is a possibility that Harry Bambach, who tied with Councilman Van Middlesworth with 173 votes for councilman at the balloting, will be named by Mayor Swackhammer as Mr. Kuhns' successor. Mr. Bambach is a Democrat, and the tie was decided by the appointment of Mr. Van Middlesworth at the organization meeting of the Council New Year's Day. Councilman Kuhns was a member of the Borough Council committees on light and borough buildings.

"The Church Made Glorious" will be the topic of Rev. W. W. Casselberry's address at the Presbyterian church tonight in connection with the week of prayer. Last night's subject was "The Triumphs of Faith." The week of prayer service tonight will take the place of the regular midweek prayer meeting. Services in the week of prayer are also being held nightly in the Seventh-Day Baptist church at New Market.

The heavy storms yesterday was accompanied by a wind which made things lively for signs and some of the lighter buildings of the borough. When the storm started, the sidewalks were soon covered with a thin coating of ice, which made walking dangerous. Several hard falls are reported, but none of the pedestrians were badly hurt. The heavy rain prevented the afternoon session at the local schools.

Routine business was transacted at the regular monthly meeting of the Borough Board of Education held last night at the local school.

The regular meeting of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the Presbyterian church was held this afternoon.

Henry de Brigard, of the township, is confined to his home with an attack of the grip.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The annual election of the fire department was held last night in the town rooms. Contrary to the usual custom it was a quiet election. Excelsior ticket finding no opposition, the B. E. Company members did not even turn out to vote. It had been rumored for the past week that the Chemical company would not enter the contest this year, but Excelsior had been caught that way once and prepared to wage the usual war until the last vote was cast. Philip Jahn, candidate for chief, as well as Philip Blank, for first assistant, and William Reynolds, for second assistant, were elected without a dissenting vote.

George A. Clark, of Westfield avenue, was tendered a surprise party last night. Notwithstanding the inclement weather there was a number of friends present. The evening was spent playing games and dancing, after which refreshments were served.

Frankie Lee, who has been spending the two weeks holiday vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Lee, has returned to his studies at the Madison Boarding School.

Harold Todd, who has been spending his holiday vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. L. Todd, this borough, has returned to his studies at Columbia College.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS.

Henry Frankford is suffering from bloodpoisoning, the result of being kicked on the arm by a horse on his farm near Columbus.

There is talk of organizing a branch of the Law and Order League at Lakewood, as licensed drinking places are so rapidly increasing.

The funeral of Walter Bingham, the young man whose neck was broken by a fall from an electric light pole at Bridgeton, was held at his home, in Millville, Monday.

The crew of a trolley car going toward Camden, early Monday morning, saw a man robbing P. A. Stewart's real estate office, Burlington and Essex streets, but the thief managed to escape.

Chief of Police Whalen, of Atlantic City, reported failure by the police to capture the gray automobile which smashed into a carriage near Berlin and injured Mrs. Elizabeth Picot and her son.

After hearing remonstrances against nearly every saloon in Camden, the Excise Board Monday night decided to meet last night to act on the applications. The remonstrances were filed on behalf of the Law and Order League.

A ten-year-old boy named Vandergrift narrowly escaped being drowned while skating on the lake at Haddon Heights Monday afternoon. He was saved by Theodore Eckstein, a seventeen-year-old son of Charles H. Eckstein.

Both horses were killed and James Green, a colored driver, was badly hurt when the Atlantic City express Monday struck a gravel team at a grade crossing in East Burlington. Green failed to see the train until it was too late.

George Swanson, of Pensauken, has a dog that goes away every Saturday night and returns Monday. How the dog knows when it is Saturday and where he goes are mysteries. Mr. Swanson has tried to follow the dog, but each time has been outdistanced.

James McMahon, who had an artery in his neck severed during a bar-room brawl in Paterson on Sunday, appeared in the police court Monday and was in a weakened condition. He refused to press charges against John Kilroy, his assailant, so the accused was discharged.

At an unprotected crossing of the West Jersey and Seashore Railroad, at Seventh and Royden streets, Camden, Monday, a team of the Camden Pottery Company was hit by a train. Elias Rosselle, the driver, of 1020 Orchard street, sustained severe lacerations, and a horse was killed.

Stricken with paralysis, Henry D. Gummere, an aged and well-known resident of Burlington, lay for a long time unconscious on the floor of the bathroom at his home. Members of the household, who thought that Mr. Gummere had gone out, discovered his plight and summoned medical aid. His condition is serious.

The Totowa Outing Club, at its regular meeting, held on January 3, elected the following officers for the ensuing year: William Goldsmith, president; William Hadley, vice president; George Redner, recording and financial secretary; David Laverack, treasurer. The club is going to build a house at Lake Hopatcong in the spring, somewhere around Nolan's Point.

Miss May Drake, of Arlington avenue, has returned home after spending a week with friends in Newark.

DEATH IN MANY FORMS JUMPS OVER TEXAS PONY

VARIOUS DISASTERS KILL OTHERS IN HIS NEIGHBORHOOD, BUT THIS ONE IS UNSCATHED.

Humboldt, Tenn.—D. J. Dement, a farmer living four miles southwest of Humboldt, declares he has a pony which bears a charmed life. The first escape of the Texas pony, Jim, from death was when he was loaded in a car with other horses and started for St. Louis. Just this side of Union City, the engine jumped the track and the car load of horses was thrown down a 30-foot embankment.

Out of the entire lot of horses, Jim was the sole survivor. He came out of the wreck without a scratch, being saved at the bottom of the pile by some timbers.

Dement bought the pony and he says since then that there has been continued evidence of horses having charmed lives as well as men. He says he was driving Jim with another horse into Humboldt one day, and that his team stalled immediately over the railroad track and could go no further. Just at this juncture a passenger train came along at full speed, knocking the wagon into smithereens and killing the other pony instantly, but that Jim did not receive a mark. Dement says that one summer night during an electrical storm his stock barn, in which were five head of horses, was set on fire and that the next morning he saw the bones of his four horses in the ruins, but that Jim was standing in one corner of the lot unhurt.

At one time Mr. Dement was driving a team, one of which was Jim, hitched to a wagon, across the valley of the Forked Deer river into Humboldt after heavy rains, when the levee was completely submerged, as it often is in the winter. His team stepped off at a place where a bridge had been washed away, and the other horse was drowned, in spite of all the efforts of itself and driver, but Jim managed to keep his head above the water until Mr. Dement unhitched the traces, when he swam ashore.

MICE NEST IN BONNET.

Woman Finds Them in Headgear and Faints, as Usual.

Gallopolis, O.—When the wife of a prominent tiller of the soil, living seven miles from this city, was about to buy four yards of cheesecloth at a dry goods store here she suddenly turned pale, clutched frantically at her bonnet, and then screamed:

"Gracious! There's something alive in my hat!"

As she spoke truthfully. With one hand she yanked the bonnet from her head, and then, all but swooning, she dropped into a chair, for a mouse had leaped from the covering. The merchant cautiously examined the headgear and found a family of infant mice.

When the woman had regained her composure she explained that the bonnet had been reposing on a closet shelf in her home since last winter, and that the mother mouse must have taken up her abode therein. The surprising feature of the incident is that the mice never made their presence felt until the woman asked to be shown four yards of cheesecloth.

Alarm Clock in Stocking.

Boston.—Just because an alarm clock was so indelicate as to start its clamor of "ting-a-ling-ling" while reposing in the stocking of pretty Edith F. Wilder, she was arrested by a department store detective on the charge of larceny. With her was her chum, Blanche Dunn, who also was arrested.

It was a most dramatic moment for the two pretty West End girls, who were defying with flashing eyes the charges of the store detective. It was about the moment when the girls seemed to be winning their point that the alarm clock went on its wild telltale ramble, and the girls were arrested.

Divers Fight Beneath Sea.

Tampa, Fla.—Six miles off Tarpen Springs, on the gulf's bottom, 57 feet under the surface, Nicholas Andreas and John Bastoni, Greek sponge divers, fought desperately with sponge hooks for possession of a big sponge. Both received painful wounds. Andreas came to Tampa to institute prosecution against Bastoni, only to learn that no court had jurisdiction.

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS.

Copyright, 1906, by Robert W. Chambers.

So he found a place beside her one step lower, and she leaned forward, elbows on knees, rounded white chin in her palms, the starlight giving her bare arms and shoulders a marble luster and tinting her eyes a deeper amethyst.

And now, innocently untethered, mission and all, she laid her heart quite bare—one chapter of it. And, like other women errant who believe in the influence of their sex individually and collectively, she began wrong by telling him of her engagement perhaps to emphasize her pure disinterestedness in a crusade for principle only.

So it was when she was most eloquent, most earnestly inspired—nay, in the very midst of a plea for sweetness and light and simple living—that his reasonings found voice in the material comment:

"I never imagined you were engaged!"

"Of course you didn't. You'd known me for about three hours—there on the cliff"—

"But—Quarrier"—

Over his youthful face a sullen shadow had fallen—flickering, not yet settled. He would not for anything on earth have talked freely to the woman destined to be Quarrier's wife. He had talked too much anyway. Something in her, something about her, had loosened his tongue. He had made a plain ass of himself, that was all—a garrulous ass. And truly it seemed that the girl beside him, even in the starlight, could follow and divine what he had scarcely expressed to himself, or her instincts had taken a shorter cut to forestall his own conclusion.

"Don't think the things you are thinking!" she said in a fierce little voice, leaning toward him.

"What do you mean?" he asked, taken aback.

"You know! Don't! It is unfair—it is—is faithless—to me. I am your friend. Why not? Does it make any difference to you whom I marry? If such a friendship as ours is to become worth anything to you—to me—why should it trouble you that I know and am thinking of things that concern you? Is it because the confidence is one sided? Is it because you have given and I have listened and given nothing in return to balance the account? I do give interest—deep interest, sympathy if you ask it; I give confidence in return if you desire it."

"What can a girl like you need of sympathy?" he said, smiling.

"You don't know, you don't know! If heredity is a dark vista and if you must stare through it all your life, sword in hand, always on your guard, do you think you are the only one?"

"Are you—one?" he said incredulously.

"Yes," with an involuntary shudder, "not that way. It is easier for me. I think it is. I know it is. But there are things to combat—impulses, a recklessness, perhaps something almost ruthless. What else I do not know, for I have never experienced violent emotions of any sort—never even deep emotion."

"You are in love!"

"Yes, thoroughly," she added, with conviction, "but not violently. I"—She hesitated, stopped short, leaning forward, peering at him through the dusk, and, "Mr. Siward, are you laughing?" She rose, and he stood up instantly.

There was lightning in her dark eyes now; in his something that glimmered and danced. She watched it, fascinated. Then of a sudden the storm broke, and they were both laughing convulsively, face to face, there under the stars.

"Mr. Siward," she breathed, "I don't know what I am laughing at, do you? You—you infer that I am either not in love or incapable of it or too ignorant of it to know what I'm talking about. That, Mr. Siward, is what you have done to me tonight."

"I—I'm sorry"—

"Are you?"

"I ought to be anyway," he said.

It was unfortunate. An utterly inexcusable laughter seemed to bewitch them, hovering always close to his lips and hers.

"How can you laugh!" she said. "How dare you! I don't care for you nearly as violently as I did, Mr. Siward. A friendship between us would not be at all good for me. Things pass too swiftly—too intimately. There is too much mockery in you"— She ceased suddenly, watching the somber alteration of his face, and, "Have I hurt you?" she asked penitently.

"No."

"Have I, Mr. Siward? I did not mean it." The attitude, the words, slackening to a trailing sweetness, and then the moment's silence stirred him.

"I'm rather ignorant myself of violent emotion. I suspect normal people are. As for our friendship, we'll do the best we can for it, no matter what occurs," he added, thinking of Quarrier, and, thinking of him, glanced up to see him within earshot and moving straight toward them from the veranda above.

There was a short silence, a tentative civil word from Siward, then Miss Landis took command of something that had a grotesque resemblance to a situation. A few minutes [illegible] house, the girl walking serenely between Siward and her preoccupied affianced.

"If your shoes are as wet as my skirts and slippers you had better change, Mr. Siward," she said, pausing at the foot of the staircase.

So he took his congee, leaving her standing there with Quarrier and mounted to his room.

In the corridor he passed Ferrall, who had finished his business correspondence and was returning to the cardroom.

"Here's a letter that Grace wants you to see," he said. "Read it before you turn in, Stephen."

"All right, but I'll be down later," replied Siward, passing on, the letter in his hand. Entering his room, he kicked off his wet pumps and found dry ones; then moved about, whistling a gay air from some recent vaudeville, busy with rough towels and silken footgear, until, reshod and dry, he was ready to descend once more.

The encounter, the suddenly informal acquaintance with this young girl, had stirred him agreeably, leaving a slight exhilaration. Even her engagement to Quarrier added a tinge of malice to his interest. Besides, he was young enough to feel the flattery of her concern for him.

Perhaps, as like recognizes like, he recognized in her the instincts of the born drifter momentarily at anchor—the temporary inertia of the opportunist, the latent capacity of an unformed character for all things and anything. Add to these her few years, her beauty and the wholesome ignorance so confidently acknowledged, what man could remain unconcerned, uninterested, in the development of such possibilities? Not Siward, amused by her sagacious and impulsive prudence, worldliness and innocence in accepting Quarrier and touched by her profitless, frank and unworldly friendliness for himself.

Not that he objected to her marrying Quarrier. He rather admired her for being able to do it, considering the general scramble for Quarrier. But let that take care of itself. Meanwhile their sudden and capricious intimacy had aroused him from the morbid reaction consequent upon the cheap notoriety which he had brought upon himself. Let him sponge his slate clean and begin again a better record, flattered by the solicitude she had so prettily displayed.

Whistling under his breath the same gay, empty melody, he opened the top drawer of his dresser, dropped in his mother's letter and, locking the drawer, pocketed the key. He would have time enough to read the letter when he went to bed. He did not just now feel exactly like skimming through the fond, foolish sermon which he knew had been preached at him through his mother's favorite missionary, Grace Ferrall. What was the use of dragging in the sad old questions again, of repeating his assurances of good behavior, of reiterating his promises of moderation and watchfulness, of explaining his own self confidence? Better that the letter await his bedtime. His prayers would be the sincerer the fresher the impression, for he was old fashioned enough to say the prayers that an immature philosophy proved superfluous, for, he thought, if prayer is any use it takes only a few minutes to be on the safe side.

So he went downstairs leisurely, prepared to acquiesce in any suggestion from anybody, but rather hoping to saunter across Sylvia Landis' path before being committed.

She was standing beside the fire with Quarrier, one foot on the fender, apparently too preoccupied to notice him. So he strolled into the gunroom, which was blue with tobacco smoke and aromatic with the volatile odors from decanters.

There were a few women there, and the majority of the men, Lord Alderdene, Major Belwether and Mortimer, were at a table by themselves. Stacks of ivory chips and five cards spread in the center of the green explained the nature of their game, and Mortimer, raising his heavy inflamed eyes and seeing Siward unoccupied, said wheezily: "Cut out that 'widow' and give Siward his stack! Anything above two pairs for a jack triples the ante. Come on, Siward, there's a decent chap!"

So he seated himself for a sacrifice to the blind goddess balanced upon her winged wheel, and the cards ran high—so high that stacks dwindled or toppled within the half hour, and Mortimer grew redder and redder, and Major Belwether blander and blander, and Alderdene's face wore a continual nervous snicker, showing every white hound's tooth, and the ice in the tall glasses clinked ceaselessly.

It was late when Quarrier "sat in," with an expressionless acknowledgment of Siward's presence and an emotionless raid upon his neighbor's resources with the first hand dealt, in which he participated without drawing a card.

And always Siward, eyes on his cards, seemed to see Quarrier before him, his overmanicured fingers caressing his silky beard, the symmetrical pompadour dark and thick as the winter fur on a rat, tufting his smooth blank forehead.

It was very late when Siward first began to be aware of his increasing deafness, the difficulty, too, that he had in making people hear, the annoying contempt in Quarrier's womanlike eyes. He felt that he was making a fool of himself, very noiselessly somehow, but with more racket than he expected when he miscalculated the distance between his hand and a decanter.

It was time for him to go unless he chose to ask Quarrier for an explanation of that sneer which he found distasteful. But there was too much noise, too much laughter.

Restless, he had a matter to attend to—the careful perusal of his mother's letter to Mrs. Ferrall.

Very white, he rose. After an indeterminate interval he found himself entering his room.

The letter was in the dresser. Several things seemed to fall and break, but he got the letter, sank down on the bed's edge and strove to read—set his teeth grimly, forcing his blurred eyes to a focus. But he could make nothing of it, nor of his toilet either, nor of Ferrall, who came in on his way to bed, having noticed the electricity still in full glare over the open transom, and who straightened out matters for the stunned man lying face downward across the bed, his mother's letter crushed in his nerveless hand.

CHAPTER FOUR

BREAKFAST at Shotover, except for the luxurious sluggards to whom trays were sent, was served in the English fashion, any other method or compromise being impossible.

Ferrall appeared to be a normal man, energetically devoted to his business, his pleasures, his friends and comfortably in love with his wife. And if some considered his vigor in business to be lacking in mercy, that vigor was always exercised within the law. He never transgressed the rules of war, but his headlong energy sometimes landed him close to the dead line. He had already breakfasted when the earliest risers entered the morning room to saunter about the sideboards and investigate the simmering contents of silver covered dishes on the warmers.

The fragrance of coffee was pleasantly perceptible. Men in conventional shooting attire roamed about the room, selected what they cared for and carried it to the table. Mrs. Mortimer was there consuming peaches that matched her complexion. Marion Page, always more congruous in field costume and belted jacket than in anything else, and always, like her own hunters, minutely groomed, was preparing a breakfast for her own consumption with the leisurely precision characteristic of her whether in the saddle, on the box or grassing her brace of any covey that ever flushed.

Captain Voucher and Lord Alderdene discussed prospects between bites, attentive to the monosyllabic opinions of Miss Page. Her twin brothers, Gordon and Willis, shyly consuming oatmeal, listened respectfully and waited on their sister at the slightest lifting of her thinly arched eyebrows.

Into this company sauntered Siward apparently no worse for wear, for as yet the enemy had set upon him no proprietary insignia save a rather becoming pallor and faint bluish shadows under the eyes. He strolled about, exchanging amiable greetings, and presently selected a chilled grape fruit as his breakfast. Opposite him Mortimer, breakfasting upon his own dreadful bracer of an apple soaked in port, raised his heavy inflamed eyes with a significant leer at the iced grape fruit.

Siward glanced out through the leaded casements into the brilliant September sunshine.

Outside he could see Major Belwether, pink skinned, snowy chop whiskers brushed rabbit fashion, very voluble with Sylvia Landis, who listened absently, head partly averted. Quarrier in tweeds and gaiters, his morning cigar delicately balanced in his gloved fingers, strolled near enough to be within earshot, and when Sylvia's inattention to Major Belwether's observations became marked to the verge of rudeness he came forward and spoke. But whatever it was that he said appeared to change her passive inattention to quiet displeasure, for, as Siward rose from the table, he saw her turn on her heel and walk slowly toward a group of dogs presided over by some kennel men and gamekeepers.

She was talking to the head gamekeeper when he emerged from the house, but she saw him on the terrace and gave him a bright nod of greeting, so close to an invitation that he descended the stone steps and crossed the dew wet lawn.

"I am asking Dawson to explain just exactly what a 'Shotover drive' resembles."

"I am asking Dawson to explain just exactly what a 'Shotover drive' resembles," she said, turning to include Siward in an animated conference with the big, scraggy head keeper.

"You know, Mr. Siward, that it is a custom peculiar to Shotover House to open the season with what is called a Shotover drive?"

"I heard Alderdene talking about it," he said, smilingly inspecting the girl's attire of khaki, with its buttoned pockets, gun pads and Cossack cartridge loops, and the tan knee kilts hanging heavily plaited over gaiters and little thick soled shoes. He had never cared very much to see women afield, for, in a rare case where there was no affectation, there was something else inborn that he found unpleasant—something lacking about a woman who could take life from frightened wild things, something shocking that a woman could look, unmoved, upon a twitching, blood soiled heap of feathers at her feet.

Meanwhile Dawson, dog whip at salute, stood knee deep among his restless setters explaining the ceremony with which Mr. Ferrall ushered in the opening of each shooting season.

"It's our own idee, Miss [illegible]," said proudly. "One't a season Mr. Ferrall and his guests likes it for a mixed bag. 'Tis a sort of picnic, miss. The guns is in pairs, sixty yards apart in line, an' the rules is walk straight ahead, dogs to heel until first cover is reached; fire straight or to quarter, never blankin' nor whipin' no eyes, and ground game counts as feathers for the Shotover cup."

"Oh! It's a skirmish line that walks straight ahead?" said Siward, nodding.

"Straight ahead, sir. No stoppin', no turnin' for hedges, fences, water or rock. There is boats f'r deep water and fords marked and corduroy f'r to pass the Seven Dreens. Luncheon at 1, miss, an hour's rest, then straight on over hill, valley, rock and river to the rondyvoo atop Osprey ledge. You'll see the poles and the big nests, sir. It's there they score for the cup and there when the bag is counted the traps are ready to carry you home again." And to Siward: "Will you draw for your lady, sir? It is the custom."

"Are you my lady?" he asked, turning to Sylvia.

"Do you want me?"

In the smiling luster of her eyes the tiniest spark flashed out at him, a hint at defiance for somebody, perhaps for Major Belwether, who had taken considerable pains to enlighten her as to Siward's condition the night before; perhaps also for Quarrier, who had naturally expected to act as her gun bearer in emergencies.

"I'm probably a poor shot," she said, looking smilingly straight into Siward's eyes. "But if you'll take me"—

"I will with pleasure," he said. "Dawson, do we draw for position? Very well, then." And he drew a slip of paper from the box offered by the head keeper.

"No. 7," said Sylvia, looking over his shoulder. "Come out to the starting line, Mr. Siward. All the positions are marked with golf disks. What sort of ground have we ahead, Dawson?"

"Kind o' stiff, miss," grinned the keeper. "Pity your gentleman ain't drawed the meadows an' Sachem hill line. Will you choose your dog, sir?"

"You have your dog, you know," observed Sylvia demurely, and Siward, glancing among the impatient setters, saw one white, heavily feathered dog straining at his leash and wagging frantically, brown eyes fixed on him.

The next moment Sagamore was free, devouring his master with caresses, the girl looking on in smiling silence, and presently, side by side, the man, the girl and the dog were strolling off to the starting line, where already people were gathering in groups, selecting dogs, fowling pieces, comparing numbers and discussing the merits of their respective lines of advance.

Ferrall, busily energetic and in high spirits, greeted them gayly, pointing out the red disk bearing their number, 7, where it stood out distinctly above the distant scrub of the foreland.

"You two are certainly up against it!" he said, grinning. "There's only one rougher line, and you're in for thorns and water and a scramble across the backbone of the divide."

"Is it any good?" asked Siward.

"Good—if you've got the legs and Sylvia doesn't play baby"—

"I?" she said indignantly. "Kemp, you annoy me. And I will bet you now," she added, flushing, "that your old cup is ours."

"Wait," said Siward, laughing. "We may not shoot straight."

"You will. Kemp, I'll wager whatever you dare."

"Gloves? Stockings—against a cigarette case?" he suggested.

"Done," she said disdainfully, moving forward along the skirmish line, with a nod and smile for the groups now disintegrating into couples—the Page boys with Eileen Shannon and Rena Bonnesdel, Marion Page followed by Alderdene, Mrs. Vendenning and Major Belwether and the Tassel girl convoyed by Leroy Mortimer. Farther along the line, taking post, she saw Quarrier and Miss Calthness, Captain Voucher with Mrs. Mortimer and others too distant to recognize moving across country with glitter and glint of sunlight on slanting gun barrels.

And now Ferrall was climbing into his saddle beside his pretty wife, who sat her horse like a boy, the white flag lifted high in the sunshine, watching the firing line until the last laggard was in position.

"All right, Grace!" said Ferrall briskly. Down went the white flag. The far ranged line started into motion straight across country, dogs at heel.

From her saddle Mrs. Ferrall could see the advance strung out far afield from the dark spots moving along the Fells boundary to the two couples traversing the salt meadows to north. Crack! A distant report came faintly over the uplands against the wind.

"Voucher," observed Ferrall, "probably a snipe. Hark! He's struck them again, Grace."

Mrs. Ferrall, watching curiously, saw Siward's gun fly up as two big dark spots floated up from the marsh and went swinging over his head. Crack! Crack! Down sheered the black spots, tumbling earthward out of the sky.

"Duck," said Ferrall. "A double for Stephen. Lord Harry! How that man can shoot! Isn't it a pity that"—

He said no more. His pretty wife, astride her thoroughbred, sat silent, gray eyes fixed on the distant figures of Sylvia Landis and Siward, now shoulder deep in the reeds.

"Was it very bad last night?" she asked in a low voice.

Ferrall shrugged. "He was not offensive. He walked steadily enough upstairs. When I went into his room he lay on the bed as if he'd been struck by lightning, and yet you see how he is this morning."

CHIEF KIELY'S TEAM MEETS ITS WATERLOO

The winning streak developed by Chief Kiely's Grant team of bowlers in the tourney at Campbell's alleys, was interrupted for the first time last night. The Waterloo came in the shape of V. W. Nash, Jr.'s Washingtons, who larruped the police head's aggregation to the tune of two out of three, the first time the defeated side has dropped a series. The loss not only served to weaken the Grants' hold on first place but it revived hope in some of the other teams which had just about concluded all they could do was to fight for second, third or fourth position.

The series last night was a rattling good one and the Washingtons deserved all the applause they got from the gallery. They dropped the first game by a shortage of forty-six pins but instead of losing heart they pulled together for a "do or die" effort in the second. As a result the Grants were piled under a margin of eighty-eight, the figures standing 919 to 831. The last game was a hummer all through and though Chief Kiely's men were a little in the lead up to the ninth frame it was so slight they couldn't afford to crow. When it came to the wind-up, the G. W.'s slammed in for marks straight down while the opposition missed several easy spares. To help along the good work, "Billy" Skinner wound up with a couple of strikes and eight off, giving him a total of 212. When the scores were added the Washingtons had the game by fifteen pins.

While the individual averages were fair as a rule, the only double centuries made were Skinner's and another one by "Jim" O'Keefe. Ed Laing was out of form and his average received an awful thump. Chief Kiely failed to reach a 200 and "Doc" Giddes went low for the night with a 116 chalk-up.

The scores:

WASHINGTON.
O'Keefe	172	200	149
G. Ortleb	159	167	167
R. Toense	162	191	172
Skinner	134	182	212

Giddes	158	198	116
T. McInerney	154	153	158
Laing	168	169	182
Totals	840	831	135

Umpire, C. W. Runyon; scorers, Dr. Herbert and John Conklin.

The next games in the series will be rolled Friday night, the Bismarcks and the Wellingtons being the competing teams.

PARKS TAKE THREE GAMES FROM NEWARK BAY

The Park Club five captured three games in their match with Newark Bay, on the local alleys, last night, thereby giving them a big boost in their standing in the Central Journal Bowling League. The third game proved the strength of the Parks, when they rolled up a score of 919 against 772 for their opponents. In this game Long was the star bowler, putting up a score of 236.

The Parks took the first game by a score of 792 to 786, the second by a score of 871 to 850. The home team did not get a good start until after the first game, when Lyman put up a score of 193 and Long duplicated it. In the third game Barlow rolled 191, while Long's 236 was the high mark for the evening. The scores:

PARK CLUB.
Barlow	169	155	191
Lyman	166	193	165
Daniels	143	171	144
Long	143	193	236

INTER-CITY LEAGUE PLANS TO REORGANIZE

The Inter-City Amateur Baseball League will hold its first meeting at the Y. M. C. A. on Friday night, January 17, when steps will be taken toward reorganization for next summer. Application blanks have been sent to Roselle, Rahway, Cranford, Scotch Plains, Somerville and New Brunswick and together with the Y. M. C. A. and Clinton Avenue clubs of this city, it is hoped to form a strong league of six teams. It is understood that Westfield will not be in a position to enter a team in the league, past experience being sufficient for the sports in that town.

The Clinton Avenue Club, winners of the pennant last season, is the only organization that is ready to open the 1908 season. All of last year's players have been signed and this will insure a strong aggregation, especially as the men have played together for several years. Last year the club won twenty-four games and lost four, making a total of 72 runs against 68 for opposing teams. The team average was .269. Brit. Martin led with a percentage of .375. The list follows:

	Games.	A.B.	H.	P.C.
Brit. Martin	25	112	42	.375
Chas. Gilman	16	65	24	.369
Jas. Emerson	21	91	31	.341
Wm. Giles	23	97	32	.329
Jack Martin	25	103	30	.297
Norman Barnes	25	103	26	.253
Wm. O'Loughlin	25	96	24	.250
Adam Schott	25	94	18	.192
C. Randolph	23	89	14	.157
D. Scott	9	36	6	.166
H. Giles	3	14	3	.214

BOWLING.

To further stimulate interest in bowling, Manager Campbell, of Campbell's alleys, has offered a prize of $5 for the roller making the ten highest scores during the present month. A bunch of good figures have already been chalked up and some hitherto unknown bowlers have climbed into the limelight in this way.

The first half of the home and home series between Nash and Willett, of this city, and Miller and McMahon, of Westfield, will be rolled on Campbell's alleys tonight. The match will comprise eleven games, six to be bowled here and the remainder in Elizabeth.

Warren Townley, a devotee of the ten pin game, smashed a finger in a peculiar way at Campbell's academy last night. He was in the act of swinging a ball when "Billy" Skinner passed back of him to another alley, also holding a ball in his hand. The two come together and Townley's finger was between. The force of the impact was sufficient to crush the digit so that the nail was forced out.

Hope Five to Play at Bound Brook.

The Hope Young Men's Club basketball team will journey to Bound Brook Saturday evening for a game with the Laurel A. C., of that place. Those who will make the trip are Mortimer, Snyder, Rimmer, Hunter, Kenney, Eckert and Brownell, and, as the teams are understood to be evenly matched, the game ought to be a close one.

Frank Rimmer, manager of the Hope Y. M. C. basketball five, is desirous of scheduling basketball games with local teams. His address is 681 Essex street, telephone 671-L.

FOR OWN WATER WORKS

Westfield's Mayor Urges That the Town Build a Municipal Plant.

TO INVESTIGATE THE SUBJECT.

Committee of Prominent Residents to Be Named to Report On Feasibility of the Scheme.

Mayor Augustus O. Alpers, of Westfield, in his annual report to the Common Council, has recommended that the town build and own its own waterworks. The water in this section of the State is supplied by the Union Water Company, and frequently complaints are said to have been made of excessive rates.

"The inhabitants of the town of Westfield," Mayor Alpers said, "annually pay thousands of dollars for water, a portion of which might go to operate its own plant, the remainder to help pay the cost of running the other departments of the town, and thus reduce taxes.

"If you tried to find out who was so solicitious about the town you would undoubtedly discover some one deriving an income from the water company who was of a philanthropic nature warning you not to take a step of this kind. I intend later to increase the committee on water plant by adding to it the names of a number of prominent citizens of Westfield."

Mayor Alpers appointed Councilmen John Schmit of the Second ward, and Robert Middleditch, of the Third ward, to make a study of local conditions looking to the erection of a municipally owned water plant and report in the near future.

"The Bondman" a Big Production.

Wilton Lackaye and his company of players in "The Bondman," which is to appear here next Monday night, is drawing crowded houses at the Newark theatre, Newark, this week. The production requires the services of twenty-four principals and scenically is one of the heaviest productions on the road. The play is by Hall Caine, author of "The Christian," and the play deals with the hatred of brothers engendered by love for the same girl.

John Reynolds.

John Reynolds, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. John Reynolds, of McDowell street, died yesterday afternoon. The funeral was held this morning and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

States.

The latter cause was set up so that if the appellants so decided, they could appeal to the United States Supreme Court, in the event of an adverse decision, such as yesterday's. There will probably be a conference of counsel in a few days to decide the further line of action. The fact that through all the courts thus far gone all the justices upheld the law is taken to mean there is very little chance of a further test being successful.

Under the law all railroad property is classified for purposes of taxation as main stem, including the franchise, tangible personal and second class property. The main stem includes the main roadbed, not exceeding 100 feet wide, with the rails, ties and all structures erected thereon, otehr than passenger and freight stations. The main stem property is assessed by the State Board of Assessors and taxed at the average rate of the State.

Second class property includes everything outside of the main stem, and was to be assessed by the local assessors in each taxing district, and the proceeds used for local purposes, but the decision puts the assessing back with the State board.

Resolution of Condolance.

The Rasores wish to place on record their deep sense of loss in the death of Mrs. Horace Kimball. For fifteen years she was their honored and faithful president; if possible, always at her post in fair weather and foul. She was indeed, as has been said, a woman of rare ability, and her early association with the best of New England cultivation had given her a great store of delightful remembrances. Her natural dislike to talking about herself was not often overcome, but occasionally when studying some great character whom most of us knew only from the outside, we would find that our president had a personal acquaintance in the home, and could add a bit of recollection that gave a touch of vividness to the picture. The announcement of her death came to us as a shock from which we find it difficult to recover. Her memory will be fragrant and long cherished by her friends of The Rasores.

Philip Swain, of Craig place, who has been very ill with a fever, has so far recovered as to be able to sit up.

Miss Fanny Pelletreau, sister of Mrs. Charles R. Thiers, of Craig place, is very ill, and today a nurse was engaged to assist in caring for her.

FUNERAL OF MRS. SMOCK.

Service Conducted This Afternoon at the Home of Her Daughter.

The funeral of Mrs. Eliza P. Smock, widow of George Smock, was held this afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Penfield, of Park avenue. It was conducted by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, and was attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends. Burial was made at Hillside cemetery, the pall bearers being J. H. Armstrong, LeRoy Brewster and H. W. Vandeventer, of New York; William Sandford, Joseph T. Vail and J. H. Angerbauer, of this city.

Mrs. Smock's maiden name was Miss Eliza Brokaw and she was a sister to Isaac P. and the late William Brokaw, founders of the old established clothing house of that name in New York. Isaac Brokaw is now the only surviving member of the family. Mrs. Brokaw was born at Metuchen but had lived in or about Plainfield nearly all her life. Mr. Smock died about twelve years ago.

INTRODUCE FOWLER BILL

Credit Currency Measure Also Provides Guarantee for State Deposits.

SOME IMPORTANT FEATURES.

Proposed Law Which Will Not Be Seriously Considered Now Follows His Former Bills In General.

The House Committee on Banking and Currency at Washington, D. C., yesterday agreed upon a bill to increase the elasticity of the currency, and will report it to the House some time today.

The bill will be introduced by Mr. Fowler, and referred to his committee, where it will form the working basis for the framing of a bill of possibly the same tenor and scope.

It provides for the complete retirement of all present outstanding national bank bond-secured currency and authorizes in lieu thereof a currency based upon general assets of the bank, to be worked out in this way:

The Comptroller of the Currency will designate throughout the country certain redemption cities, so that there shall be a redemption city within at least twenty-four hours' reach of every national bank.

The national banks will indicate to the Comptroller of the Currency to what redemption city they wish to be joined. The comptroller will then select a time and place each redemption district for the organization of that district in the following manner:

Each national bank in that district, regardless of its capital stock, will be entitled to one vote. Representatives of the banks will meet at a time and place designed and elect a board of managers, to consist of seven members. These seven will elect a chairman, who will become a deputy comptroller of the currency and assume control of his redemption district, except that he shall not have charge of the enforcement of the criminal statutes.

Each national bank is authorized to present to the Secretary of the Treasury national bank notes and lawful moneys in lieu of other national, bond-secured outstanding notes. Then if the bank's application therefore is indorsed by the board of managers of the redemption district to which it belongs the bank will receive guaranteed credit notes to the amount of its capital stock. These notes will be subject to a tax of two per cent. per annum. Each bank will be required to deposit as a guaranty fund with the Treasurer of the United States five per cent. of its average deposits for the preceding twelve months and five per cent. of the credit notes which it takes out.

The revenue thus obtained is to create and support a national guaranty of both the $500,000,000 for the guaranty of both the reposits and the oustanding bank notes of every national bang. Eighty per cent. of this found is to be invested in United States bonds drawing two per cent. interest, while the remaining twenty per cent. is to be deposited in banks of the various redemption cities for the purpose of redeeming the guaranteed credit notes of the banks in the various redemption districts.

When the national guaranty fund reaches $25,000,000, which would be almost simultaneous with the birth of the new law, the government is required to return to the banks of the United States bonds which the government now holds as security for federal deposits; the object being to enable the banks to get control of the bonds so that the government can invest the eighty per cent. of the guaranty fund in two per cent. bonds and regain control.

In buying these bonds the banks holding them shall be paid their original purchase price, provided the bonds were bought before January 1, 1908, and providing their exact purchase price can be proved.

This measure is along the general lines of former Fowler bills. Mr. Fowler believes in the wisdom of his measure, but doubtless understands that it will not be seriously considered by the Senate. He will not, however, permit his personal convictions interfere with favorable action by his committee on the Aldrich bill.

Dr. Schenck Ill.

During the past week, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, has suffered a return of his nerve-racking headaches, and he also has a light attack of the grip, which confines him to his bed. Dr. Cregar, who is in attendance, does not consider his condition alarming, although he is much weakened as a result of his former illness. Prompt treatment and good nursing, it is hoped, will pull him through.

CALL COUNCIL TOGETHER

City Fathers to Hold Special Session to Decide City Hall Matter

TO MEET NEXT MONDAY NIGHT.

Conference of Mayor, Owner of Building and Some Councilmen Over the Proposition Last Night.

President Ralph I. Tolles has called a special meeting of the Common Council for Monday night. The purpose of the emergency session will be to decide definitely one way or the other whether the city shall buy or lease accommodations for municipal offices. The particular scheme is to obtain councilmanic sanction if possible for a lease of the Smalley building for a term of three or four years or until such time as a city hall is erected.

A conference was held last night by Mayor Fisk and several heads of Councilmanic committees together with the owner of the structure, D. T. Kenney, and the architect. Mr. Kenney made a proposition to lease the entire building and the upshot of the conference was a request that he put his offer in writing and have it ready for the special meeting on Monday night.

There is a wide division of sentiment concerning the city hall scheme. Many favor a lease of the Smalley structure pending the erection of a handsome building. Some others favor the purchase of the North avenue building while others are known to lean towards the idea of buying the Powlison & Jones building in Front street.

The chairman of the fire, street and finance committees of the Council joined in the deliberations last night but it was impossible to reach any agreement.

M'INTYRE CONCERT TONIGHT AT CASINO.

The third of the series of Chamber Music Concerts takes place at the Casino tonight. The program upholds the fine reputation these affairs have attained and contains items of much interest to lovers of good music. The trio, Joseph McIntyre, pianist; Vladimir Dubinsky, 'cellist, and Maurice Kaufman, violinist, will give two ensemble numbers, the Beethoven Trio in B flat opus 11, and a trio by Constantin Sternberg, the prominent Philadelphia composer.

Mr. McIntyre makes his appearance as soloist, giving Schumann's "Papillons." Paul Dufault, the New York tenor, will assist, his numbers containing songs by Massenet, Edward Elgar and Arthur Foote.

These concerts continue to grow in popular appreciation and regard. This is their third season and are acknowledged to be the finest of the musical treats of Plainfield.

UNVEIL DOANE STATUE.

Governor-Elect Fort and Others Speak at Exercises in Newark.

The unveiling of the statue of Monsignor George R. Doane, in Newark, took place today. There was a parade, in which the survivors of the First New Jersey Regiment, of which he was chaplain, took part, and many Catholic societies were in line. Former United States Senator James Smith presided, and Mayor Haussling accepted the statue for the city.

An address by Bishop O'Connor followed, after which Governor-elect J. Franklin Fort made a brief speech. Representative R. Wayne Parker delivered the oration. Gardner Doane, a grand nephew, unveiled the statue.

Wife Appears Against Husband.

In the city court this morning, Mrs. Eliza Bennett, of Elm place, appeared against her husband, Harry Bennett, who she charged with non-support. She informed Judge Runyon that he had done nothing in three weeks to provide for herself and six children and that she caused his arrest because he would not look for work. Bennett claimed to have the promise of a job and the case was continued for two weeks in order that he might have a chance to do better.

Informed of Relative's Death.

Richard Norwood, of Arlington avenue, received word yesterday of the death of his niece, Miss Margaret Norwood, of Washington, D. C., making the third time in six weeks that a relative had died. Mrs. Norwood has also been afflicted recently, returning Saturday from Meharen, Va., where she attended the funeral of her father.

To Speak at Mission.

Captain Hopkins, of the local Salvation Army corps, will speak at the services at the Plainfield Rescue Mission, to be held in the W. C. T. U. rooms on Madison avenue tonight. All are welcome.

MR. WHITNEY KNOWN HERE

N. Y. Banker Who Shot Himself, Has Been Under Treatment at Dr. Cooley's.

Young Man, On Verge of Nervous Collapse, Came To Local Institution Last Week For Treatment.

Charles W. Whitney, the New York banker and broker, who was found dead in bed at his home on West Seventy-second street, New York, yesterday, with a bullet hole in his temple and a revolver in his han, as told in yesterday's Daily Press, had been a patient under treatment at the Brookside sananarium on Somerset street until last Saturday, when he returned to his New York home to spend the week-end with his family.

Dr. Justus H. Cooley, owner of the sanatarium, said today that Mr. Whitney had come there on the verge of a nervous collapse last Tuesday. He had been a sufferer with neurasthenia for nearly a year past and during the summer had had a sunstroke. He was troubled with insomnia, and the death of his mother, about six months ago, had made him despondent. About ten months ago, he fell from his horse while riding in Aiken, S. C., and this injury was responsible for his nervous condition and resulting despondency. Dr. Cooley said that Mr. Whitney had been taking a treatment of massage and baths at the local sanatarium. A regular course of treatment was to have been begun after an examination this week.

Mr. Whitney's brother, Howard F. Whitney, of New York, telephoned him Saturday urging him to come and spend Sunday at his New York home. He went to New York Saturday, and Dr. Cooley expected that he would return Monday for further treatment. The dead man was a member of the Nassau and Racquet Clubs, of New York city, and an officer of the Seventh Regiment. He was manager and partner of the firm of H. N. Whitney & Sons, bankers and brokers, which handles a large part of the Vanderbilts' business.

ANDERSON STARTS TO SERVE SENTENCE.

Former Deputy Sheriff John W. Anderson, of Somerset county, who was convicted two months ago of tampering with a jury in the Skillman will case and was sentenced by Judge Theodore Booream to serve ninety days in the Somerset county jail and to pay a fine of $500, withdrew his appeal to the higher court on Tuesday and has started to serve out his sentence in the county jail at Somerville.

Anderson belongs to an old and influential family of Somerset county and every effort was made to save him from prison and the appeal was not withdrawn until it was evident that the Court of Errors and Appeals would sustain the verdict of the lower court.

Skillman, who was a former president of the New Jersey Horticultural Society, was charged with forging a will of the late William Lanehart for the purpose of obtaining $10,000 of the Lanehart estate.

Former Boroughite Heads Council.

Thomas J. Winckler, who twenty-five years ago was a resident on Park place in the borough, was elected president of the Asbury Park Common Council at the organization meeting last week. Mr. Winckler left the borough when a young man, going to Asbury Park with Thomas J. Compton, with whom he engaged in the confectionery and ice cream business. He is a son of the late A. J. Winckler, father-in-law of William G. Debele, of Somerset street, and has been serving as Asbury Park Councilman for the past six years.

Mrs. Colby's Gift to Y. M. C. A.

Mrs. Everett Colby, wife of State Senator Everett J. Colby, and daughter of the late Charles Hyde, has given $500 to the Y. M. C. A., to be added to the endowment fund of the association. This fund now amounts to $7,500, of which $7,000 was bequeathed by the late James Clark, who died three years ago. This money is being raised for a boys' building for the boys' department of the local association.

Lecture on Modern Heroism.

Rev. W. W. Newell, of Chicago, will give a lecture on "The Modern Heroism" in the Congregational church Sunday night. The address will be illustrated with steriopticon views. Mr. Newell is a brother of the former pastor of Hope chapel, G. Kennedy Newell.

Allen Wilson, son of former Mayor John F. Wilson, of "Tunlaw," sailed yesterday for Bermuda, where he will spend several weeks in recuperation.

MISS CLEAVER WAS MARRIED LAST JUNE

Miss Braddie Cleaver, daughter of Rev. J. B. Cleaver, formerly of Bound Brook, well known in this city, was quietly married last June to Frederic William Ashmore. Announcement of the wedding has just been made.

Mr. and Mrs. Ashmore are now with the bride's father at San Antonio, Texas. Rev. Mr. Cleaver took a prominent part in politics in this part of the State a few years ago.

CANDIDATE MUST PAY ELECTION EXPENSES

George A. Honnecker, of Jersey City, who in 1904 ran as the candidate of the People's Democratic party for the office of Governor of New Jersey, must pay his own campaign expenses, according to the decision of the jury in a suit brought yesterday in the Circuit Court at Elizabeth.

George W. Harrison, formerly a supporter of Honnecker, was the plaintiff in the suit, and represented a number of members of the People's party against which bills have been standing, amounting to nearly $500. Most of the bills were for campaign literature.

The jury returned its verdict yesterday afternoon, claiming that the defendant must pay both the original amount of the bills and interest on same for three years, in consideration of the fact that in running for office Mr. Honnecker assumed responsibility for all expenses incurred by his party in supporting him.

Spurred on by a desire to keep her weight within a specific corset number, Miss Edna Wallace Hopper, the star of the "Fifty Miles from Boston" company, has resorted to daily electric baths. George M. Cohan's rural musical play has been fulfilling numerous one night engagements in the large cities that cluster around the one of Brotherly Love, and for the past two weeks the petite Edna has been catching early morning express trains for Felix Isman's village, and upon arriving at the Broad street station has been driven to William Hopper's bath palace on North Broad street, from which she emerges a few hours later as spick and span as a blue ribbon price winner.

Miss Hopper says, "Don't talk to me about drugs; electric baths, that's the system, and if taken in moderation you will never need a doctor." Miss Hopper will appear in "Fifty Miles from Boston" at the New Plainfield theatre on Tuesday night.

WESTFIELDERS WIN FIRST HALF OF SERIES

The first half of the home and home bowling series between Frank Willett and V. W. Nash, Jr., of this city, and Jack Miller and Edward McMahon, of Westfield, was rolled on Campbell's East Second street alleys last night. Six games were chalked up, the Westfield pair taking the first four and the Plainfielders the last two. Outside of the first try, which was a walk-over for Miller and McMahon, the games were hard fought and the local men lost two of them by close margins.

The series was witnessed by one of the biggest crowds that has been at the alleys this season, the Westfielders coming down with a big bunch of rooters. Nash and Willet were backed solid by the local enthusiasts and were applauded until the last ball had been rolled. The remaining games, five in number, will be rolled next Monday night, either at Elizabeth or Newark.

The scores last night were as follows: Nash and Willett, 285, 311, 310, 326, 352 and 372; Miller and McMahon, 352, 321, 343, 366, 314 and 342.

Anniversary of Summit Club.

The fifteenth anniversary of the founding of the Summit Fortnightly Club was celebrated with a luncheon, at which covers were laid for 150 of the members of the club and their friends, in the Beechwood Hotel, there, yesterday afternoon. The toasts were responded to by Mrs. George H. Hodenpye, on "Charter Members;" Miss Bertha Watson, "Our ex-President;" Mrs. Theodore F. White, Jr., "The Town Improvement Association," and Mrs. M. Marshall, "Our Guests."

John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans, is planning to hold an entertainment in the near future.

ELKS' MINSTRELS PLANS

G. O Stevens to be Interlocutor and Judge Runyon to Act as Coach.

FOUR END MEN ARE PICKED.

Messrs. Muir, Cose, Messersmith and Blimm Selected—Performance Sometime in March.

A meeting of the minstrel committee of Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., was held last night at which time preliminary plans for the organization's second blackface show were discussed. Volunteers for the chorus were enrolled and the first rehearsal will be held next Tuesday night in charge of Judge William N. Runyon. A special feature is to be made of chorus work and for this reason great care will be exercised in the selection of voices.

George O. Stevens, who is the lodge's exalted ruler and who was an end man in the show two years ago, was picked for the interlocutor's chair and John H. Cose, Harry Messersmith, Tom Muir and Harry Blimm were named as four of the six end men. The other two will be selected in the course of a few days. These principals have all been well schooled in amateur minstrelsy but they will be put through a rigorous drilling in order to make their work as near perfection as possible. In addition to Judge Runyon's coaching the end men will be placed in the hands of a professional dancing instructor, George Bratton, of New York, to learn fancy stepping.

The committee has also decided that electrical effects will be a feature of the show and an experienced electrician will be delegated to work out some original ideas. One number in the olio will be given up to a big drill and dancing novelty enhanced by border, calcium and kaleidoscopic effects somewhat like the Gorman Brothers' famous "Sunrise on the Bayou."

The show will be given in the New Plainfield theatre but the date has not yet been definitely decided upon. It will probably be fixed for the latter part of March.

MANY NEW PHYSICIANS SAID TO BE ILLITERATE.

In support of the assertions he made last week, that the present medical curriculum in the average medical college does not properly prepare the student for the practise of his profession, Dr. Henry Beates, Jr., president of the Medical Council of Pennsylvania, and also head of the State Board of Medical Examiners, has gone a step further and offered statistical proof. His criticism of the average medical graduate was replied to the day after it was published by several of the leading medical school professors in Philadelphia. These all held that he had overstated the facts.

Dr. Beates, in turn, has given out a statement of the examinations for physicians' diplomas held in Philadelphia last month, for persons desiring to practise in this State. Out of eighty-eight applicants for the covoted diplomas, he said, fifty-one failed to pass examinations in all the subjects, while twenty-nine failed to qualify for the diplomas, the passing mark being only seventy-five out of a possible hundred.

Of the fifty-one, it was shown, with only a few exceptions, the unsuccessful applicants failed in the elementary subjects in which an examination was held, physiology and pathology.

MISSIONARY SPOKE ON DUTY TO IMMIGRANTS.

At a meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of Grace church held in the parish house Tuesday afternoon, Rev. Mr. Hammerskold, a Swedish missionary, representing the Protestant Episcopal church in that country, made the address. His topic was "Immigration, and the duty of the Church toward Immigrants." He dwelt especially upon the burden which rests on the United States church worker of making the foreigner feel at home in the church and working with him as with a native of the country. At the conclusion of the address, a substantial donation collection was taken up for the work.

This is the first of a series of lectures to be given at the meetings of the women's society on the first Tuesday of each month. Special speakers will address each of the meetings and at the conclusion of the services, tea will be served. All women church workers of city and borough are invited to attend these meetings.

Another Factory to Close.

The Spicer Universal Joint Company posted a notice at the works on Madison avenue yesterday that the plant would close on Friday night, to reopen on Monday, February 7.

CONTRACTOR WINS SUIT

Joseph Kingston Gets Verdict for Full Amount from County Freeholders.

COURT RULES IN PIERSON CASE.

Only Two of Batch of Twenty-seven Cases Contested at District Court Session Today.

Before a five man jury in the District Court, this morning, evidence was heard in the suit brought by Contractor Joseph Kingston, of East Second street, against the Union County Board of Freeholders, to recover $50, the figure named in a verbal contract to repair a bridge on Leland avenue near Cushing road. The case required the greater part of the court session and went to the jury shortly before noon. A verdict in favor of Kingston for the full amount and costs was rendered in about an hour.

The claim of the plaintiff was to the effect that Freeholder S. P. T. Wilbur had asked him to look over the bridge and give an estimate as to what it would cost to repair it. He examined the structure and reporting that he would fix it up for $50 was told to go ahead. After he had completed the work, County Engineer Hubbard specified certain things that should have been done and when Kingston submitted his bill payment was refused on the ground that the contract had not been fulfilled.

The county produced Freeholders Doane and Wilbur and Engineer Hubbard as witnesses to prove its contention while Mr. Kingston testified in his own behalf. Through his attorney, V. W. Nash, Jr., he maintained that he did not detail what he would do for the $50 but had simply obeyed Freeholder Wilbur's instructions to "go ahead." The county was represented by W. R. Codington and his principal defense was that the contractor had said nothing when Engineer Hubbard looked over the bridge and told him what ought to be done.

The jury was made up of David Bodine, J. V. F. Dilts, John Case, Jeremiah Cash and Martin Cronce.

The court's list this morning comprised twenty-seven cases of which only two were contested. The other one beside the Kingston-County suit was a landlord and tenant hearing, William Freuhauf against U. G. Pierson. The latter leased a barn from the plaintiff and a dispute arose through Freuhauf's contention that Pierson wanted to pay the original monthly amount after the rent had been raisede. There was nothing to prove that any new contract had been made and the court instructed the plaintiff to accept the amount offered by Pierson and drop the proceedings. Freuhauf was represented by Harry C. Runyon and Pierson by Walter L. Hetfield, Jr.

MRS. H. C. NOMER DIES AFTER BRIEF ILLNESS.

Following a few days illness, Mrs. Lillie E. Nomer, wife of Henry C. Nomer, died at her home on East Seventh street, last night. She contracted a cold the early part of last week and it quickly developed pneumonia. Her condition grew worse rapidly and despite every effort to stay the progress of the malady she continued to sink, the end coming at 10 o'clock.

Mrs. Nomer was a native of New Brunswick and was the daughter of John O. and the late Lydie E. Bedford. The family moved to this city from New Brunswick twenty years ago and resided most of the time since on East Seventh street. Mrs. Nomer was a member of the Congregational church and an earnest worker while among her friends she was regarded as a most estimable woman. She leaves one son, Harold A. Nomer, an instructor in the Polytechnic Institute, Brooklyn.

The funeral will be held at the late home tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock and burial will be in Elmwood cemetery, New Brunswick.

BISHOP DIES IN FRANCE.

Rt. Rev. George Worthington Had Long Been a Sufferer.

Dispatches have been received in New York announcing the death of the Right Rev. George Worthington, bishop of Nebraska, at Mentone, France.

Bishop Worthington had been unable for some years past to live in his own Western diocese on account of heart trouble, which was aggravated by the climate there.

He resided in New York during the winter months and in Pittsfield, Mass., during the summer and autumn.

He had been recently assigned to work of a supervisory character in the Episcopal churches on the continent.

BOROUGH SCHOOLS' PART

North Plainfield Institutions will Get $7,274 of Somerset's $36,341 R. R. Tax Money.

MEANS LOWER BOROUGH TAXES

Money This Year To Be Used for Special School Tax, Part of Which Will Be Carried Over, Lessening Rate.

As a result of the Perkins act providing for the assessment of all main stem railroad property at the average municipal tax rate of the State, the North Plainfield public schools will receive $7,274.65 to be applied for increased teachers salaries, the purchase of fuel, tuition and transportation. The apportionment of this tax will date from July 1, 1907, according to the recent ruling of the courts, and the money comes as a surprise to the borough Board of Education, because of the fact that its payment was being contested in the courts at the time the budget was being made up.

Because of the fact that no advance is ever made in teachers' salaries in the middle of the school term, and that apportionments have been made by the local board has made apportionment for the year on fuel, transportation, etc., it is probable that the money thus unexpectedly received from the State as a result of the court's decision will be applied to the purposes for which the special school tax was raised. This will, of course, cause a sum of money equal to the borough's share under the railroad law, to be left over out of the special school tax money, and can be interpreted to mean that such a balance carried over as a fund to next year will mean a reduction of the special school tax rate next year and therefore a reduction of the borough tax rate in general.

The State law is very explicit regarding the disposal of the railroad tax money, and provides that if the apportionment is not exhausted by the schools of any district during the year, it shall be reapportioned by a new distribution all over the county at the end of the year. This provision was made in the law because of the fact that several of the district Boards of Education saved up the apportionment from year to year until enough was amassed by this means to avoid a district, or special school tax. There is no legal provision made to forbid the carrying over of special school tax moneys, and it was said today that the local Board of Education would carry over a part of the special school tax, spending the railroad tax apportionment for the purposes for which the school tax was raised.

The special school tax rate in the borough for this year is $1.02, and $33,120 was raised by this rate. With the $7,274.65 balance from the railroad tax applied money left over, this will mean that the special school tax rate for the coming year can be that much lowered and the total tax rate in North Plainfield will be lower on this account.

The salaries of the Somerset county teachers are in general lower than those paid by the schools in Union county. In North Plainfield, however, the salaries in the grades are about equal to those paid in Plainfield, except that in the city schools the high school teachers receive more pay than those in similar positions in the borough. Next year it is probable that the salaries of the borough teachers will be raised with the money coming to the local Board of Education from the Perkins railroad tax. Such action will be necessary if the borough is to retain its teachers, for all other districts will undoubtedly raise salaries and the North Plainfield schools could only hope to retain its teachers by a raise to meet that of the other schools.

The total apportionment for Somerset county schools, according to the decision on the Perkins railroad law in the Court of Errors and Appeals Tuesday will be $36,341.44. Of this money North Plainfield borough receives $7,274, the largest share of any of the county districts. North Plainfield township $610.38, Warren township $978.15 and Bound Brook $3,232.17.

Hurt In Rutgers Fight.

In a scrimmage yesterday afternoon on the Rutgers College campus at New Brunswick between the freshmen and sophomores Percy Bascom, had his leg broken. He was taken to Wells Hospital. Thomas Hanson, the president of the sophomore class, was captured and carried to Bound Brook to keep him from attending the sophomore dinner in New York last night. The freshmen tried to capture the sophomores.

A Scene from Al G. Field's Minstrels at New Plainfield Theatre, Saturday, Matinee and Night.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

This year's production of the Al. G. Field Greater Minstrels, which come to the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night, has been acclaimed everywhere as the best minstrel show ever seen, and crowded houses are the rule everywhere. Mr. Field has prepared a minstrel entertainment that is full of surprises from first to last, the notable features being the magnificent "minstrel first part," with its exquisite setting of illuminated flowers and plants, the spectacle "The Little Boy in Green," with its exciting race track scene, the "Night Before Christmas," a thrilling carnival of Yuletide fun and frolic, "The Slabtown Opera Company," a humorous burlesque, the Musical Marines, the Illusion of Hades, and a number of other specialties and features presented by 65 pre-eminently popular comedians, dancers, singers and other players.

Of all the many literary and dramatic successes won by Hall Caines' both in America and England, the most emphatic is "The Bondman," in which W. A. Brady this season presents Wilton Lackaye and which will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night. The present offering is the first opportunity given the people to witness this, the most vivid and enthralling play by the famous author, which while perserving the original characters and motive of Mr. Caine's novel of the same name, is not so much a dramatization as an independent play on the same subject. "The Bondman" was first produced at the Drury Lane Theatre, London, on September 26, 1906, and scored an immediate and unqualified success. So great was this success that the play held the boards of the historic playhouse for the entire season. "The Bondman" in England was one of the greatest successes in the past decade.

Cohan and Harris will present Miss Edna Wallace Hopper in Mr. Cohan's new play, "Fifty Miles from Boston," at the New Plainfield theatre next Tuesday night. This latest play from the prolific pen of Mr. Cohan is said to be his best and critics have especially lauded the role which he has written for Miss Hopper. It is that of a demure little postmistress, who has an extremely troublesome brother and an equally troublesome sweetheart. Supporting Miss Hopper are such well known players as Laurence Wheat, James C. Marlowe, Hazel Lowry, Lores Grimm, Emma Janiver, George Parsons, Louise Rial and James Bradbury. Some of the most popular song hits which Mr. Cohan has written for the play are "Harrigan," "Waltz With Me," "Jack and Jill," "Ain't It Awful," "Boys Who Fight the Flames" and "My Small Town Gal." There is said to be a beauty chorus which is fully up to the Cohan-Harris standard as regards excellence of singing.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

"Missions, Home and Foreign," will be the subject of the week of prayer service at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church tonight.

A cottage prayer meeting will be held tonight at the home of C. K. Compton, 31 Duer street, under the auspices of the Park Avenue Baptist church.

Charles W. McCutchen will lead the week of prayer service at the First Baptist church tonight. Tomorrow night, George A. Chapman will lead.

The pastor's reception will be held in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church, Tuesday night, January 21, under the auspices of the Pastor's Aid Society.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church will hold its meeting as usual Friday night. The subject will be "The True Centre of Life."

"Literature and Life," will be the subject of an interesting lecture to be given by Prof. Louis Bevier, Jr., of New Brunswick, before the Men's Club of the First Baptist church Monday night.

The Young Women's Missionary Society of the First Baptist church has decided to abandon the customary plan of holding cake sales to raise money for missionary purposes, and instead the members will be asked to contribute the price of a cake.

"The Triumphs of Faith" was the subject of the week of prayer service at the Congregational church last night. Tonight the subject will be "Why Are We Church Members?" The special services will close tomorrow night when the subject will be "The Glorious Gospel of the Blessed God."

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Invitations are out for the wedding of Miss Daisy Young, of "Ingleside," Madison, New Jersey, to Henry Hildreth, of New York city, for the 18th inst. Miss Young has many friends here and in Plainfield, several of whom are among the number of the invited guests. There is quite a romance attached to this wedding as the couple first met during the great earthquake in San Francisco, where Mr. Hildreth rescued Miss Young and her mother and with great difficulty and peril brought them safely to the park, four miles away from the city, where so many found a temporary refuge. The sequel to the adventure is to be found in the wedding invitations.

The honor roll of the public school is as follows: Margaret Nelson, Tessie Hannon, Tessie Bohl, Laura Roberts, May Duffy, Helen Richards, Margaret Hamilton, Mary Nelson, Marjorie Roberts, George Brower, Arthur Geary, Freddie Teeple, Martin McDonough, Mary McDonough, Gladys Thorne, Rose Horan, Anna McDonough, Caroline Moyles, Carl Hanson, Hans Hanson, Antonio Phillips, Stanley Phillips, Isaac Randolph.

The union service was held Tuesday evening in the First Methodist church. Last evening each church held its own prayer meeting.

The engagement of Miss Sadie Madeline Gulick, of New Germantown, and David T. Lane, of Somerville, has been announced.

Justice and Mrs. James J. Bergen attended yesterday the funeral of Mr. Bergen's aunt, Mrs. Sebring P. Dunham, in Trenton.

The women of the First Reformed church will hold their annual "Dutch supper" in the chapel January 16.

Miss Mary Griggs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Griggs, has returned to Vassar College.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

A good sized delegation from here went to the New Plainfield theatre last night, when Bob Fitzsimmons and his wife appeared on the boards in a comedy vaudeville skit. The act, which was substantially the same as the one in which the two appeared in Newark last week, was well received, and the former champion of the squared circle made good behind the footlights, as testified by the glad hand-rattle from the house.

Many local grangers are planning to attend the meeting of Middlesex County Pomona Grange to be held at New Brunswick Saturday. At this time Pomona officers for the coming year will be installed by Deputy State Master Arthur Perrine, and the various Grangers of the county will be represented by delegates.

"The Church Made Truly Glorious" was the topic of the week of prayer services held at the local churches last night. Tonight there will be services in the Presbyterian and Methodist churches, and the topic will be "Missions, Home and Foreign." Music will be a feature of the service at the Methodist church.

There is already quite an advance sale of tickets for the minstrel show to be given at Friendship Hall next Tuesday evening by the Franklin Council burnt cork entertainers of Plainfield. The affair is under the auspices of Friendship Council.

Louis de Brigard, of the township, has started in business for himself in New York city. He is now a dealer in automobile supplies on Broadway, near Forty-fourth street.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The borough political scrap seems to have died down, all seeming to be quiet again in the hustling burg.

Special meetings are being held every night this week in the parlors of the Baptist church.

Miss Mamie Clark is spending a week with relatives in Newark.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

"Marty" O'Loughlin, the home-bred pro, left yesterday for Pinehurst, N. C., where during the winter he will be the pro at the Pinehurst Golf Club, and incidentally play a number of notable matches. He is matched to play Alec. Ross, the open champion, and the betting on the result is even money, showing that "Marty" must be considered pretty good. He has been playing an exceptionally strong game this winter and should give a good account of himself in the south.

A novelty in a golfing way is to be attempted by the advertising golfers when they gather for their annual winter tournament at Pinehurst January 16, 17 and 18. The innovation will be a thirty-six hole qualifying round over two courses. This is easily possible at the North Carolina resort, which is able to boast of two eighteen hole and one nine hole course. Certainly there can be nothing monotonous in a day's qualification play where every hole is different. It is expected that quite a delegation of players from the metropolitan district will take part. Last winter a party left New York in a special car.

President A. R. Gates of the Western Golf Association holds positive views on revising the rules. In a signed article for the Chicago Record-Herald he writes: "During the season much earnest and well directed discussion has taken place with reference to a revision of the rules. The ancient code, formulated and frequently revised by a much revered committee of theoretical golfers, sitting annually at St. Andrews, is in many respects wholly unsuited to the conditions prevailing in America, and the time is not coming, but has now arrived, when the rules must be so amended as to leave no opportunity for honest differences of opinion as to the proper thing to do under all cimcumstances of play."

Regarding the unfairness of an early date for the amateur championship the Western Golfer has this editorial note in the January number: "It is to be hoped that in selecting the date for the next national amateur championship the condition existing to other parts of the country outside of the metropolitan district will be considered. The date selected for the championship is usually too early. Owing to the lateness of the season the strong players in Pittsburg, Chicago and other Western golfing centres do not get any tournament practice until after the middle of June, and they therefore are not in good trim to battle for the title early in July. Opportunity should be given for the various State and other association championships to be held before the national event, which could then be a contest of local champions for the national supremacy—a championship of champions. The East will always enjoy an undue advantage, owing to opportunity for early play, unless the national championship is held in Agust or the fall months."

BASEBALL.

J. Palmer O'Neill, former owner of the Pittsburg Baseball Club, died at his home in Pittsburg Tuesday, aged sixty-four years. O'Neill owned the Pittsburg team during the year of the Brotherhood war in 1890. The Brotherhood was strong in Pittsburg, and would undoubtedly have crowded the National League team out had not O'Neill stuck to it against overwhelming odds. He lost $60,000 on the season, had sixty players under contract, won twenty-three games in the entire season, and lost one hundred and fourteen, a "record" which has never been equalled. Pittsburg was, of course, last in the race, but because of the game fight he had made against frightful odds Mr. O'Neil was presented with a hand-painted silk flag as a sort of consolation prize by the other club owners.

This is the time of year when ball players resort to all sorts of bluffs to secure an increase in salary. Some of them declare that they have outside business interests which they cannot leave, while others declare that they have suddenly come into great wealth by the death of rich relatives. A few announce that they have purchased an interest in minor league clubs and will become magnates, while it is often the case that a player states that he is going to enter a profession as a result of hard study. But when the spring rolls around and the jingle of the gold in the magnates' pockets is heard throughout the land these same players lose no time in climbing into the band wagon, for all of them are fond of easy money. A player who regards baseball as hard work cannot be taken seriously. Some of them would rather play the game than eat.

In releasing Pitcher Joe Corbett unconditionally President Ebbets of the Brooklyn club has put an end to a long controversy. Because it was believed that some club would pay a good stiff price for Corbett's release he was kept on the reserve list for years and consequently was deprived of an opportunity to earn a living. But that is one of the so-called hardships of organized ball. Corbett, who is a brother of the former heavyweight champion pugilist, was considered one of the best pitchers in America when he helped the old Baltimores to win the National League pennant, but he was so sensitive that his effectiveness at times was nullified. In a game over in Brooklyn one day Corbett, who was in the box and was being hit hard, could not stand the criticism levelled at him by his captain, Jack Doyle, and suddenly throwing the ball to the ground he left the diamond. "You are too sensitive," said Manager Hanlon on the bench. "Maybe so," replied the young pitcher, "but I cannot stand abuse and do not like to be called hard names." After that the coachers of opposing teams made Corbett miserable whenever he went to the slab.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS.

Falling over an obstruction in the sidewalk, Councilman Joseph S. McGraw, of Bridgeton, struck his knee on the railroad tracks and tore away the ligaments.

The annual meeting of the Gloucester County Historical Society will be held at the court house, Woodbury, Tuesday next, when valuable historical papers will be read.

Plunging from the roof of a lumber shed in the mill yard at the Pavonia car shop in Camden yesterday, Anthony Gabriel, of 57 North Twenty-second street, was injured.

Inquiries by Chief of Police Woodruff, of Atlantic City, have shown that a message recently picked up in a bottle on the beach and telling of an alleged shipwreck was a hoax.

Edward Keyes, of Vineland, was recently kicked by a playful colt. He worked for a day or two, but is now seriously ill from heart trouble, caused by injury to the solar plexus muscles.

Joseph Caruso, a seven-month-old baby of James Caruso, of Hammanton, was poisoned by eating pills left lying on a window sill. They were given to the baby by an older child, who thought they were candy.

Joanna Clotosky, twenty-five years old, of Bridgeton, has been committed to the county prison charged with bigamy. Her husband charges that on December 30 last she was married to Garvon Rodesky, and refused to live longer with the original and only legal partner.

Screaming with pain, the four-year-old daughter of Thomas Salparo, a farmer, near Vineland, rushed out the front door a living torch yesterday. The child's clothing had become ignited from a stove while the mother was in the back yard for a few minutes. Death followed in a few hours.

Horses attached to a hose carriage of Engine Company No. 3 in Camden were injured by crashing into a flat car while responding to a false alarm of fire at the plant of the New York Shipbuilding Company Monday night. Charles Sturgis, the driver, narrowly escaped serious injury, and the carriage was badly damaged.

SEEK TRENTON MEN WHO SAW PRIZE FIGHT.

Trenton, Jan. 9.—Five persons have been arrested and held for the Grand Jury and warrants are out for fifty others as a result of a private prize fight held in a barn near this city a few nights ago. Prosecutor W. J. Crossley declares he will seek the indictment of every person attending the fight. Under the laws of the State a spectator is held equally guilty with the principals in a prize fight.

The action of the authorities is causing much uneasiness in many circles in Trenton, several well known men having been at the fight, according to information now in the hands of the police.

The fight was between "Dick" Carroll and John Connelley, local pugilists, and it was well attended.

Those already taken in addition to Carroll and Connelley are James Bound, referee; James Radice, timekeeper, and Robert Schenck, manager and handler of Connelley. All have been held in bail for their appearance for trial.

There have been several of these private fights in this vicinity during the last few months, an effort having evidently been made to revive the pastime here. Two more fights have been scheduled to take place later this month and the principals are now being closely watched by the authorities.

A few years ago prize fighting was tolerated by the authorities, and then the Rev. Alfred W. Wishart, a Baptist clergyman, afterward called to the West, worked up a crusade against the sport. He did his work so well that Chief Justice W. S. Gummere, then on the local circuit, made a strong charge to the Grand Jury and several of the persons involved were fined.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dixon, of West Fifth street, have returned from a visit with relatives at South Amboy.

REGULATING BILL BOARDS.

The crusade against the objectionable play-bill poster appears to be growing general. Newark, whose model sheriff has done a lion's share in stamping out vice in that city, being the latest to take a decided stand in the matter. In these days there is little excuse for such form of advertising for the press affords the most advantageous medium of reaching the general public. But if the theatre is to use the bill-board, there should be strict regulation. In other words a censorship should be maintained by the local governments if not by the State authorities.

So far as Plainfield is concerned probably there might be little need for such supervision just at the present time. On principle, however, that should not alter the case. Action should be taken now to prevent any immoral display of this type in the future when unscrupulous ones might decorate the billboards with offensive pictures. In Newark, a committee of aldermen have charge of such supervision, and it would be well for the local Common Council to adopt the same plan. A committee on advertisements, backed by a strict ordinance, would sooner or later have real work to do.

An ordinance regulating the size and type of such boards as well as restricting their location would be a sensible measure. Of course, it should give full power for strict regulation on the part of a committee, either of the city fathers or some other prominent citizens. Every law-abiding resident would approve of such a measure for it would be for the good of public morals.

Dwelling on this subject, the Newark Evening News said the other night:

"There ought to be no great difficulty in determining what posters are indecent and immoral and what are not. A good rule was laid down some time ago by Sheriff Sommer when he was conducting his crusade against indecent postcards. That rule is to inquire what is the purpose of the poster. It is to incite a love of art, to illustrate customs and costumes once common but no longer in vogue, or is it to invite attention to so-called entertainments that have no other purpose than to incite the passions and to make money by displaying that which is forbidden by all rules of decency, morality and etiquette? There is no moral wrong in a picture or a poster having an obvious artistic or moral purpose, but the same picture or poster perverted to immoral uses is to be suppressed as vicious."

AS TO A CITY HALL.

Sound judgment dictates that it would be better for the city to continue to lease municipal quarters until such time as it is in a position to erect an ornate and substantial structure fully in keeping with the high standard of the city. To buy a "second hand" building, which might be commodious enough for a few years to come after a great amount of general patching up is done, would be most unwise from a business standpoint.

No time should be lost, however, in acquiring a suitable site for the city hall. A central location, of course, is a most important consideration. Consequently, a delay will be costly for real estate in the business section particularly is paridly increasing in value. The city may be able to wait three or four years for a municipal building but it cannot afford to postpone the purchase of a site.

KEEPING FAITH WITH TAXPAYERS.

It is not the purpose of the Board of School Estimate to have the city's share of the railroad tax fund diverted from the purpose for which it is intended as set forth in the Perkins law, notwithstanding that the revenue thus to be derived is not needed at present. The plan is to place the sum, more than $28,000, at interest until next year when it will be used to reduce the school item in the tax budget. This is in accordance with an understanding with the taxpayers a short time ago when an increase in teachers' salaries and the like raised the tax rate fully ten points. To off-set this increased rate, the fund will be applied next year for the purpose of reducing the necessary school appropriation very considerably.

FIRST MESSAGE OF YEAR TO THE SUMMIT COUNCIL.

The first message of Mayor J. Boyd Risk has been received by the Summit Common Council. The epistle is an unusual one in point of brevity, the Mayor using probably not more than 200 words in conveying to the Council suggestions relative to the two subjects to which reference is made in the document. These matters had to do with the police and the revision of the city ordinance.

The Mayor called attention to the large number of burglaries committed within the city recently, and recommended that the Council, in accordance with the authority versed in that body, consider the advisability of offering a reward as high as $500 for the arrest and conviction of any person guilty of burglary within the city.y Many of the present Summit ordinances the Mayor believed to be ineffective, and he recommended the adoption of additional ordinances as soon as possible. Concerning the latter recommendation, Councilman Debevoise, for the Law and Ordinance Committee, reported that his committee had been at work on the matter, and the Mayor's suggestion would be carried out in the near future. The Fire and Police Committee will take up the other matter, and it is likely Mayor Risk's recommendation will be complied with.

The resignation of Dr. William H. Lawrence, Sr., as a member of the Board of Health, had been received by the Mayor, and he submitted the appointment of Dr. William H. Lawrence, Jr., to the office. This was unanimously confirmed by the Council.

SAVES ONE BOY, BUT ANOTHER IS DROWNED.

Lambertville, Jan. 9.—James Meskill, eight years old, was drowned in the Island Creek here yesterday morning as the result of venturing to play on some thin ice, and John Curtin, a little chum of about the same age, narrowly escaped the same fate.

That there was not a double drowning was due to the action of George Harrison, of Lambertville, who happened to be passing at the same time the boys fell into the water. Harrison leaped into the stream and grabbed for the boy first within reach. He got him safely ashore and then went back for the other, but was too late to effect a second rescue. Curtin was the boy saved, while young Meskill sank to his death beneath the ice, which was not strong enough to bear his weight from above, but was of sufficient tserength to keep him under the water after the current of the creek had carried him from the spot where he first went down.

Harrison continued his efforts to rescue the Meskill boy until he had recovered the body, but as twenty minutes had then elapsed it was too late for resuscitation. The drowned boy was a son of James Meskill, of this place.

DICKINSON QUITS POLITICS.

Hudson County Man Resigns Republican Leadership He Held 12 Years.

Col. Samuel D. Dickinson's resignation as a member of the Republican Association of Hudson county (N. J.) that has borne his name for over twelve years, was read and accepted last night at a meeting of the association. Over 200 members were present, and there was not a person who voted not to accept his resignation. In the letter he declared he had been living in a "fool's paradise" for some time, and instead of the majority of the members being friendly they have been his enemies.

Before the resignation was accepted several members took occasion to criticise Col. Dickinson's leadership of the party in Hudson county. One member referred to him as a "good Democratic leader," and intimated that at times he worked harder for Democratic success than Republicanism. The resignation also requests that the association change the name as soon as possible.

MILLIONS HOARDED.

New York, Jan. 9.—According to the monthly circular of the National City Bank, $276,000,000 in cash disappeared between the call for the condition of the national banks responded to last August and the one last month.

This includes a net reduction of $41,000,000 in the cash holdings of all the national banks in the country and a loss of $13,000,000 cash reported by the New York city trust companies, together with the known additions to the circulating medium during this period, including $100,000,000 of gold imported from abroad and $72,000,000 cash released by the United States Treasury.

FEIGNING, LOSES LIFE.

In an attempt to test the affection of his brother, with whom he had quarreled, 13-year-old Michael Belko, of Perth Amboy, walked out on the thin ice of a clay pit on the outskirts of New Brunswick and shouted that the ice was breaking.

While he was attempting to give the impression that the ice was breaking it really gave way, and he sank. The brother and playmates ran to his aid, but they could not save him, although all plunged in after him.

FEW DENTISTS EVADE LAW OF NEW JERSEY

The State Board of Registration and examination of dentistry says in its annual report to the governor that with the closing of the year the profession in the State can be congratulated and that the general public has been more thoroughly protected from charlatans and irresponsible dentists than ever before. The law has been well enforced and there have been few evasions of the statutes. Since the passage of the law of 1890 providing for the registration of dentists 1,080 licenses have been issued in this State.

The board says that the practicing dentists should be encouraged on moral and ethical grounds to do his best work for his patients. Many who come to him for relief, because of their positions in life and lack of educational advantages, are not able to differentiate between honest and indifferent service, trusting implicity in the opinion and advice of the operator. Because of this condition the board says the protection of the law is of the utmost importance.

In twenty counties of the State the State Dental Society has appointed trustworthy members of the profession to take cognizance of any infraction of the dental law and report it at once to the secretary of the board. There are at present no cases of illegal practice before the courts, although several which may be heard from later are under investigation. The report says that New Jersey has a more complete registration than any of the larger states. This has been a tedious task involving four years labor, but the board feels satisfied that it has produced a record which will prove valuable in future years.

The treasurer's report shows receipts for the year aggregating $2,362.47, and disbursements of $2,011.54, leaving a balance of $350.93.

READY FOR INAUGURATION

Legislators Will Distribute Tickets of Admission to the Gubernatorial Ceremony.

TWO RECEPTIONS PLANNED.

J. Franklin Fort Will Meet Justices and Legislators—State House to Be Decorated.

All is ready for the ceremony on Tuesday, January 21, which will mark the induction of Governor-elect John Franklin Fort into office. It has been decided that tickets of admission to Taylor Opera House in Trenton should be distributed by the Senators and Assemblymen. Each will be allotted 30 general admission tickets and 10 reserved seat tickets.

The reserved seats will be those on the first and second floors and they will be held until 11:45 for those holding tickets for them. After that hour persons holding ordinary admission tickets will be permitted to take seats not occupied on the first and second floors.

Two of the lower boxes will be occupied by Mrs. Fort and her party, which will include her daughter and two sons.

The Governor-elect's ager father and other relatives from Burlington county also will occupy boxes.

General Bird W. Spencer, inspector general of rifle practice, and his staff will form the reception committee. It will be the eleventh time General Spencer has served in such a capacity at the inauguration of a Governor. His staff consists of Col. Charles A. Reid, of Trenton; Lieutenant Colonel Richard B. Reading, of Lambertville; Lieutenant Colonel Alfred T. Holley, of Hackensack, and Lieutenant Colonel William Libbey, of Princeton.

It is likely that the Governor-elect and his family will reach Trenton the night preceding the inauguration and be entertained at a private residence, but where has not yet been given out.

Shortly before the hour of the inauguration the members of the joint committee will call for the Governor-elect with carriages and escort him to the opera house. Governor Stokes and Secretary of State Dickinson probably will be included in the party.

On the stage of the theatre the Governor-elect will meet the justice of the courts and both branches of the Legislature.

After the inauguration Governor Fort will be driven to the Trenton House where luncheon will be served to the inaugural party.

Two public receptions will be held at the State House and no tickets of admission will be required in order to attend them.

The afternoon reception will begin at 3 o'clock and close at 5 o'clock. The evening reception will be held from 7 to 9 o'clock.

Those who will assist Governor Fort in receiving will include the staff of Governor Stokes, the chiefs of the various military departments and their staffs, and the members of the inaugural committee. The military officers will be in full dress uniforms.

Winkler's Second Regiment band will play at both receptions. It will be stationed in one of the offices adjoining the reception room.

The State House will be beautifully decorated. Flags will be festooned over the front of the building, and the corridors and executive department will be gay with drapery, flowers and plants.

It is likely that Governor Fort will remain in Trenton over night and that he will begin work as Governor the next day.

PERSONAL.

Walter C. Dobbins, of West End avenue, is confined to his home with the grip.

Miss Emily C. March, of North avenue, has been entertaining friends from Scranton, Pa.

GROVER CLEVELAND ON EX-PRESIDENTS

The Youth's Companion has printed an article by ex-President Cleveland on "Our duties to our ex-Presidents," which it says is "a document likely to become historical; for, while the subject has had much attention and discussion, the few persons most virtally concerned in the matter have never heretofore given expression to any special views upon it." The ex-President says in part:

"The truth is that our people, so far from treating their ex-Presidents simply as relics of past honors, seem disposed not only to bestow upon them honor and respect, but to continue them in service so far as to interfere seriously with their untrammeled return to private citizenship and their unrestrained resumption of the occupations of everyday life. There is a sort of vague, but none the less imperative, feeling abroad in the land that one who has occupied the great office of President holds in trust for his fellow-citizens a certain dignity, which in his conduct and manner of life he is bound to protect against loss or deterioration. Obedience to this obligation, which can hardly be avoided, limits the ex-President in his choice of an occupation and means of livelihood, and prescribes for him only such work as in popular judgment is not undignified; and it also enforces a scale of living on his part, frequently less in keeping with his financial ability than with popular conceptions of ex-Presidential propriety.

"Our National pride should be rudely touched when we read concerning Thomas Jefferson, after his retirement from the Presidency: 'By degrees Jefferson became a poor man, and indeed worse than poor, since he was involved in pecuniary embarrassments. Before matters had reached this stage he had sold his library to Congress for $23,950.' Although he expressed himself as desiring nothing from the public treasury he accepted pecuniary aid furnished by private subscription, with the pathetic statement: 'I have spent three times as much money and given my whole life to my countrymen, and now they nobly come forward in the only way they can and save an old servant from being turned like a dog out of doors.' John Quincy Adams, a short time before he retired from the Presidency, and in contemplation of that event, wrote as follows: 'The income of my whole private estate is less than $6,000 a year, and I am paying at least $2,000 of that for interest on my debt. Finally, upon going out of office in one year from this time, destitute of all means of acquiring property, it will only be by the sacrifice of that which I now possess that I shall be able to support my family.'

"Whatever omission there may be of fair and considerate conduct on the part of our people in their relations with their ex-Presidents ought to be made good by a definite and generous provision for all cases alike, based upon motives of justice and fairness, and adequate to the situation. The condition is by no means met by the meager and spasmodic relief occasionally furnished under the guise of a military pension or some other pretext, nor would it be best met by making compensation, already accrued or accruing, dependent upon the discharge of Senatorial or other official duty. If, in concluding this discussion, a personal word is necessary or permissible, in view of the fact that I am the only man now living who could at this time profit by the ideas I have advocated, I hope my sincerity will not be questioned when I say that I have dealt with the subject without the least thought of personal interest or desire for personal advantage.

"I am not in need of aid from the public treasury. I hope and believe that I have provided for myself and those dependent upon me a comfortable maintenance, within the limits of accustomed prudence and economy, and that those to whom I owe the highest earthly duty will not want when I am gone. These conditions have permitted me to treat with the utmost freedom a topic which involves no personal considerations, and only has to do in my mind with conditions that may arise in the future, but are not attached to the ex-President of today; and I am sure that I am actuated only by an ever-present desire that the fairness and sense of justice characteristic of Americanism shall neither fail nor be obscured."

Congressman Sulzer Weds.

William Sulzer, representative in Congress from the Tenth New York district, married Miss Clara Rodelheim, of Philadelphia, at Atlantic City, Tuesday. The bride was Mr. Sulzer's nurse, when he was dangerously ill in New York city two years ago. The groom is a Jerseyman, having been born at Elizabeth. He is well known in this city, which he has visited many times, and he has made addresses here. He is a personal friend of James E. Martine, and has been his guest at Cedar Brook Farm.

Fire in Christmas Greens.

A slight fire was occasioned at the home of G. T. Van Boskerck on West Seventh street at 5 o'clock last night through a match head flying among Christmas greens. A still alarm was sent to fire headquarters but before the apparatus arrived, members of the family had extinguished the flames. The damage was trifling.

AFTER THE SEVENTH BABY.

Poor Painter Shoots Himself in His Jersey Home.

Despondent because of his inability to provide for his large family, Joseph H. Shepard, of 216 Powell street, Millville, killed himself yesterday by firing a bullet into his brain.

Sheppard had often complained that he had more children than he was able properly to support, and had several times threatened to commit suicide to end his troubles. This week his wife added a seventh child to the family, and her husband became distracted. He paced the floor and could not be quieted.

Funeral of Mrs. McClimont.

The funeral of Mrs. Catherine McClimont, who resided at Duer street and Codington avenue, was held in St. Joseph's church this morning. Mass was said by Rev. Father Miller and burial was made in St. Mary's cemetery.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 12, 1908.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—The true center of life.—John xv. 1-10.

Every human life revolves around some center, some one supreme idea or ambition, whether the person is conscious of it or not. Our lives are very much like the solar system, which has the sun, around which the planets and satellites revolve. This is not their only movement. All sweep through space. The satellites revolve about the planets, and each planet rotates upon its axis. But the center of their existence is the sun. By it they are held in place and around it they move in regular orbit. So every human life has its central sun. There are other interests in life, but around this center the life revolves, and its character is determined by the character of the center of its life. Moreover, there are centers and centers, and therefore it behooves us to find, if possible, what should be the true center of our lives.

That the true center of life is not to be found in any merely earthly enterprise or ambition has been demonstrated time and time again. Life is broader than time. It stretches beyond time to eternity, and the temporal can never fully satisfy that which is eternal. Life is more than physical. It is also spiritual, and the spiritual can never find supreme satisfaction in that which is physical. Cardinal Wolsey centered his life about his king and died broken hearted at the king's ingratitude. Solomon centered his life around earthly things and when an old man declared that they were vanity. The world alone, with all its greatness, attractiveness and possibilities, affords no true center for our lives, and from the many who have tried to find it so and have made dismal failures of their lives the young should take warning and guard against following in their footsteps.

The only true center of life is Jesus Christ. His own parable of "the vine and the branches" is conclusive proof of this fact. He is the vine, and His disciples are the branches. The life of the branch centers in the vine. Cut it from the branch, and it dies. Make it inaccessible to life of the vine, and its own life and usefulness cease. It is cut down and destroyed instead of being tenderly cared for, for it is barren instead of fruitful. A barren branch on a living vine is a sad sight, but infinitely more sad is the sight of a barren life, made so by failure to abide in Christ and to find in Him the center of its life, its aspiration and hopes, its entire being. Nor is a life centered in Christ cut off from the affairs of the world. In Christ alone can we comprehend life in its relation to the world and rightly fulfill the purposes of our lives not only toward God, not only so far as our personal lives are concerned, but also in relation to the world about us. The man whose life is centered in Christ will find the most joy in the world which He had made and will accomplish for man in the elevation and uplift of mankind. Is your life self centered, world centered or Christ centered?

BIBLE READINGS.

Deut. viii, 3; Ps. xvi, 8-11; xxvii, 1; xxxvi, 9; xci, 14-16; Eccl. i, 17, 18; ii, 1-17; xii, 13, 14; Gal. ii, 20; Col. iii, 1-11; I John v, 11.

All Foreign.

L'Activite contains an interesting item from the annual report of a society at Marseilles, France, numbering only forty members. During the year the secretary has written and dispatched 857 letters and circulars, while the members have distributed a total of no less than 6,902 Bibles, Testaments, tracts, periodicals, etc., besides engaging in various other works.

Some Spanish Endeavorers bought 2,000 tracts and went two by two through the streets distributing them and speaking about them when they found opportunity.

It is interesting to know that a permit had to be obtained from the Russian government before the Baltic Christian Endeavor convention could be held. It was impossible for the government to recognize anything so dreadful as a Christian Endeavor convention, and so the gathering was licensed as a "concert" at which the delegates were all supposed to be singers!

Three traveling Christian Endeavor secretaries are supported by local Christian Endeavor unions in India.

Mexico's last annual convention of Christian Endeavor societies brought together 800 persons in Guadalajara and was the best ever held in that country. One man traveled 2,203 miles in order to be present. Others spent several days on horseback to reach the meetings. Mexico now has 133 societies and last year they made a gain in membership of 25 per cent.—Austrian Roll Call.

Its Power.

Dr. Clark says: "Every manufacturing plant when it decides to do more business adds to its horsepower. The sole power of the Christian Endeavor society is the active membership. Every real active member won is a new force added to the dynamics of the kingdom of heaven. Do not overwork the story of Gideon and his 300. It does not teach that God prefers to work with the few rather than the many. Ten thousand Gideonites are better than 300. Only see that they are Gideonites. Let us get away forever from the heresy that a Christian Endeavor society is a little club of like minded young people who meet together once a week for a pleasant little conclave of a religious character. A good Endeavor society may be very small, but it is always as large as its outlook allows."—Irish Endeavorer.

Jan. 12: "God's revelations and how to get them."—Luke iii, 21; Acts x, 1-16; Dan. ix, 3, 20-23.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

Not many good things come to us in this life by chance. Occasionally we do find a nickel in the dust of the street, and some have even been known to discover a dollar by the roadside, but not often enough for them to depend on that source of income for livelihood without work. Those who succeed best in life are not always waiting for something to happen. They get out into the world and make things happen. So the one who wants to know the mind and will of God can find it out if he will use the proper means. It never comes by chance. "There are no accidents in the moral universe of God."

There are two things needful in this work of understanding the divine mind and will. There must be first capacity for such revelation and progressive development of this ability to receive, and then there must be its active use. The materials of the revelation are all around, pressing us on every side. It is analagous to sight and sound, to smell and taste and touch. There is a great universe of things around us waiting to reveal its treasures to us by sight and sound, by smell and taste and touch. We must have eyes, ears and other organs of sense, and we need to carefully educate them to do their work well or there will be much we shall never see though it lies directly under the eyes. No eyes ever saw until they were open.

We are capable of knowing God. We may think His thought and share His feeling and choose His will. We are, as one has well expressed it, "in every way capable of God." He can reveal Himself to us, but only on condition that we are active in the spirit life. There is a passive side to our religious nature, but the greater part of all its life must be in activity.

A careful study of the Bible will show that very few instances are recorded of revelation of God coming to one who was not in a state of expectation and readiness. There are laws which govern this realm as truly as laws of matter and civil society.

Would you know God? Seek, ask, knock. Put yourself in proper position and attitude of soul. First think much of these matters until they occupy the mind and fill the desires full and the will is in readiness to act when the course is clear. You will not wait long before there will be a consciousness of the clearing of vision, the intensifying of power to hear, a sensitiveness of touch and a taste for divine things. Other matters will less and less fill the field of vision and impress the soul, and there will come the recognition of another world not before realized in this manner. Then, with eyes open, the divine truth will appear as clear as cloudless sunrising and refreshing as morning dews. The perfume of the divine love will fill all the air as the breath of lilies scents the breezes of the Bermudan isles in early spring. Then like music, like silver toned bells, like the voice of a loved one, will come the divine word in all assurance, and you will know God for yourself and not by the testimony of another merely.

Hast ever received such divine revelation? If not, why not put yourself where you may?

Christlike.

How easily and contentedly we speak of Jesus Christ as our example! Do we realize what it means? If we did it would revolutionize our life. Do we begin to know our Bible as He did? Do we begin to pray as He did? How thoughtful He was for others, how patient toward dullness, how quiet under insult! Think of what it meant for Him to take a basin and towel, like a slave, and wash the disciples' feet! Do we stoop to serve? Can any one say of us, as was said of Him, that we go about "doing good?" Think of His words, servants of His, "I have given you an example that ye should do as I have done to you."

"Christlike" is a word often on our lips. Do not speak it too lightly. It is the heart of God's predestination. It is our high calling.—Maltbie D. Babcock.

Why There Is Suffering.

Every time we come upon a human need, suffering or sorrow in any form there is an opportunity for us to manifest the works of God by showing kindness, by giving comfort, by helping in whatever way it may be in our power to help. If one is sick in your home or among your neighbors, it is a divine call to you to do the gentle offices of love, to minister in self denying ways, to do the work of God beside the sickbed. That is why the suffering is permitted.—Forward.

There Is Always Time For Prayer.

Should the new dawn breaking a burden bring
That your soul deems hard to bear
Seek a boon of grace for a little space;
There is always time for prayer.

With a lift of heart let the day begin,
And a moment's respite spare
Ere you press along with the toiling throng;
There is always time for prayer.

When your tired feet falter upon the path,
Though to pause you do not dare,
Would you find the stress of the moon grow less?
There is always time for prayer.

When the late light dies with the setting sun,
Would you taste a balm for care?
With a lift of heart let the day depart,
There is always time for prayer.

There is always time in the morning's prime
And the golden noontide fair;
There is always time 'neath the even chime
There is always time for prayer.

"After awhile," his wife said, "it is going to alter him some day dreadfully, isn't it, Kemp?"

"You mean like Mortimer?"

"Yes, only Leroy was always a pig."

As they turned their horses toward the highroad Mrs. Ferrall said, "Do you know why Sylvia isn't shooting with Howard?"

"No," replied her husband indifferently, "do you?"

"No." She looked out across the sunlit ocean, grave gray eyes brightening with suppressed mischief. "But I half suspect."

"What?"

"Oh, all sorts of things, Kemp."

"What's one of 'em?" asked Ferrall, looking around at her. But his wife only laughed.

"You don't mean she's throwing her flies at Siward, now that you've hooked Quarrier for her! I thought she'd played him to the gaff"—

"Please don't be coarse, Kemp," said Mrs. Ferrall, sending her horse forward. Her husband spurred to her side, and without turning her head she continued: "Of course Sylvia won't be foolish. If they were only safely married. But Howard is such a pill"—

"What does Sylvia expect with Howard's millions—a man?"

Grace Ferrall drew bridle. "The curious thing is, Kemp, that she liked him."

"Likes him?"

"No, liked him. I saw how it was. She took his silences for intellectual meditation, his gallery, his library, his smatterings for expressions of a cultivated personality. Then she remembered how close she came to running off with that cashiered Englishman, and that scared her into clutching the substantial in the shape of Howard. Still, I wish I hadn't meddled."

"Meddled how?"

"Oh, I told her to do it! We had talks until daylight. She may marry him—I don't know—but if you think any live woman could be contented with a muff like that!"

"That's immoral."

"Kemp, I'm not. She'd be mad not to marry him, but I don't know what I'd do to a man like that if I were his wife. And you know what a terrific capacity for mischief there is in Sylvia. Some day she's going to love somebody. And it isn't likely to be Howard. And, oh, Kemp, I do grow so tired of that sort of thing! Do you suppose anybody will ever make decency a fashion?"

"You're doing your best," said Ferrall, laughing at his wife's pretty boyish face turned back toward him over her shoulder. "You're presenting your cousin and his millions to a girl who can dress the part"—

"Don't, Kemp! I don't know why I meddled. I wish I hadn't"—

"I do. You can't let Howard alone. You're perfectly possessed to plague him when he's with you, and now you've arranged for another woman to keep it up for the rest of his lifetime. What does Sylvia want with a man who possesses the instincts and intellect of a coachman? She is asked everywhere. She has her own money. Why not let her alone? Or is it too late?"

"You mean let her make a fool of herself with Stephen Siward? That is where she is drifting."

"Do you think"—

"Yes, I do. She has a perfect genius for selecting the wrong man, and she's already sorry for this one. I'm sorry for Stephen, too, but it's safe for me to be."

"She might make something of him."

"You know perfectly well no woman ever did make anything of a doomed man. He'd kill her, I mean it, Kemp. He would literally kill her with grief. She isn't like Leila Mortimer; she isn't like most girls of her sort. You men think her a rather stunning, highly tempered, unreasonable young girl, with a reserve of sufficiently trained intelligence to marry the best our market offers—and close her eyes—a thoroughbred with the caprices of one, but also with the grafted instinct for proper mating."

Kemp Ferrall.

"Well, that's all right, isn't it?" asked up, isn't it correct?"

"Yes, in a way. She has all the expensive training of the thoroughbred and all the ignorance too. She is cold blooded because wholesome, a trifle skeptical because so absolutely unawakened. She never experienced a deep emotion. Impulses have intoxicated her once or twice. But—but if ever a man awakens her—I don't care who he is—you'll see a girl you never knew, a brand new creature emerge with the last rags and laces of conventionality dropping from her, a woman. Kemp, heiress to every generous impulse, every emotion, every vice, every virtue of all that brilliant race of hers."

"You seem to know," he said, amused and curious.

"I know. Major Belwether told me that he had thought of Howard as an anchor for her. It seemed a pity—Howard with all his cold, heavy negative inertia. I said I'd do it. I did. And now I don't know. I wish, almost wish I hadn't."

"What has changed your ideas?"

"I don't know. Howard is safer than Stephen Siward, already in the first clutches of his master vice. Would you mate what she inherits from her mother and her mother's mother with what is that poor boy's heritage from the Siwards?"

She held her horse to a walk, riding forward, grave, thoughtful, preoccupied with a new problem, only part of which she had told her husband.

For that night she had been awakened in her bed to find standing beside her a white, wide eyed figure, shivering, limbs a-chill beneath her clinging lace. She had taken the pallid visitor to her arms and warmed her and soothed her and whispered to her, murmuring the thousand little words and sounds, the breathing magic mothers use with children.

Driven she knew not why, Sylvia had crept from her room in search of the still, warm, fragrant nest and the whispered reassurance and the caress she had never before endured. Yes, now she craved it, invited it, longed for safe arms around her, the hovering hand on her hair. Was this Sylvia?

And Grace Ferrall, clearing her sleepy eyes, amazed, incredulous of the cold, childlike hands upon her shoulders, caught her in her arms with a little laugh and sob and drew her to her breast, to soothe and caress and reassure, to make up to her all she could of what is every child's just heritage.

And for a long while Sylvia, lying there, told her nothing—because she did not know how—merely a word, a restless question half ashamed, barely enough to shadow forth the something stirring her toward an awakening in a new world.

And at length, gravely, innocently, she spoke of her engagement and the worldly possibilities before her, of the man she was to marry and her new and unexpected sense of loneliness in his presence now that she had seen him again after months.

She spoke presently of Siward, a fugitive question or two offered indifferently at first, then with shy persistence and curiosity, knowing nothing of the senseless form flung face downward across the sheets in a room close by. And thereafter the murmured burden of the theme was Siward until one, heavy eyed, turned from the white dawn silvering the windows, sighed and fell asleep, and one lay silent, head half buried in its tangled gold wide awake, thinking vague thoughts that had no ending, no beginning. And at last a rosy bar of light fell across the wall, and the warm shadows faded from corner and curtain, and, turning on the pillow, her face nestled in her hair, she fell asleep.

Nothing of this had Mrs. Ferrall told her husband. Nothing of this could her husband understand had she words to convey it. There was nothing he need understand except that his wife, meaning well, had meddled and regretted.

And now, turning in her saddle with a pretty gesture of her shoulders:

"I meddle no more! Those who need me may come to me. Now laugh at my tardy wisdom, Kemp! The mischief take Howard Quarrier!"

"Amen! Come on, race."

She gathered bridle. "Do you suppose Stephen Siward is going to make trouble?"

"How can he unless she helps him? Nonsense! All's well with Siward and Sylvia. Shall we gallop?"

All was very well with Siward and Sylvia. They had passed the rabbit brier country scathless, with two black mallard, a jack snipe and a rabbit to the credit of their score, and were now advancing through that dimly lit enchanted land of tall gray alders where in the sudden twilight of the leaves woodcock after woodcock fluttered upward twittering, only to stop and drop, transformed at the vicious crack of Siward's gun to fluffy balls of feather whirling earthward from midair.

Sagamore came galloping back with a soft, unsoiled mass of chestnut and brown feathers in his mouth. Siward took the dead cock, passed it back to the keeper who followed them, patted the beautiful, eager dog and signaled him forward once more.

"You should have fired that time," he said to Sylvia—"that is, if you care to kill anything."

"But I don't seem to be able to," she said. "It isn't a bit like shooting at clay targets. The twittering whir takes me by surprise—it's all so charmingly sudden—and my heart seems to stop in one beat, and I look and look, and then, whisk, and woodcock is gone, leaving me breathless."

Her voice ceased. The white setter, cutting up his ground ahead, had stopped, rigid, one leg raised, jaws quivering and locking alternately.

"Isn't that a stunning picture?" said Siward in a low voice. "What a lean? blue veined marble. You may talk, Miss Landis; woodcock don't flush at the sound of the human voice as grouse do."

"See his brown eyes roll back at us! He wonders why we don't do something," whispered the girl. "Look, Mr. Siward! Now his head is moving, oh, so gradually to the left!"

"The bird is moving on the ground," nodded Siward. "Now the bird has stopped."

"I do wish I could see a woodcock on the ground," she breathed. "Do you think we might by any chance?"

Siward noiselessly sank to his knees and crouched, keen eyes minutely busy among the shadowy browns and grays of wet earth and withered leaf, and after awhile cautiously he signaled the girl to kneel beside him and stretched out one arm, forefinger extended.

"Sight straight along my arm," he said, "as though it were a rifle barrel."

Her soft cheek rested against his shoulder, a stray strand of shining hair brushing his face.

"Under that bunch of fern," he whispered, "just the color of the dead leaves. Do you see? Don't you see that big woodcock squatted flat, bill pointed straight out and resting on the leaves?"

After a long while she saw suddenly, and an exquisite little shock tightened her fingers on Siward's extended arm.

"Oh, the feathered miracle!" she whispered. "The wonder of its cleverness to hide like that! You look and look and stare, seeing it all the while and not knowing that you see it. Then in a flash it is there, motionless a brown shaped shadow among shadows. The dear little thing! Mr. Siward, do you think—are you going to"—

"No, I won't shoot it."

"No, I won't shoot it," watch it?"

She seated herself soundlessly among the dead leaves. He sank into place beside her, laying his gun aside.

"Rather rough on the dog," he said, with a grimace.

"I know. It is very good of you, Mr Siward, to do this for my pleasure. Oh—h! Do you see? Oh, the little beauty!"

The woodcock had risen, plumage puffed out, strutting with wings bowed and tail spread, facing the dog. The sudden pygmy defiance thrilled her. "Brave, brave!" she exclaimed, enraptured, but at the sound of her voice the bird crouched like a flash, large dark liquid eyes shining, long bill pointed straight toward them.

"He'll fly the way his bill points," said Siward. "Watch!"

He rose. She sprang lightly to her feet. There came a whirring flutter, a twittering shower of sweet notes, soft wings beating almost in their very faces, a distant shadow against the sky, and the woodcock was gone.

Quieting the astounded dog, gun cradled in the hollow of his left arm, he turned to the girl beside him. "That sort of thing wins no cups," he said.

"It wins something else, Mr. Siward—my very warm regard for you."

"There is no choice between that and the Shotover cup," he admitted, considering her.

"I—do you mean it?"

"Of course I do!"

"Then you are much nicer than I thought you. And, after all, if the price of a cup is the life of that brave little bird I had rather shoot clay pigeons. Now you will scorn me, I suppose. Begin!"

"My ideal woman has never been a life taker," he said coolly. "Once when I was a boy there was a girl, very lovely, my first sweetheart. I saw her at the traps once just after she had killed her seventh pigeon straight, 'pulling it down' from overhead, you know, very clever. The little thing was breathing on the grass, and it made sounds"— He shrugged and walked on. "She killed her twenty-first bird straight. It was a handsome cup too."

And after a silence, "So you didn't love her any more, Mr. Siward?" mockingly sweet.

They laughed, and at the sound of laughter the tall stemmed alders echoed with the rushing roar of a cock grouse thundering skyward. Crack! Crack! Whirling over and over through a cloud of floating feathers, a heavy weight struck the springy earth. There lay the big mottled bird, splendid silky ruffs spread, dead eyes closing, a single tiny crimson bead twinkling like a ruby on the gaping beak.

"Dead!" said Siward to the dog who had dropped to shot. "Fetch!" And, signaling the boy behind, he relieved the dog of his burden and tossed the dead weight of ruffled plumage toward him. Then he broke his gun, and as the empty shells flew rattling backward slipped in fresh cartridges, locked the barrels and walked forward, the flush of excitement still staining his sunburned face.

"You deal death mercifully," said the girl in a low voice. "I wonder what your ci-devant sweetheart would think of you."

"A bungler had better stick to the traps," he assented, ignoring the badinage.

"I am wondering," she said thoughtfully, "what I think of men who kill."

He turned sharply, hesitated, shrugged. "Wild things' lives are brief at best—fox or flying tick, wet nests or mink, owl, hawk, weasel or man. But the death man deals is the most merciful. Besides," he added, laughing, "ours is not a case of sweethearts."

"My argument is purely in the abstract, Mr. Siward. I am asking you whether the death men deal is more justifiable than a woman's gift of death."

"Oh, well, life taking, the giving of life—there can be only one answer to the mystery, and I don't know it," he replied, smiling.

"I do."

"Tell me, then, he said," still amused.

They had passed swale after swale of silver birches, waist deep in perfumed fern and brake. The big timber lay before them. She moved forward, light gun swung easily across her leather padded shoulder, and on the wood's sunny edge she seated herself, straight young back against a giant pine, gun balanced across her flattened knees.

"You are feeling the pace a little," he said, coming up and standing in front of her.

"The pace? No, Mr. Siward."

She sat, bright head pillowed in her arms, idly attentive to his low running comment on beast and bird and tree, on forest stillness and forest sounds, on life and the wild laws of life and death governing the great out world 'twixt sky and earth.

Somewhere in the woodland world the crows were holding a noisy session, and she told him that was the jury debating the degree of his guilt in killing the birds.

"Because you're guilty, of course," she continued. "I wonder what your sentence is to be?"

"I'll leave it to you," he suggested lazily.

"Suppose I sentenced you to stay no more?"

"Oh, I'd appeal"—

"No use. I am the tribunal of last resort."

"Then I throw myself upon the mercy of the court."

"You do well, Mr. Siward. This court is very merciful. How much do you care for bird murder? Very much? Is there anything you care for more? Yes? And could this court grant it to you in compensation?"

He said deliberately, roused by the level challenge of her gaze, "The court is incompetent to compensate the prisoner or offer any compromise."

"Why, Mr. Siward?"

"Because the court herself is already compromised in her future engagements."

"But what has my engagement to do with"—

"You offered compensation for depriving me of my shooting. There could be only one adequate compensation."

"And that?" she asked, coolly enough.

"Your continual companionship."

"But you have it, Mr. Siward."

"I have it for a day. The season lasts three months, you know."

"And you and I are to play a continuous vaudeville for three months? Is that your offer?"

"Partly."

"Then one day with me is not worth those many days of murder?" she asked in pretended astonishment.

"Ask yourself why those many days would be doubly empty," he said, so seriously that the pointless game began to confuse her.

"Then"—she turned lightly from uncertain ground—"then perhaps we had better be about that matter of the cup you prize so highly. Are you ready, Mr. Siward? There is much to be killed yet, including time, you know."

"I am not sure," he reflected, "just exactly what I should ask of you if you insist on taking away"—he turned and looked about him through the burnt gold foliage—"if you took away all this out of my life."

"I shall not take it, because I have nothing in exchange to offer, you say," she answered imprudently.

"I did not say so," he retorted.

"You did, reminding me that the court is already engaged for a continuous performance."

"Was it necessary to remind you?" he asked, with deliberate malice.

She flushed up, vexed, silent, then looked directly at him with beautiful hostile eyes. "What do you mean, Mr. Siward? Are you taking our harmless, idle badinage as warrant for an intimacy unwarranted?"

"Have I offended?" he asked, so impassively that a flash of resentment brought her to her feet, angry and self possessed.

"How far have we to go?" she asked quietly.

He rose to his feet, turned, hailing the keeper, repeating the question. And at the answer they both started forward, the dog ranging ahead through a dense growth of beech and chestnut, over a high brown ridge, then down, always down along a leafy ravine to the water's edge—a forest pond set in the gorgeous foliage of ripening maples.

"I don't see," said Sylvia impatiently, "how we are going to obey instructions and go straight ahead. There must be a stupid boat somewhere!"

But the game laden keeper shook his head, pulled up his hip boots, and pointed out a line of alder poles set in the water to mark a crossing.

"Am I expected to wade?" asked the girl anxiously.

HOPE FIVE WINS FROM HOLY CROSS BY 1 POINT

By shooting a basket from the floor just as the whistle blew for time, Clinton Firstbrook, captain of the Hope Chapel Boys' Club basketball team, won a hotly contested game for his team with the Holy Cross Club five at the Holy Cross church parish house last night. The final score was 21-20, in favor of the Hope boys. Leading the Holy Cross five by a single point at the beginning of the second half, when the score stood 13-12, in their favor, the Hope boys increased this lead to three points near the end of the half. Then the church five braced and baskets by Grey and Miller put them in the lead with the last minute of play. With a lead of one point, the church five felt confident of victory when Firstbrook broke away from his man and shot a basket unguarded, winning the game for Hope.

For the Boys' Club, the work of Firstbrook and Kenney was superior, each caging the ball four times from the floor. Grey excelled for Holy Cross, making half of the points for his team on baskets. The guarding was loose on both sides, and neither side could add much to their score from the foul line. Kenney's point from the line in the first half gave the victory to the Hope team. The lineups and summaries:

H. C. B. C.	HOLY CROSS.
left forward.
Kenney	Overton
right forward.
Muir	Miller
centre.
C. Hoffman	Stein
left guard.
Firstbrook	Bristol
right guard.

Baskets from the floor: Grey, 5; Firstbrook, 4; Kenney, 4; Rimmer, 2; Overton, 2; Miller, 2; Bristol. Goal from foul, Kenney. Referee, Russell Conroy; timers, Webster and A. Hoffman. 20 minute halves.

FOOTBALL.

A new two-year agreement in football between the University of Pennsylvania and the University of Michigan was authorized at Philadelphia yesterday at the monthly meeting of the board of directors of the University Athletic Association. Although it is Michigan's turn to play at Philadelphia this fall the Quakers may journey to Ann Arbor. This is due to the fact that the Yale-Princeton game will be played at Princeton on the same date as the Penn-Michigan game. The suggestion that Pennsylvania go to Ann Arbor this fall was made by Michigan, and the question was turned over to the football committee, with the chance that it will be accepted as the best solution of the problem.

For Girls' Basketball Title.

The girls' basketball team of the Plainfield High School will meet the girls' five from the Newark High School at the local school gymnasium in a game for the State championship of girls' school teams Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. In a game with the Newark girls for the State title last year, the local team was victorious, and their record this year shows that they can be depended upon for some fast work. Miss Esther Crampton, of the local team, is confined to her home with the grip, but may be in the game Saturday. Miss Bessie Alpaugh is captain of the P. H. S. girls' five.

P.H.S. TROUNCES LEALS'

Public School Boys Victors 37-10 in Local Scholastic League Game.

P. H. S. ALWAYS IN THE LEAD.

Good Work by Caldwell and Morris Wins Applause From Pupil Rooters—Leal's Scores Only Three Baskets.

Excelling their opponents in every branch of the game, the basketball five of the Plainfield High School easily defeated the Leal's School team in a scholastic league game played at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium yesterday afternoon. The final score was 37-10. The game was witnessed by a big gallery of school boys and girls and as a result of it, the city and borough high schools, and Leal's School are all tied for honors in the league, each team having won and lost a game, and having a 500 per cent. average.

Encouraged by their victory over the Y. M. C. A. five Monday night, the high school boys played whirlwind basketball and were in the lead all the way. Scoring three baskets from the floor in quick succession at the start of the game, the public school boys had a lead of six points before their opponents succeeded in caging the ball. They kept well in the lead, excelling in passing and shooting, and at the end of the half the score was 17-4 against the private school five. The second half was a walk-over for the P. H. S. five, and the players scored practically at will. Leals was weakened by the absence of Russell Lawrence, who is confined to his home with the grip. Martin, who caged the ball three times from the floor, scored the only baskets for Leals, Brown making the other points from the foul line. For the high school, Caldwell and Morris excelled, the former making fourteen points on baskets and scoring one foul. The line-ups and summaries follow:

P. H. S.—Mortimer and Morris, forwards; Caldwell (captain), centre; Snyder, Robins and Parsons, guards. Leal's School—Martin and Rushmore, forwards; Brown, centre; Duke (captain), and Lawrence, guards.

Baskets from the floor: Caldwell, 7; Morris, 6; Snyder, 3; Martin, 3; Mortimer, 2. Goals from fouls: Brown, 4; Caldwell. Referee—George L. Listman. Umpires: Adams, of Leal's; Collier, of P. H. S. Timers—Prior, of P. H. S. and Ladd, of Leal's. Scorer—Gus Nash, of P. H. S. 20 minute halves.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

The Fowler Bill.

The bill introduced by Congressman Fowler yesterday embodies a plan for the comprehensive reform of the currency. It has these disinctive merits:

1. It provides for the retirement of the bond-secured circulation, a system of currency issue that our experience proves to be unsafe in times of financial stress, and which is at all times open to serious objection.

2. It provides for the ultimate retirement of United States notes—greenbacks. The greenbacks ought long ago to have been retired.

3. It provides for the issue of "National bank guaranteed credit notes," secured by a 25 per cent. reserve in lawful money in the central reserve cities, and a 15 per cent. reserve for banks not situated in central reserve cities, and by a guarantee fund deposited at Washington. The notes thus secured will be issued or retired readily in promt response to the varying demands of the country's business. The necessity of new note issues would in the first instance be judged by the banks of the redemption agency districts established all over the country. The safeguards against over issue—inflation—appear to be effective, and as the notes are redeemable in gold, and are receivable at par in all parts of the United States precisely like the present banknotes, their quality as a medium of exchange would seem to be beyond question.

Mr. Fowler's bill will be objected to on the ground that it attempts too much, that it is a comprehensive currency reform bill, for which the time is not ripe, the people not ready. That is putting the cart before the horse with a vengeance. We should say the first thing to be determined is whether the bill is sound, whether in operation it would provide a safe and elastic currency. That can be determined only by a careful examination of its provisions in detail, such an examination as would be had if the bill were adequately debated in Congress and brought to the attention of the people in all parts of the country. The conclusion that we must be content with little currency reform from this Congress because if we try to get more we shall get nothing seems to us to have been hastily formed.—New York Times.

AMATEURS WERE FUNNY

Especially "Rudie" Buck, who Has a Fortune in His Robust Voice.

IF HE PEDDLES STRAWBERRIES.

Quintette of Local Talent Tried for Prize at New Plainfield Theatre's "Hook Night."

Not since the days when the same place was the home of Galvin's stock company and "Jimmy" Dougherty did himself proud by singing "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep," so many times at one try that the orchestra went on strike, has there been so much fun at the New Plainfield theatre than was on tap last night. It was "hook night," in other words, the occasion when aspirants for histironic honors, vocal, terpsichorean or otherwise, are given a chance to exhibit themselves to an aggregation of self-appointed critics. If they can stand the gaff and complete their act they fall in line for a prize and perhaps a job for four months in the year. If they don't—then it's the "hook" and woe betide the unlucky budding Milt Wood or Chauncey Olcott who fails to dodge the stick of timber with a crook on the end sent out to haul him off.

The management of the New York Vaudeville Company, which has been appearing at the theatre this week, and Manager Counihan decided to give Plainfield a look-in at "hook" night without the real hook part and called for volunteers. There were five responses in all—John Taylor, who put in a short time with a colored "Uncle Tom" show and quit when they gave him Simon Legree's bloodhound for two weeks' salary; his partner, "Skinny" Wilson, chef in a local restaurant when not trying to put the kibosh on Ernest Hogan; Walter Douglass, another gentleman of color; Job Lee, a young Englishman who sings ballads, and Rudolph Buck, an express wagon driver with a strong pair of pipes.

At the close of last night's regular program, the amateur numbers were put on and "Rudie" Buck was the first lamb called for the slaughter. The best part of "Rudie's" contribution was his nerve. There may have been some time in his life when he could warble, but some seven years in the open air on the front end of a truck and gee-hawing to a $40 horse has so warped his voice that it tuned up like a zebra's.

When he advanced to the footlights and the orchestra gave him a chord for the "Hoboken Choir," the sound that issued from the depths of his robust throat was something awful. The people downstairs clapped their hands to their ears but up in the gallery there was a riot. The bunch yelled and howled, the first balcony applauded vociferously and the orchestra went off on a tangent every instrument refusing to stay with him. The "hook" was put toward "Rudie" in the form of a terrible roll of thunder from the bass drum, but he sang on. Nobody knew how the song was going and nobody cared. And still "Rudie" continued to gurgle. He might have held the boards all night but for his happenings to note a stage hand reaching toward a prop stick and he made a wild leap to the wings.

When order had been restored sufficiently to announce another number, Douglass was led out. His act comprised imitations. First he showed how a humming bird sang as it gathered honey from the flowers only the humming bird he watched must have had a frightful cold. Then he gave an imitation of a trolley car starting up. He made good with that because everybody knew he had the Netherwood rattle-trap in mind and he was allowed to continue his act without interruption. After Douglass came Taylor and Wilson, as a song and dance team, and they made good on the spot. Both are local favorites and there was no doubt that they were the favorites when the number was concluded. Taylor, especially, seemed to appreciate the friendliness of the audience and in return gave a curtain call in the form of how Eliza crossed the ice in the "Tom" show he was with when it appeared in the town hall at Punxsutawney, Pa. Job Lee was the last one on and though he sang nicely, he rendered a ballad that was a little too deep for the crowd and it went over the heads of the biggest part of it.

At the close of the show, the committee appointed for the purpose decided that from the volume of applause the prize for the best act, a $5 gold piece, should go to Taylor and Wilson and it was accordingly awarded them. The amateur feature was voted a great success and another try-out will be held in the near future.

WANT AUTO LAW CHANGED

Associated Clubs Propose Seven Amendments to Frelinghuysen Law.

UNION'S CLUB REPRESENTED.

Dr. Frank C. Ard Takes Prominent Part At Important Meeting at Trenton.

Dr. Frank C. Ard, president of the Union County Automobile Club, took a prominent part at the meeting of the Associated Automobiles Clubs of New Jersey at Trenton yesterday, when a number of amendments to the Joseph S. Frelinghuysen automobile law were suggested. These changes will be urged before the Legislature, which convenes Tuesday as representing the views of the organized automobilists of the State.

The proposed amendments follow:

First—All horse-drawn vehicles to carry lights at night.

Second—Autoists of foriegn States to be given ten days' right to tour the State without registering here.

Third—All licenses to terminate December 31 of the year and tags to be furnished by the State.

Fourth—A higher fee for license, to go to the highway commissioner for road repairs.

Fifth—Making it a misdemeanor for a drunken man to drive a machine and for anyone to throw glass or other brittle substance on the roads.

Sixth—All fines to be reported to the automobile inspector the day the fine is imposed and all moneys from fines to be turned in within thirty days.

Seventh—Abolition of the personal registration idea, thus saving the State about $30,000 for maintaining offices throughout the State.

Dr. Ard, who by virtue of his office as president of the Union County Club, is a director of the associated clubs, stated today that the purpose of the proposed fifth amendment is to prevent grafting and persecution. It is generally known that in some sections of the State, traps are laid by country justices for the autoists and in some instances it appears the justices have withheld the fines. The second amendment is intended for the purpose of establishing a system of reciprocity among the States. If New Jersey enacts a law allowing automobilists of New York and New Jersey to run through the State on trips of short time duration, it is argued that those other States will extend the same privilege to New Jersey autoists. As conditions are at present, a Jersey autoist, without a Pennsylvania license, will be "nabbed" as soon as he gets over to the Morrisville side of the Trenton bridge.

Clubs represented at the meeting were the Union County, Hackensack, Newark, Jersey City, Camden, Wildwood, Paterson, Atlantic City and Mercer County. Wilbur F. Sadler, Jr., of Trenton, presided as president, and John E. Gill, also of Trenton, was elected secretary and treasurer.

WARNING TO DRIVERS.

Police Will Enforce Ordinance Prohibiting the Tying of Horses to Trees.

Chief of Police Kiely gave notice this morning that hereafter the ordinance forbidding the tying of horses to trees on the city streets would be strictly enforced. The patrolmen were given instructions to make arrests if necessary in order to stop the practice.

The chief's action was brought about by complaints from the Shade Tree Commission that teamsters and drivers continually use the city trees as hitching posts with the result that many of them have been ruined. The horses crop the bark, causing the sap to run, and where the tree does escape stoppage of growth an unsightly trunk is left. The commission has noted this fact repeatedly in its inspections about the city and Chief Kiely was asked to enforce the tying ordinance.

Miss Ferry Resumes Teaching.

Miss Mary E. Ferry, teacher of German at the Plainfield High School, resumed her teaching duties at the school today after an attack of the grip. Miss Ferry was taken sick at her home in Saratoga, and was unable to return to her work when school opened Monday. During her absence, Miss Lillian Maclay, of West Eighth street, had charge of her classes.

To Talk About Bungalow Boys.

"Life in a Bungalow" will be the topic of an address to be given by William J. Jeffery, father of the "Bungalow Boys," before the Men's club of the Congregational church at the church parlors Tuesday evening, January 14.

CHURCH CLUB'S BANQUET

Episcopal Laymen's Organization of New Jersey Holds Its Annual Meeting.

GEORGE S. CLAY AN OFFICER.

Plainfielder Chosen Member of Its Council—Messrs. Fox and Goodwin Members.

The Church Club of the Diocese of New Jersey held its third annual banquet last night in the Colonial room of the Trenton house, at Trenton. Thirty-two persons were present. The Plainfield members of the club include George S. Clay, Hugh Fox and Samuel A. Goodwin. The dinner was preceded by the annual business meeting of the organization.

John N. Carpender presided at the banquet. The speakers included: Bishop Scarborough, Mr. Carpender, Rev. W. Strother Jones, D. D., and Henry Humphreys, of Camden. A delightful menu was provided. The tables were tastefully decorated with cut flowers and ferns.

At the business meeting the following officers were re-elected: President, John N. Carpender, New Brunswick; vice presidents, Bayard Stockton, Princeton; A. A. De Vou, Spottswood; Harry Humphreys, Camden; secretary, William D'Olier, Burlington; assistant secretary, Cooper H. Prickitt, Burlington; treasurer, John S. Broughton, Trenton; council members, General A. A. Woodhull, Princeton; George S. Clay, Plainfield; H. H. Neilson, New Brunswick.

The remaining members of the council comprise: Alban Spooner, Beverly; Hon. G. D. W. Vroom, Trenton; Joseph Gales, Elizabeth; B. F. H. Shreve, Mount Holly; Archibald D. Russell, Princeton; Francis Collingwood, Elizabeth.

The club is composed of Episcopalians. The objects of the organization are to promote social intercourse among churchmen in the diocese of New Jersey and broadly to increase their interest in religious, moral and educational matters.

EDUCATIONAL CLASSES AT THE LOCAL Y. W. C. A.

The educational classes of the Young Women's Christian Association are just closing the first term of work. There will be an exhibition of their accomplishments and a rally next Friday evening, January 17, at 8 o'clock. All who are interested to see what has been done by these classes in the past weeks are asked to remember this date and tell their friends about it. Every young woman is invited to come to see what she can learn to do. The work of the dressmaking, millinery and embroidery classes will be on exhibition. The French and German classes will have something interesting and instructive to offer; the Glee Club will sing, while the working class will furnish proof positive that they have been busy this fall. An opportunity will be given at this time for registration for the new term in all these classes which will begin soon afterwards.

One of the most popular classes has been the Glee Club. It will be continued under competent leadership if the registration for the club is twenty-four. This is to ensure the club a large enough chorus for good work. The class fee is a membership privilege.

On Monday evening, January 20 the annual meeting of the association will be held in the gymnasium. All members are urged to help this date in mind and be present at this meeting.

The gymnasium classes are to have the gymnasium of the Young Men's Christian Association for an open evening of their work, and basketball game Friday, January 31. As there is no place for an audience in the women's gymnasium, they are most fortunate in securing the Y. M. C. A. for that evening. A limited number of tickets will be given on request and interested friends.

Preparing for Circus.

Members of the gym team at the Y. M. C. A. are holding regular practise evenings for the association circus to be given Tuesday and Wednesday, February 10 and 11. Physical Director George L. Listman, of the local association, has completed arrangements for the gym team from the Harlem Y. M. C. A. to have an athletic "act" in the circus.

Good Hunting In the South.

George Wyckoff and Alfred Compton, of the borough, have returned after a two weeks' hunting trip in the South. The hunters brought back with them a brace of fine wild geese, shot in Virginia, and tell stories of the "good hunting" in the south. On their trip they were entertained at the home of Joseph Haurand, at Ansel, Virginia.

MR. AND MRS. FORT AT MR. AND MRS. COLBY'S

Governor-elect and Mrs. John Franklin Fort were the guests of honor at an informal dinner given last night by Senator and Mrs. Everett Colby, at their residence in Llewellyn Park, West Orange.

The table decorations were in red, and consisted of American Beauty roses and red shaded lights in antique silver candelabra.

Mrs. Colby wore a gown of white chiffon draped over white liberty satin and trimmed with silver embroidery and duchesse lace. Besides the guests of honor, others at the dinner were: Dr. and Mrs. J. Hampton Bridshaw, of Orange; Mr. and Mrs. John Walker, of Orange; Miss Gretta Fort, Assemblyman Austin Colby, of Orange, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Franks, of Llewellyn Park.

SCHEUER EMPLOYEES BALL TUESDAY NIGHT

The thirteenth annual ball of the employes of S. Scheuer & Sons will take place on Tuesday evening, at Krueger Auditorium, Newark. Nothing has been spared to make this event surpass those of previous years. The entire affair is under the management of Martin J. Cassidy, who has been connected with the Scheuer firm for many years. The hall will be decorated with palms, plants and cut flowers of rare variety.

Previous to dancing there will be a concert from 9 to 10 p. m., under the personal direction of Professor Sweet. The feature of the Scheuer ball this year will be a large fountain of cologne placed in the centre of the hall, which will spray forth sweet perfume on the dancers as they twirl about the floor.

Employes of all the Scheuer branch stores will participate in this event, coming from Summit, Perth Amboy, Plainfield, Somerville, Orange, South Orange, Bloomfield and other suburban towns.

The reception committee, as is the custom, is composed of the several managers of the different branches. M. Schloss, of this city, is a member of the committee.

The management wishes to announce that all lady customers who desire to attend the ball can obtain tickets by applying to the managers of the different branches.

LOCAL SCHOOLS TO HAVE STRONG HOCKEY TEAMS

With the approach of cold weather and skating, hockey teams of the city and borough high schools are planning their season's schedules and will start practise as soon as solid ice forms. The call for candidates has been issued in both schools and it is understood that Leal's School is to be represented on the ice. There is talk of a scholastic league in hockey and as soon as regular skating begins for the season it is probable that the managers of the three school teams will get together and form such a league for the local school title.

At the Plainfield High School, there is a majority of last year's material eligible for the team this year and the call for candidates, issued a few days ago, brought out about a dozen of the pupils. Charles Loizeaux, captain of the football team, was elected captain of the hockey team, but on account of his sickness, Kenneth Phillips is acting as captain. The school boys have not been on the ice as a team yet, but will use Hyde's pond regularly for practise. "Bill" Douglass, captain of last year's team, and Joe VanDeventer are the two lost by graduation last year, but among the promising candidates for this year's team are Chauncey Murphey, Kenneth Phillips, Bruce Caldwell, Guion Fountain, Moses Rubenstein, Jack Riffert, Edgar Starker and Walter Hammond.

Over in the borough, the boys of the North Plainfield High School have been called together for hockey and there is an unusually bright outlook for the season. Among the fast material on skates at the school this year are Byron and Fred McClintock, "Tone" Overton, Clarence Steiner and Russell Conroy. The squad has not yet been on the ice together, but will probably practise on Tier's pond, when solid ice forms.

APPLAUSE FOR DUFAULT

New York Operatic Tenor Pleases Large Audience at McIntyre Concert.

RENDER EXCELLENT PROGRAM.

Joseph McIntyre's Schumann Rendition and Work of Instrumental Trio Especially Well Received.

Introducing Paul Dufault, the well-known New York tenor, to Plainfield music lovers, the third of the season's McIntyre chamber concerts, held at the Casino last night, afforded an opportunity for a local audience to hear the metropolitan singer at his best. He rendered songs in French and English, and his voice proved strong yet under perfect command for the inner impassioned feeling he brought out so exquisitely in Foote's "Love Me If I Live," and the even more keenly appreciated encore "Love, I Have Won You and Held You." His pronounciation and voice modulation in Massenet's "Pensee d'Automne" in the French showed him to be a true artist in this somewhat difficult rendition, and his selection "The Wind at Dawn" (Elgar), won appreciative applause.

The instrumental numbers of the carefully arranged program gave opportunity for some excellence in feeling of rendition. Perhaps the greatest appreciation was called forth by Joseph McIntyre's rendition of Schumann's "Papillons." To quote from the program foot-note:

"These twelve short lyrical songs, "Butterflies of Fancy," were inspired by the "Flegeljahre" of Jean Paul Richter. After the slow introduction, the waltz recalling Schubert; then melodic passages in octaves for alternate hands dying away in pianissimo in the Aria; a fugato march in spirited style, episodes of songs, sparkling polonaise rhythms, canonic melodies in lively motion; repetitions of earlier bars to give an external unity to these little stories, and as a conclusion the "Grossvater" song. The whole is unted contrapuntally with the first waltz and then the carnival is silenced. The Tower clock strikes six, a full chord of the seventh piles itself up gradually and closes the piece."

The Beethoven number, trio in B flat, Opus 11, including the allegro con brio, adagio and allegretto, with theme variations, was a most difficult selection, especially in the opening allegro and closing allegretto, and the three artists won enthusiastic applause by their rendition. Maurice Kaufmann, the violinist, showed in his playing that he has not lost his fine singing touch and Vladimir Dubinsky showed strong and accurate control of his 'cello. The trio appeared again the closing number of the program, Sternberg's trio in E flat, considered by many the instrumental triumph of the evening. The program follows:

Beethoven, Trio in B flat, Opus 11, (for piano, violin and cello), Allegro con brio, Adagio, Allegretto (theme with variations); song, Massenet, "Pensee d'Automne;" piano solo, Schumann, "Papillons;" songs, Elgar, "The Wind at Dawn;" Foote, "Love Me If I Live;" Sternberg, Trio in E flat (for piano, violin and cello), Andante Cantabile, Allegro con brio.

Extra Prize for Miss Elliott.

Benjamin G. Elliott, of Scotch Plains, who is rapidly coming to the front as one of the leading breeders of fancy poultry in this section of the State, yesterday received a pleasant surprise in the shape of a silver cup from the Westchester Poultry Association, of White Plains, N. Y. It came as an extra prize for his buff orpingtons exhibited at the association's show in December when his entries took first and second cups against a large field.

Some Splendid Views of Mining Property.

The National Mining and Leasing Company, 211 North Avenue, is exhibiting at Schwed Brothers and Cadmus Brothers' and Schreiner's pharmacies some splendid flashlight views showing underground workings of one of their properties at Galena, Kansas. From this mine nearly two hundred and fifty thousand pounds of lead and zinc ore has been taken in a week's time.

Dance In Girls' Honor.

The senior class of the Plainfield High School will hold a reception and dance at the school auditorium Saturday night. The affair is being arranged by a committee of the boys of the school, of which Henry Pound is chairman, and will be given for the girls of the school in return for the strawride given by the girls in the fall.

DISGUSTED, QUITS TOWN

Disappointed by the Dnuellen Council Proceedings Kuhns Will Leave Place.

BOUGHT GLEN GARDNER FARM.

Dunellen Councilman Who Tendered His Resignation at Last Council Meeting Will Soon Move Out of the Borough.

It was reported at Dunellen yesterday that ex-Councilman William H. Kuhns, who resigned from the Council at the last meeting, is planning to leave the borough and within a few weeks will move to a farm he has recently purchased near Glen Gardner. In connection with the property, which is a large tract, Mr. Kuhns has bought a large country store at the cross-roads on his farm, and will conduct the business.

Dunellenites of both parties are still talking over the tiff at the Council meeting Monday night, when Councilman William H. Kuhns read the law to Mayor Harry Swackhammer relative to the alleged illegal proceedings in getting the endorsement of his Council to his New Year's Day appointments in the borough, and then asked that his resignation from the body of Dunellen fathers be accepted, stating that he did not care to have anything more to do with such government.

In a statement read by the clerk of the council stating his reasons for resignation, Mr. Kuhns wrote: "I have always aimed to be a law-abiding citizen and councilman and, refusing any longer to sit under illegal proceedings, I hereby tender my resignation to take effect at once." Councilman Starker made a motion to accept the resignation and the councilmen endorsed the resignation unanimously. Mayor Swackhammer calling the roll.

The alleged "illegal proceedings" referred to were the ratifications of appointments filled by the Mayor by acclamation rather than by ballot, in accordance with Section 20 in the rules of order of the Council. Mr. Kuhns called the Council's attention to this illegality at the time of his resignation. Borough Counsel Walter L. Hetfield, of this city, was present at the meeting and expressed the opinion that the recent appointment of members of the board was perfectly legal, but has been requested to look more carefully into the matter and report on its legality at an adjourned meeting of the Council to be held next Saturday evening. His opinion in the matter at the last meeting was given without investigation of the law, and he requested this time in which to look up the clauses governing such action.

At this adjourned meeting on January 18, action will be taken by the Dunellen Council on a communication received at the last meeting from the Board of Health, announcing the organization of that board as follows: President, John R. Campbell; vice-president, Edward Pennock; secretary, Wilson S. Frederick; physician, Dr. D. S. Main; inspector, C. Wesley Blaine.

RECEIVER SETTLING AFFAIRS OF GERMAIN & CO.

James J. Allen, who has been appointed receiver for the chain of stores conducted by H. Germain & Co., was in this city yesterday in connection with his investigation of the firm's affairs. The local store at Front street and Madison avenue is one of fourteen included in a petition in bankruptcy made in New York Wednesday and which Mr. Allen was authorized to continue in operation for ten days while the affairs are being straightened out.

In the company's petition it was stated that the concern was organized by Herman Germain eight years ago, with headquarters in Brooklyn and in 1907 was incorporated with a capital stock of $150,000, Mr. Germain being president. The total assets of the fourteen stores are placed at $90,000 and liabilities at $175,000 to $200,000. Beside the Plainfield store there is one in the Bronx, one in Jersey City, one in Norwalk, Conn., four in Manhattan and six in Brooklyn.

Dance at Truell Hall.

In honor of Kenneth Mackenzie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Mackenzie, a subscription dance was given at Truell Hall, last night. Twenty couples enjoyed the dancing in the large ball room until after 1 o'clock when refreshments were served. Suhr's Imperial orchestra furnished the music.

Back From the South.

John LeMair, of Somerset street, returned yesterday from a two weeks' trip through the South. He spent the time in visiting at various cities in Florida, including Jacksonville and Tampa.

SHAKE-UP IN RAND CO.

Changes Rumored in Manufacturing Concern of which W. L. Saunders is Head.

THE PRESIDENT IS IN EUROPE.

Easton Express Report Has It That Rand People Will Take Entire Charge of the Plants.

The Easton Express says it has secured information and from a source considered thoroughly reliable, that there is about to be a big change in the affairs of the Ingersoll-Rand Drill Company, that owns and operates a plant at West Easton and another and larger one over in Phillipsburg. Former Mayor William L. Sunderg, of North Plainfield, is the president and ruling spirit in the vast concern.

The story has it that the old Rand people are about to take entire charge of the plants, which are to be operated with larger forces than ever before employed. It is understood that the plant at West Easton is to be enlarged very much to permit the removal there of plants the Rand Co. operated on leased lands and in localities where labor is scarcer and higher than there.

"There is no secret about Mr. Saunders, president of the Ingersoll-Rand Company, having gone to Europe to 'straighten up matters,'" says the Easton Express. "No one in this locality, connected with the company, could be induced to talk on the subject."

Mr. Saunders succeeded former Mayor W. R. Grace, of New York, as president upon the latter's death a few years ago. He is the inventer of most of his patents.

BANKS MAKES NEW FIGURES IN Y. M. C. A. ATHLETIC EVENT.

Bettering the record of 35 feet 3 inches made in the running hop, step and jump at the Y. M. C. A. meet last year by C. D. Burgess, W. P. Banks did 35 feet 11 inches at the association gymnasium last night, and now holds the Plainfield record. In contest with him was the former title holder, C. D. Burgess, who improved his record figures by four inches, but could not equal Banks' figures. The event was in an effort to better the record of Burgess, and is the third association record to be bettered in such contests this year.

In an effort to break the association record made by Frank N. Marclay in 1898, Henry Viebrock jumped 6 feet 1 inch in the fence vault. This figure is 4½ inches lower than the record, which has never been equalled at the association since Marclay's jump. Banks jumped 5 feet 10 inches in the competition and H. B. Ackor finished third with 5 feet 7 inches. In both athletic events, there was a large field, and much interest was shown in Viebrock's effort to better Marclay's record. Next Thursday night, the association gymnasts will attempt to better the record figures in the three standing broad jumps. Russell J. Lawrence holds the record in this event with his jumps of 30 feet 11 inches, made last year.

WILL REMOVE EYESORES.

Woman's Association of Westfield Proposes to Make Many Improvements.

The Woman's Association of Westfield, one of the largest and most active in the State Federation, is about to play in important part in the physical regeneration of the town. For a long time the question of removing some of the eyesores in the principal thoroughfares and fine residential sections has been mooted, but there has seemed to be no feasible plan of action. The women have finally come to the cescue and have found a way by which the object sought is to be obtained.

In order to thoroughly arouse public opinion, and to srystalize the sentiment adverse to property owners who have no civic pride, the Woman's Association has arranged for a meeting to be held in the chapel of the Presbyterian church next Monday afternoon. At this meeting pictures of all the unsightly places in the town will be thrown on a canvas, and a speaker, whose name has not yet been disclosed, will show how thoroughly out of keeping they are with the surrounding neighborhood.

Doane Monument Unveiled.

The memorial statue of the late Mgr. Doane, late vicar-general of the Catholic diocese of Newark, was unveiled in Rector Park, Newark, yesterday afternoon. The monument was formally presented to the city by United States Senator James Smith, Jr., and was accepted by Mayor Jacob Haussling. The exercises included addresses by Governor-elect J. Franklin Fort and the Right Rev. J. J. O'Connor, present bishop of the Newark Catholic diocese.

home of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Hall in Union avenue, Bound Brook.

Mrs. Jacob Foreman, of New Bound Brook, has gone to Fort Erie, Canada, where she will spend several weeks with relatives.

BASKING RIDGE.

Owing to the illness of Mrs. John C. Rankin, the meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian church, which was to have been held at her house Wednesday, was postponed.

Miss Katherine E. Thompson will leave today to spend several days at Morristown, where she will be the guest of Mrs. Samuel S. Childs.

Miss M. Chamberlin, who had been a visitor at the home of Mrs. M. F. Edgar, on Main street, has returned to Orange.

Miss Georgia Collins has returned to her home on the avenue, after spending a week with relatives in Brooklyn.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

A surprise party was given at the home of Mrs. Melvin Teeple Wednesday night in honor of her husband's birthday. Those who were present were Rev. and Mrs. Attlee, Lloyd and Lorena Harris, Mrs. Samuel Shields, Essie and William Shields, Nellie Hannon, Louisa Randolph, Myrtle Randolph, Nettie and Walton Smith, John Arrowsmith, Charles Randolph, Eddie Hannon and Ellis Shives, of Phillipsburg. The evening was spent with various amusements and the affair did not terminate until a late hour.

The Foresters met this week in their new quarters in Washington Hall and installed their officers for the ensuing year. Deputy C. P. McCarthy and staff, of Court Plainfield, No. 1144, had charge of the installation. The meeting was largely attended and those present were greatly edified by the addresses which were made by the Plainfield visitors.

Mrs. George Smith, of Maple avenue, was down stairs yesterday for the first time since her recent illness, and Mr. Smith was able to return to business today, having been kept from it by his wife's condition which required his presence at home.

Plainfield friends will regret to hear that both Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Dunn are still very ill and that Mrs. Dunn's condition is giving us serious anxiety here. Mrs. Dunn's aunt, Mrs. Howard Ayers, is now with them.

There will be a dime sociable tonight at the home of George Stover, Oak Tree, for the benefit of the Dover church.

Doctor Browning, of Plainfield, paid a very pleasant visit to William Faulks, of Maple avenue, yesterday.

Christian Endeavor business meeting will be held this evening at Harry Manning's.

WESTFIELD.

A hearing will be given to the objectors on the macadamizing of Euclid avenue, from Broad street to Mountain avenue, by Westfield Council, on January 20.

Mrs. Sarah Hann, formerly a resident of Westfield, died in Chicago Tuesday. She had moved to Chicago only a few weeks ago.

The new officers of Westfield Council, Daughters of Liberty, will be installed at the meeting to be held this evening.

The Westfield Trust Company announces that it will pay four per cent. on the deposits in its savings department.

NORTH BRANCH.

George W. Hill, son of Lambert S. Hill, passed away Wednesday at his home, near South Branch. The funeral was held this morning at 11 a. m. at the house. Rev. Isaac Sperling, pastor of the Reformed church, officiated. The body was taken to Bedminster for burial.

Miss Mary Casey has been entertaining Mrs. Hennessey, of Lambertville.

Lawrence Kavenaugh has been suffering from an attack of erysipelas.

John Wagner and son have returned from a visit in Philadelphia.

Mrs. James H. Shay has gone to Mediren, Conn., to make her home.

Peter Gulick is suffering from a severe attack of the grip.

M. E. Driscoll has returned from Westerly, R. I.

GREAT Inventory SALE

The money stringency, the disastrous weather conditions and the backward season, these three combined have caused an awful slump in the sale of Clothing and Furnishings.

Having prepared to do a big business as it is constantly growing, we have loaded up stock. The three above mentioned facts have not only compelled us to think but to act.

Upon taking inventory, we found that our stock is much larger than we expected. We had to decide to either carry this stock over until next season, and tie our money up until then, or place it on sale before the public. We've chosen the latter and you will certainly reap the benefit.

Our entire stock consisting of High Grade and Custom made mens', youths and boy's clothing and furnishings, will be placed on sale beginning Saturday Jan. 11th and will continue for 15 days only, closing on Jan. 25th, at 12 p. m.

We will give you bargains that were never heard of before, for we're compelled to do so. Nothing will be reserved. Our entire stock must be turned into cash.

Space does not allow us to describe the goods, but our prices talk. Note the following.

as an investment is the safest and best for the wage earner or person of moderate means, yielding at all times larger returns than any saving institution. All the profits are divided annually among the shareholders. The funds of the association are loaned to its members on first mortgage, this makes the security the very best. There is no speculation whatever connected with the business of this association. Its directors are all local business men who personally look after all its affairs. The money as it is received is immediately invested. No money is kept laying idle, in this way the profits are constantly growing, so that a series will mature between ten and eleven years.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

A unique addition to the increased orchestra and band effects of the Al. G. Field Greater Minstrels this season, is a saxaphone sextette, the instruments for which cost over one thousand dollars. The saxaphone is the musical antithesis of the double reed mouthpiece, which has been used in combination with a metal tube, for it is the clarinet reed adapted to a brass instrument. It was invented in 1840 by Adolph Sax, from whom it derived its name. There are several forms of the instrument, resembling the clarinets very closely in shape, and being provided with the usual keys. The tube of the saxaphone is conical so it is enabled to produce all the harmonics, despite the large size of its reed. In fingering it resembles the oboe rather than the clarinet. The six varieties of saxaphone, include the sopranino, soprano, alto, tenor, baritone and bass. All these instruments play an important part in the splendidly equipped band which is this year again under the direction of Edward W. Brill, whose brass band is famous in Ohio and surrounding states, and also in the orchestra under the leadership of Charles E. Scope. The Al. G. Field Greater Minstrels will appear at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow afternoon and night.

One of the most interesting offerings of this season will be the appearance of Wilton Lackaye in Hall Caine's new play, "The Bondman," at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night. This appearance is one of the first in America, the premier performance only having taken place in St. Louis a few weeks ago. "The Bondman," that is to say Hall Caine's own dramatization of his famous romantic novel of the same name, had been running for over a year at the Drury Lane Theatre, London. In England it has created a sensation and is accepted as the greatest of all of the Hall Caine successes. When Wm. A. Brady visited London this summer he secured the American rights for Mr. Lackaye and also made arrangements with Arthur Collins for the importation to America of the entire Drury Lane production. It is interesting to know, too, that Mr. Caine was willing to release the American rights to Mr. Brady, the latter being manager of Mr. Lackaye, probably, the one actor in America whom Mr. Caine deemed capable of portraying the powerful character of "Jason," the leading part in the play.

One of George M. Cohan's latest plays, "50 Miles from Boston," comes to the New Plainfield theatre next Tuesday night, under the management of Cohan and Harris with petite Edna Wallace Hopper in the stellar role. This story of New England life is said to be particularly pleasing on account of the admirable characters which this brilliant young playwright has drawn from his intimate knowledge of New England and its people. There is plenty of the wonderful Cohan slang, five or six of his new songs, a big company and plenty of pretty girls with good voices and nimble feet. Clever Laurence Wheat heads the list of Miss Hopper's supporting cast. Others are Emma Janiver, "the girl who makes faces," Louise Rial, George Parsons, James C. Marlowe, Hazel Lowry, Lores Grimm and James Bradbury. "Jack and Jill," "My Small Town Gal," "Boys Who Fight the Flames," "Ain't It Awful," "Harrigan" and "Waltz With Me" are some of the song hits. Miss Hopper will appear in the role of a demure little postmistress who is madly in love with the Harvard college youth, who sings her praises as his "Small Town Gal."

POINTS FOR THE BUYERS

A full line of musical instruments and sporting goods is handled by S. Frucht, of West Front street. You can save money by looking over his stock.

Beside handling rugs, carpets and mattings, Shirley & Johnson, in the Babcock building, carry a fine line of furniture. For the present few weeks they are offering parlor rockers, sideboards and beds at greatly reduced prices.

This is the season of the year when biting winds bring severe colds and discomfort. The best way to keep them out is by getting one of those coat sweaters sold by James R. Blair. They are the nobbiest things in the men's furnishing line and bring more comfort than an overcoat.

Dr. William J. Rolfe, the eminent Shakesperean scolar and critic of Cambridge, Mass., recently celebrated the eightieth anniversary of his birth. While a teacher in Wrentham, Mass., he created the idea of an English department in schools and colleges, which has been universally adopted throughout the country.

THE DAILY PRESS.

Plainfield, N. J., January 10, 1908.

IN RIGHT PLACE NOW.

The reported selection of Joseph S. Frelinghuysen for the position of State insurance commissioner is probably without foundation. It can hardly be possible, in the first place, that he could be induced to accept the office which it is said Governor-elect Fort has in store for him. His extensive insurance business, to say nothing of his other business affairs, would not warrant him devoting the necessary time to such an office although it must be admitted that a better selection could not be made by the incoming executive.

In the second place, the Senator is too big a figure today for the office. There are other and much higher honors that might be conferred on him and of which he would be sure to discharge the duties most acceptably. But it is doubtful if he could be prevailed upon to take any office at all other than that which he is now filling most ably. As a Senator he is sacrificing a large part of his time in the interests of the State. He is today second to none in the Upper House at Trenton. His course there has been one that has reflected the greatest possible credit on his constituents. A hustler from the word "go," he is not a man of fads or "isms," but one who understands and most zealously discharges the duties of his office. While better known as the father of the ideal pure food law and the excellent automobile statutes, he has done more than his share in framing much of the best legislation for which others have gotten undeserved credit. This is due to the fact that self-advertisement and gallery-playing tactics are foreign to his nature.

It was only because of his flat refusal to allow his friends to use his name in that connection, that the Somerset man was not brought out last fall for the Gubernatorial nomination. From all parts of the State, the Somerset county committee, which had endorsed him for the nomination, received assurances of strong support. It was not merely that many of the big leaders wanted him, but that the rank and file of the party took favorably to him that was most flattering to Somerset. But the Senator was in poor health at the time and in need of entire rest and therefore very wisely heeded the advice of his physicians not to enter upon such a campaign, which taxes the strength of the strongest of mortals.

Three years hence, another Governor will be named. Then it will be time enough to show appreciation of the Somerset man and at th same time to give the State a worthy successor to J. Franklin Fort. In the meanwhile he can be of the most value to the Governor just where he is, in the Senate chamber.

The North Plainfield Common Council has taken action favorable to having bills introduced in the Legislature effecting annexation to Union county and consolidation with Plainfield. It will be well for Somerset's representatives to get on their fighting clothes.—Somerville Unionist-Gazette.

That's right, if they are looking for a good licking.

COMMISSION IN ARMY FOR STATE GUARDSMEN

Governor Stokes has received from the war department a communication which will be of interest to national guardsmen. It expresses a desire of President Roosevelt, which has been sent to the Governors of all the States that they designate a single representative from the National Guard to take the competitive examination for appointment as second lieutenant in the regular army under the conditions and limitations prescribed in the case of all civilian appointees in the army.

These National Guard candidates will be appointed according to their standing in the examination and to the extent that vacancies may exist in the army. This action is taken both with the view of encouraging members of the militia and of securing good material for the regular service. The only conditions imposed on the Governors are that the militiamen nominated by them shall have have at least two years's service in the National Guard and have been recommended by their immediate commanding officers.

RODERICK DHUS DOWN WILLETT'S NAPOLEONS

To the great surprise of the gallery and followers of the contest, the Roderick Dhus administered defeat to the Napoleons in the bowling tourney, last night. They took two out of the three games and had the other one cinched in the sixth frame but lost it through loafing and a sudden rally on the opposite side. As a result of the match, the Napoleons fell back from second to third place in the standing and the Roderick Dhus pulled themselves up a peg, now holding on to sixth position.

The first game in last night's series was one of the tight variety and both sides worked to the last throw for every pin. A corking wind-up by Captain "Charlie" Meyer did the trick for his side and the Rodericks got the tally by a margin of thirty-one pins. They started off on the second try in bang-up shape and when the sixth frame was added they were leading the Naps by eighty. But just about that time a combination of splits bobbed up and to help along the hadd luck "Willie" Mullen and Frank Willett smashed the wood for a bunch of strikes. Both landed double centuries and the Meyer aggregation was buried under a mass of timber, the figures standing 886-804.

The last game was close with a big C and both sides claimed it until the middle of the tenth frame. At that point the Napoleons began to break and a couple of doubles and a triple falling to the Rodericks sent them in the stretch a winner. The margin was thirty-three.

Individually, honors for the night went to Captain Meyer, who chalked up an average of 190.1. "Willie" Mullen was second with 178.1 and "Charlie" Ortleb crowded him with 177.1. Frank Willett accounted for 176.2 and Harry VanEmburgh fell off to 154.1. The best aggregate score for the series was the Napoleons' 886 in the second try.

RESOLUTIONS OF CONDOLENCE.

Whereas, Our Heavenly Father, in His infinite wisdom, has called to the Homeland, our good friend and well beloved companion and brother, Eldon Smalley; and

Whereas, While sorrowing deeply at the grievous loss which has overtaken us, we yet bow in humble submission to the Divine will, realizing that God does not willingly afflict His children, but doeth all things well; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by us, the officers and members of the North Plainfield Exempt Firemen's Association, that in the passing of Eldon Smalley in the early years of a life which promised success and honor for himself, and great usefulness to his fellow men, we are called upon to mourn the loss of one whose kindly nature, upright character and blameless life had endeared him to us all; and be it further

Roselved, That we commend to our Father in Heaven, for comfort and strength, the family which has been so sorely bereft of its loved one, for 'tis He alone who can give the peace which passeth understanding; and be it further

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our Association, and that a copy thereof be sent to the bereaved family of our dear brother.

FRANK E. KESSELRING,
JOHN H. SCHENCK,
DAVID C. ALLEN,
Committee.

Dated North Plainfield, N. J., January 8, 1908.

—The borough clerk's safe was today removed from the office of former Borough Clerk Frank Rowley and placed temporarily in the North Plainfield fire house. Though arrangements are pending for a borough clerk's office somewhere on the "Great White Way" of Somerset street, Borough Clerk Fred Martin will keep his books in this safe at fire headquarters temporarily, because the borough tax collector's office is too small for its accommodation.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

While skating on New Market pond with a party of boys Wednesday, Fred Romph, of Bound Brook, broke through and got a cold bath when the ice broke under him as he was taking part in a hockey game. The ice was very thin on the pond after the recent rainstorm and warmer weather, and the boys had been warned against skating until it should freeze thicker. Despite the warning, about a dozen of the boys ventured out on skates in the afternoon. Romph was with the party and was skating with the others when he broke through into shallow water. His companions saw his plight and went to his assistance and he was quickly hauled out. The shock from the cold bath caused him to give up his skating for the day, but he suffered no ill effects from the sudden ice plunge.

Rev. George N. Gardner will speak at the week of prayer service at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, New Market, tonight. His topic will be "Working With God." Last night Rev. Henry N. Jordan spoke on the subject "Suffering as Sons of God," and a large congregation turned out to the service. At the Methodist church, Rev. W. W. Casselberry, the pastor, will speak tonight on the topic "Temperance."

At the installation meeting on Antietam Command, Union Veterans' Union, at Plainfield Wednesday night, Comrade John W. Wagner, of this borough, assumed his duties as colonel of the command. This is the highest office of the Union.

Charles E. Richards, one of the peaceful members of the Borough Council, has opened an insurance office in one of the rooms over the bank building as a branch office to his business in New York city.

Rev. George H. Gardner will preach at the Seventh-Day Baptist church at the service tomorrow morning, and will also address the Sunday-school.

Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Kenyon, of New Market, are confined to the house with the grip.

PLAINFIELD AND FANWOOD.

The prayer meetings, which have been held every night this week, in the Baptist church, will be brought to a close tonight. The meetings have been well attended and the pastor, Rev. T. Moore-Smith, is much encouraged over the interest shown.

The effect of having an officers on duty at night can be seen every night. It is not the arrests made but the idea that some one is on duty is what keeps the noisy element down.

Miss Edna Mown, who has been ill with scarlet fever for several weeks, is improving nicely and the quarantine will be removed from the house shortly.

Mrs. Edward L. Hand and Mrs. W. R. Buckley have returned from a visit of several days with Mrs. Strubles, at Hampton Junction, N. J.

Willie Stanbury has returned to his studies as one of West Point Military Schools after a two weeks vacation spent at his home here.

Hotel licenses of Ferdinand Schmidt and Walter Dorlan, of Alton, were renewed by Judge Atwater at Elizabeth Wednesday.

This is no weather for the ice man. The local dealers are beginning to worry over next summer's supply.

Herbert Knight, of the borough, has returned to his studies at the Carnegie Technical Institute.

(Additional suburban news on page 2.)

KING RECEIVER FOR NATIONAL COPPER CO.

The local creditors of the National Copper Company, which has a large plant at Elizabethport, through their attorneys, Leavitt & Atwater, yesterday filed a petition with the clerk of the United States District Court at Trenton asking that the company be adjudged bankrupt. The business of the company is the reducing of copper bearing material and the extraction of copper from other metal and scraps.

The total authorized capital stock is $50,000, divided into 2,000 shares, each with a par value of $25. Benjamin King, director of the Union County Board of Freeholders, has been appointed receiver.

ELIZABETH TRADE BOARD ELECTS HALSEY HEAD.

Charles H. K. Halsey was re-elected president of the Elizabeth Board of Trade at the annual meeting of that organization last night. With Mr. Halsey at the head of the Board of Trade will be the following officers: First vice-president, James C. Connolly; second vice-president, Joseph McManus; treasurer, Samuel R. Ogden, and secretary, William F. Groves. The members of the executive committee chosen are H. H. Isham, Peter Bonnett, Warren R. Dix, C. A. Trimble and E. S. Hersh.

The Board of Trade is practically under the same control as a year ago, when new life was injected into it. According to the reports submitted last night, the board has during the last year taken decided action toward the improvement of the city streets, the betterment of the trolley service, the abolishment of the local grade crossings, the improvement of the channel at Elizabethport and the management of the Old Home Week in October, and pledges itself to renewed activity along this line in the future.

RAISING FIREMEN'S PAY.

The Councilmanic fire committee, of which Henry D. Hibbard is chairman, held a meeting last night to arrange for the department budget and to adjust department salaries preliminary to the introduction of an ordinance for that purpose.

The increase will not be equal to that recently made in the police department. The fire chief is not included in the raise. The agreed scale will be announced at the next meeting of the Common Council.

Fink Retains His Job.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Freeholders yesterday afternoon, J. W. Fink, of Westfield, was again elected county road supervisor at the organization meeting. On New Year's Day his appointment was held up through the Democratic members of the board voting for Owen Farrelly, of Elizabeth. Fink was elected yesterday after two ballots were taken.

PROBE FOR JERSEY PRISON.

Officials Deny That Convict-Made Goods Go Out Unstamped.

Attorney Backes of the Hahn Investigating Committee sought at Trenton yesterday to show that goods made in the prisons have been sent out without the stamp required by law, "Made in New Jersey State Prison," or had that stamp blurred over. The law was passed at the instigation of the labor organizations, so that goods made by convicts should be known to the public.

James E. Mitchell, president of the Prison Board of Managers, denied that the goods were wrongfully shipped out of the prison. Samuel Rosenberg, shipping clerk, corroborated him, and denied that convicts were directed to smear the stamp over after it had been put on.

The committee will meet again in Newark on January 18, when its report to the Legislature will be formulated, suggesting reforms at the New Jersey State Hospital for the Insane, the State Prison, and the State Board of Health office, all of Trenton; the Reformatory at Rahway, and at the State Hospital for the Insane at Morris Plains.

Stirred By Release of Prisoners.

Residents of Westfield are stirred up oved the fact that Anie Walton, a negress, and James Jones, a negro, were released from the county jail Wednesday under $300 bail each. Judge Atwater allowed the pair to go out on bail. The woman, who was with the man New Year's morning, is accused of shooting Allen Johnston. The bullet struck Johnston in the groin, and for some time he as in a serious condition, although the physicians said yesterday that he has passed the crisis and will probably get well unless complications set in.

Middlesex Budget.

The Middlesex Board of Freeholders has fixed the budget for the year 1908 at $234,320, or over $15,000 less than they had expected would be necessary. This amount is over $22,000 less than the last budget fixed by the old Democratic Board in 1905. Last year a budget for only eight months was adopted, and the total was $167,000.

AMUSEMENTS.

"The Rose of the Rancho," the great Belasco success, is playing to capacity houses at the Academy of Music. Th Academy engagement will continue for two weeks, with matinees on Wednesdays and Saturdays. It is only a few weeks ago that the "Rose of the Rancho" left the Belasco theatre for a short road tour, and as the New York engagement came to a close when it was at the height of prosperity, the return to Manhatthn will be welcome. Being a Belasco production, it can be expected that there will be no deterioration in the cast or in the freshness and beauty of the scenic equipment. Miss Francess Starr, who established and has secured her position as a Belasco star by her artistic creatic creation of "Juanita"—the rose of the rancho—will be seen in her original role. Her sweet personality, her vivid portrayal of the coquettish, emotional Spanish heroine, have given Miss Starr a permanent and an important place among our women stars. The company appearing in Miss Starr's support is the same that assisted in the first success at the Belasco theatre. It includes Charles Richman, A. Hamilton Revelle, Frank Losee, J. Harry Benrimo, John W. Cope, Oscar Eagle, William Quirk, Gilmore Scott, Grace Gaylor Clarke, Marie Davis and Marta Melene. Mail orders will now be received for the engagement.

Always making additions to the attractive features of the New York Hippodrome's bil bill, the management now has more novelties than at any other period in the history of of the people's playhouse. To the already splendid performance in the novelty circus has just been introduced Professor Wulff's performing horses, which Shubert and Anderson especially imported for the Hippodrome. Wulff is the greatest horse trainer in Europe and his educated equines are internationally famous. One of the great features of the act is a play in which the parts are taken by four Arabian stallions, a pony and a dog. These are but two events in the circus, which also includes the twelve Hagenbeck elephants; Daisy Hodgini, the Parisian equestrienne; the wonderful Mirza Golem troupe of Persian acrobats, and four other celebrated European ground and lofty events. Marceline, the Hippodrome's famous clown, is at his funniest, and twenty other clowns appear in merry antics throughout the performances. The big spectacle at the Hippodrome this season is "The Four Seasons," and it is the most gorgeous and the greatest of all this playhouse's wonderful achievements.

Charlotte Walker is the ideal southern girl in the new Belasco production, "The Warrens of Virginia," at the Belasco, with an individuality that goes over the footlights and a store of charms that usually goes straight to the heart. She portrays the pecularities of the southern girl in the lighter scenes so cleverly that she is responsible for all the laughs that Frank Keenan, as Gen. Warren, does not create by his wonderful interpretation of the kind-hearted but splenetic southern commander, whose chief ambition is to whip his old comrade of the Mexican war, Gen. Jim Griffin, of the Union army. But the big climax of the play is in Miss Walker's hands, and in that she shows ser capacity for making a big dramatic moment.

"A Knight for a Day," the new B. C. Whitney musical comedy presented by a company of seventy, including John Slavin and May Vokes, is crowding Wallack's theatre, New York, as that playhouse has not been crowded since the good old days of "1492," "The Sultan of Sulu," and "The County Chairman." Nothing funnier in a musical comedy way has been seen in New York in many a day. To be near the theatre during a performance is to hear laughter loud and incessant. It is easy to understand how the piece has a record of 400 performances in Chicago, where it is still running. The New York papers are one in lauding the piece for its plentitude of laughs, the Telegram pronouncing it "good for two hours of solid laughter;" the World, that "no opportunity for humor or pictures is wasted;" Alan Dale of the American, that "it is, assuredly, one of the very best entertainments in town;" the Evening Sun, that "it is deservedly drawing crowds," and the other papers of the town expressing themselves in like terms of joyous eulogy. Matinees are given Wednesday and Saturday.

For the best meats, dressed poultry and provisions, send your orders to Smalley Brothers, the North avenue market men. They guarantee satisfaction as to quality and price.

W. W. Dunn, the Lincoln place grocer, handles the best of everything in the line of staple and fancy groceries. Orders received by telephone are delivered anywhere in the city or borough.

FACTS ABOUT NEW THEORY SECURED BY INTERVIEWS

People Tell the Reason for Their Faith in Cooper's Belief.

An article from the Nashville, Tenn., Banner, published during L. T. Cooper's visit to that city, throws some light on the remarkable success of the young man's theories and medicines in various cities visited by him during the past year. The article is as follows:

"In view of the enormous sale of Cooper's preparations now going on in this city and the intense interest which Mr. Cooper has stirred up since his arrival, a representative of the Banner spent Thursday afternoon at the young man's headquarters, watching the swarm of humanity come and go.

"During the afternoon the reporter interviewed many of the callers and obtained statements from all who cared to give them as to their experience with Cooper and his preparations.

"The following are selected from those statements as being typical of the general expression of the people seen:

"Mr. B. B. Lasater, living at 1224 North Fourth avenue, when interviewed, said: 'I have been troubled with my stomach for the past two years, and have had rheumatism for more than five years. Sometimes I could not walk, and there were times when I could not even move in bed. Hard knots would form on my muscles, which caused me intense pain. Gas formed on my stomach after eating, which gave me much pain and distress, and often I was restless and tossed all night, losing much sleep and rest.

"'Hearing of Mr. Cooper and the great work his medicine was accomplishing for others, I decided to try it. I have taken it about two weeks, and find myself in a greatly improved condition. My stomach is in good shape, and does not trouble me at all. My rheumatism has nearly disappeared, and I expect to resume work shortly, for the first time in twelve months. Mr. Cooper certainly has a wonderful medicine, and I am grateful for what it has done for me.'

"Another caller was Mrs. T. J. Smith, of 505 Hudson street. She said: 'I have been a sufferer from bladder and kidney trouble for twenty-five years. In that time I have tried many prescriptions and various kinds of medicine, but received little or no benefit from them. I seldom had a sound night's sleep, my rest being broken at intervals throughout the night. I had pains in my back and burning sensations.

"'I heard so much of Mr. Cooper that I came to the conclusion he might be able to afford me some relief. I have now been taking the medicine about a week, and feel better in every way. The pain has disappeared, and I have no distress whatever. I have come here today to express my appreciation to Mr. Cooper for his wonderful medicine and what it has done in my case. I will take pleasure in recommending it to others.'

"In spite of assertions by various physicians that Cooper is a fad who will soon die out, the young man seems to be gaining even greater headway as his visit draws to a close."

The agency for Cooper's celebrated medicines has been given to us. We are making a fine record with them. —T. S. Armstrong.

Late Suppers

Welsh rarebits, lobster salads and the like nearly always produce distressing after-effects. Rich food taken at irregular hours, not only causes temporary derangement of the stomach and bowels, but often brings about chronic dyspepsia and indigestion.

If you will eat all kinds of food at all kinds of hours, you can prevent unpleasant consequences by taking

DR. D. JAYNE'S SANATIVE PILLS

For Liver Complaints, Gout, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Affections of the Bladder and Kidneys, Costiveness, Sick Headache, Biliousness and all Bowel Affections, Jayne's Sanative Pills are undoubtedly the oldest, most reliable and effective remedy known. Can be taken as a dinner pill, laxative, purgative or cathartic. Never gripe.

Sold by all druggists, in two size boxes, 25c. and 10c.

Jayne's Tonic Vermifuge is a natural, gentle and effective tonic. Splendid for dyspeptics, as it acts directly on the stomach, toning and strengthening that organ, and enabling it to do its work properly.

STRIKING REDUCTIONS IN EVERY LINE.

Just a week has passed since this big sale started. Weather conditions have not been conducive to shopping, still hundreds of people who profited by last January's Sale have taken advantage of this greater opportunity to save on Clothing, Shoes, Hats and Furnishings of unusually high quality and distinctiveness.

It's our rigid rule to clean up stock in all lines at the end of every season that makes this sale so broad in its provisions and so highly interesting to thrifty buyers

We are prepared for an unusually brisk trade tomorrow, but, as the crowds are invariably greater toward the close of the day, the early buyers will have our appreciation.

WOMEN'S AND MISSES' NEW $20 SUITS.

There's difference between cheap suits and suits cheap—no fear about getting cheap suits here—we do not have them; but suits cheap is our stronghold; 50 suits, Skinner satin lined, plain and herringbone serges, cheviots and broadcloths; just the suits you would pay $20, or even $25 for in regular season; the manufacturers made sacrifices to enable us to secure this bargain; navy, black, green, brown, pretty checks and stripes; velvet and plain collars; graceful hanging skirts; with fold, women's and misses' sizes, at..... $15.00

BOYS' $1.25 AND $1.50 KNICKER TROUSERS, 69c.

Be Wise, Lay In a Year's Supply—and you will save an average of half. We do not know better news than we could tell the parents of growing boys, and we could not tell that if it were not for the dissolution in partnership of a prominent clothing firm. Good woolens are high and bargains scarce. So let nothing stand in the way of taking advantage of this rare chance to the full. $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50 Knickerbockers for boys, 9 to 17 years; all wool fancy gray mixed cheviot and cassimer, light, medium and dark, neat stripes and plaids; trousers for dress and play; full cut and perfectly tailored; taped throughout; patent waist bands, special at..... .69

YOUNG MEN'S $12 TO $15 SUITS.

Single Breasted—Neat gray and brown mixtures—stripes and plaids; also all wool black thibet, perfect fitting in every respect, close fitting collar, broad shoulder, long lapels, correct back; serge and venetian linings; trousers, peg or semi-peg—the styles young men of today like so much, 16 to 20 years, and they will like the price, too; special $8.50

NEW FOUR-IN-HANDS OF 50c SILKS.

Luck, indeed, that the maker who supplies us with this great and occasional bargain should have overbought silks and so was forced to make up another lot to use it up—lucky for US and YOU. We were only too glad to take this lot of 1,800 and have no doubt our patrons will be just as eager to buy, too. Fashionable 2¼ inch French folded and silk lined four-in-hands; most desirable colors and patterns; light, medium and dark; figures, stripes, checks, and two tone effects; really surpassing in value any heretofore offered—all new, fresh value, 50c, at ..... .29

MEN'S FINE $1.00 NEGLIGEE SHIRTS.

A bargain that will gratify hundreds of men; magnificent display good shirts; fancy colors, fine madras and parcale, patterns carefully selected, mostly white grounds with black stripes, figures and checks; materials same as in higher priced; all cut full; large standard measurements, separate cuffs, sizes 13½ to 17; materials selected by us, shirts made especially for this sale, at..... .74

The New York Herald Anglo-American Competition

Max Pemberton England
vs.
Mary E. Wilkins Freeman
America

Referee—THE PUBLIC

$1000 CASH FOR VOTES!

The New York Herald has purchased the exclusive rights to two new novels fresh from their author's pens.

One is "Sir Richard Escombe," by Max Pemberton, the famous English author. It is a fascinating romance of the Thames country a century and a half ago.

The other is "The Shoulders of Atlas," by Mary E. Wilkins Freeman, one of America's typical authors. It is a masterpiece of wit, pathos, tragedy and romance.

These two novels will be published simultaneously in the New York Herald's Sunday Magazine Section, beautifully illustrated by English and American artists, and the Herald will award prizes amounting to $1000 cash to those who criticise them and vote on the question:

Which is the better story?

Beside the opportunity to win prizes yourself, your vote will help decide where another prize will go, for the Herald will also award a large sum to the winning author.

The New York Herald Anglo-American Competition is but one of hundreds of striking features of the Herald's Sunday Magazine Section.

The Herald's Magazine Section is a weekly masterpiece of breezy reading and superb illustrations—a perfect magazine—containing a variety of features unapproached by any monthly magazine, and having a timeliness impossible to any monthly.

Its fiction is written by the greatest living authors of America and Europe.

Its special features are prepared by trained specialists, covering the entire gamut of human activity, and every article is authoritative, informative, interesting and timely. It chronicles the big achievements of men and women who do things, the romances, tragedies and comedies of real life, and all the new wonders of the world.

Its Fashion Department is the timeliest and most authoritative in America. The designs are sent direct from the Herald's Paris headquarters, and are printed months ahead of any fashion publication.

It is a fact that the New York Sunday Herald is the acknowledged leader of Sunday journalism in the whole world. The Herald originates. Its Magazine and Art Sections set the pace for all other newspapers. And its Comic Section is famous the world over. The Herald's many popular creations, such as "Fluffy Ruffles," "Buster Brown" and "Little Nemo," are copied by newspapers everywhere.

You pay from fifteen to twenty-five cents for a monthly magazine that cannot possibly be better than the Herald Sunday Magazine—yet you can get the entire Sunday Herald, with all its cable and telegraphic news and great features for five cents.

Next Sunday's Herald will contain full particulars of the Anglo-American Competition. You'll want to read the competing novels, even if you don't try for the prizes. Order quickly.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS.

The Camden Liverymen's Protective Association has raised the rates for cab hire for funerals from $3.50 to $4.

George Fox almost cut his foot in half while chopping wood near Port Elizabeth, and nearly died from loss of blood.

The last quarter of the year 1907 saw the heaviest mail in and out of Barnegat ever known, and it is likely that it will raise the postoffice from the fourth to a third-class office.

William Souder, of Swedesboro, who has just passed the three-score-year-and-ten mark, challenges any quoit pitcher in South Jersey, or he and his friend, Frank Turner, will meet any two.

Antonio Grabofski, who on Monday killed his brother-in-law, Michael Ziemniski, and then fired a bullet into his own head with suicidal intent, was able to leave Cooper Hospital yesterday and was locked up for a hearing.

While Anna Demby, colored, of 770 Central avenue, Camden, was hanging up clothes in the yard yesterday, her three-year-old daughter was so horribly burned by her dress catching fire from the kitchen stove that she died in Cooper Hospital last evening.

Although the Millville Council and Mayor will not recognize former Marshal Bullock as a city officer, now that Charles Biggs has been elected as his successor, the county authorities view Bullock as a bona fide official, and have summoned him to Bridgeton to act as court constable.

Burglars paid a visit on Tuesday night to the postoffice at Audubon, of which H. D. Lecato, a Philadelphia real estate man, is postmaster, and stole 1,000 stamped envelopes. The postoffice at Westmount, about one and a half miles from Audubon, was also entered. None of the Government funds were touched. Only a few dollars' worth of cigars and tobacco comprised the plunder.

John Valkenburg, of Mt. Royal, was found lying across the track of the Salem road by a freight crew. He had a bad wound in his head, which, he claims, was inflicted by a club in the hands of a highwayman. The wound was attended by Dr. Reading. The officials believe the man fell on the track.

Crowing roosters may be barred from Atlantic City, following kicks from patrons of hotels who object to the chanticleer awakenings each morning. Present ordinances place the permission to keep chickens in the hands of the Health Board, and rules may be asked allowing only hens or dumb roosters to be cooped in city limits.

Rev. John F. Lynch, pastor of the Union Methodist Episcopal church, Burlington, has been selected a joint conference of the Ministerial Union and the Good Citizenship League to request of Governor-elect Fort that in his inaugural message to the Legislature he advocates the enacting of a local option law for New Jersey.

This is the Square Pot

Patented

The Vital Feature of

Boynton Furnaces

Nothing short of actual use can convince you fully of the pronounced superiorities of this construction over the old-fashioned round fire pot.

It does away with the clogging of ashes and cinders, because the sides are perpendicular, instead of slanting.

It brings, for the first time in furnace construction, a perfect and rapid combustion, getting more applied heat out of a given amount of fuel than any other fire pot.

It gives you the maximum of radiating surface.

It brings you an ash-pit that is square and roomy, making cleaning easy in extreme.

These are but a few of the many advantages of the patent Square Pot, a feature of Boynton Furnaces and none other. See your plumber, steam fitter or tin-smith about them.

There are BOYNTON heating plants of all kinds. Ask about our Round or Sectional Boilers for steam or hot water. Also ranges.

WHEN THEY ARE NOT WANTED.

Some People Seem to Have Faculty for Unconsciously Butting-In.

"Have you ever noticed," said the melancholy man, "how it is the vocation of certain people to get in the way—to be around when they are not wanted? I suppose that if they were aware of their calling they would feel bad about it. But, as a matter of fact, they never are aware of it, and this, probably, explains why they keep at it. Take my brother-in-law, for instance. He has a marvelous faculty for turning up at inopportune moments. If we are going to have company to dinner we can surely count on a message from him asking whether it would be convenient for his wife and himself to drop in on us. If I am anticipating a quiet hour of reading in the evening it is ten to one that I'll hear his voice in the hall. Just as I am hastening to close up my office in the afternoon he is apt to come in and establish himself for a prolonged talk. Take a hint? Such men never take a hint. They are so obtuse that they don't see when their presence turns company into a crowd. They have not learned the art of effacing themselves on occasions, and they never will. You feel sorry for them at first, but sorrow soon changes to another sentiment."

HAD NO CAUSE TO BE AFRAID.

Very Harmless "Tiger" Was Irishman's Companion in Cage.

The manager of a wild animal show was so unfortunate as to lose by death the only lion in his collection. After trying in vain to replace the loss he finally secured an Irishman to appear in his exhibition on all fours in the lion's cage, wrapped in the dead beast's skin. This plan worked well enough for a while, and the public was fooled. One night, however, it became necessary, in the course of one performance, for the lion to enter the tiger's cage. Pat pleaded strenuously behind the scenes against being sent into the other maneater's presence; but his employer was unyielding, assuring him repeatedly that the tiger was harmless. Though well-nigh dead with fear, Pat, after long and vigorous persuasion, at last crawled into the tiger's cage. No sooner was he in the cage than he lost what little courage he had left, and lay down, calling in a hoarse whisper, "Please don't bite me; I ain't no lion; I'm an Irishman." The tiger appeared thoroughly disgusted, and in a moment he growled back, "Shut up, you fool, so am I."—Harper's Weekly.

A Matter of High Politics.

One the wittiest of English peers is Lord Longford, and he has also earned the reputation of being one of the worst dressed, in spite of the fact that for 20 years he has been in the Second Life Guards. The story goes that a friend once met him in Ireland garbed in a pair of continuations which were not on speaking terms with his boots, and chaffed him mercilessly about the "lucid interval" that occurred between them. But "Tommy," as Lord Longford is known to his intimates, in nowise disconcerted, blandly explained that it was really a matter of high politics. "You see, my dear fellow, the breeches are made by a tailor who is a rampant Orangeman, while the boots are the achievement of a Fenian cobbler, so how can you expect 'em to meet?"

Rats, Plague Carriers of India.

Before plague makes its appearance in a house the rat mortality generally gives warning and a case occurs among the people in a house near which rats have been found. The people have now come to know that there is some connection between the rat mortality and the occurrence of plague cases in a certain locality. The rats go about from one place to another and they carry infection from place to place and render the task of controlling plague, when it is once spread, very difficult. It therefore necessary that the public should cooperate with the health department to destroy as many rats as possible. The rains have now stopped, and, as it is the breeding season for rats, the present is the fittest occasion for a campaign against rats.—Bombay Gazette.

An Interpolation.

The old-time revivalist often possessed a gift of gentle satire which stood him in good stead. At a Maine camp-meeting long ago a young man made himself so obnoxious during a prayer that the old preacher rounded off one of his sentences rather abruptly. "Now, Lord," he then continued, without a trace of irritation, "we pray that Thou wilt in the mightiness of Thy power take that young man in the fourth seat and make his heart as free from sin as his head is from sense."—Youth's Companion.

Careless.

"Oh, George, dear, our wedding must be postponed." "No, darling, no. It must not be." "But it must, George, dear. Father has lost all his money in the market." "You are right, dear. You are right. The wedding must be postponed. I never thought it of you, Mabel. I never thought that you would have such a careless father."—Detroit Free Press.

Setting Himself Right.

"Here is the man, your honor, who was caught stealing the hog." "Caught in the act?" "Yes, sir." "Jedge," said the prisoner, "dat man is lyin' to you. It wus in de fence corner what he kotched me!"—Atlanta Constitution.

HARD WORK TO RETAIN YOUTH.

One Man Declares He Is Not Envious of His Friend's Success.

"The fabled secret of youth, the fountain of everlasting life and all the panaceas for growing old without looking old or feeling old are absurdities by the side of the process used by a professional man of my acquaintance," said a widely known lawyer of Philadelphia. "That man looks like a chap of 35, acts, eats, drinks and enjoys himself like one, but I know he's past 60, and considerably past it at that. He hasn't a gray hair on his head, his eye is bright, his skin clear, his step elastic, and his voice strong. What's the secret? It has been an inflexible habit with him from early youth to retire at eight o'clock in the evening and sleep until seven in the morning. On rising he takes a cold bath, but many men do that. Oh, that's all easy, you say? It's not so easy, after all. Try it and stick to it, despite engagements at the theater, business affairs left over from the day and all the variety of things of that sort, and you'll find it about as hard a task as you can place before yourself. Of course, there have been a few breaks in his lifetime habit. But in the main he has adhered to it. Do I recommend it? Well, hardly. It's a dry existence. I prefer this style of life, and am willing to die young accordingly."

EFFECT OF EARTH'S ROTATION.

Belgian Geologist So Ascribes Curious Twists in Tree Trunks.

Curious twists are observed in many tree trunks, and the inquiry just began in Europe suggests the surprising conclusion that they are produced by the earth's rotation, like the twists of storms and the whirls seen in water. Van den Broeck, the Belgian geologist, points out that if conditions of growth were the cause the torsion should follow the sun's apparent path. In at least 990 out 1,000 trees the reverse is true, and it may be that the twist is usually to the left in the northern hemisphere and to the right—or with the clock—in the southern hemisphere, like the turn of the cyclonic storms and water vortices. This difference is due to the earth's rotation. Jean Brunhes notes that it was shown some years ago that the winds due to the earth's motion blow steadily at a season when vegetation is active and sensitive, and a slight continuous bending and turning then would be likely to affect the tree permanently. —From the Bulletin of the American Forestry Association.

The American Beauty's Defects.

If we were to find particular fault with our American beauties dominant in the public eye to-day, it would be their lack of facial strength, the absence of soul quality which our strenuous national life and feverish ambitions tend to nullify if not annihilate. The nobility of countenance, the calm, pure, steadfast expressions seen in the faces of the great sculptures might well be emulated by our own beautiful women. We lack the simplicity, the repose of the period that produced those beauty types that have been accepted as a standard for all ages. The American girl, with all of her glorious qualities, needs some of the serenity and power of old Greece to make her more perfect than she is. Her facial weak points are in her nose and chin and forehead. Now and then one comes upon the strong type, but it is the exception.—Perriton Maxwell, in the Bohemian.

How a Philosopher Described a Child.

A child is nature's fresh picture, newly drawn in oil, which time and much handling dims and defaces. His soul is yet a white paper, unscribbled with observations of the world, wherewith, at length, it becomes a blurred notebook. He is purely happy because he knows no evil, nor hath made means by sin to be acquainted with misery. He arrives not at the mischief of being wise, nor endures evils to come by foreseeing them. He kisses and loves all, and, when the smart of the rod is past, smiles on his beater. Could he put off his body with his little coat, he had got eternity without a burden, and exchanged but one heaven for another.—John Earle (1601-1665).

Tennyson and the Socialist.

Tennyson figuring as a champion of the imperiled rights of property is thus quoted in William Allingham's lately published "Diary." "I was once in a coffee shop in the Westminster road at four o'clock in the morning. A man was raging, 'Why has so-and-so a hundred pounds and I have not a shilling?' I said to him, 'If your father had left you a hundred pounds you would not give it away to somebody else.' He had not a word to answer. I knew he hadn't."

What Happened.

Eva—"Dear me! I really believe that Jack was a pugilist at some stage of his career." Katherine—"Gracious! What in the world gave you that idea?" Eva—"Why, the other evening when we were sitting on the sofa little Tommy peeped in the parlor and shouted 'Break away!' and Jack jumped all the way to the other end of the room. After that he said in confusion he was thinking about referees."

Real Sweet.

"Please let me take your picture, miss," pleaded the young man with the camera. "I declare, you are sweet enough to eat." "Gracious!" laughed the pretty summer girl; "and is that why you wish to put me on a plate?"

The Fighting Chance.

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS.

Copyright, 1906, by the Curtis Publishing Company.
Copyright, 1906, by Robert W. Chambers.

"This here," observed the keeper, "is one of the most sportin' courses on the estate. Last season I seen Miss Page go through it like a scared deer—the young lady, sir, that took last season's cup"—in explanation to Siward, who stood doubtfully at the water's edge, looking back at Sylvia.

Bearing the girl between them, they waded out across the stones

Raising her dismayed eyes she encountered his; there was a little laugh between them. She stepped daintily across the stones to the water's edge, instinctively gathering her kilts in one hand.

"Miles and I could chair you over," suggested Siward.

"Is that fair—under the rules?"

"Oh, yes, miss, as long as you go straight," said the keeper.

So they laid aside the guns and the guide's gamesack, and formed a chair with their hands, and, bearing the girl between them, they waded out along the driven alder stakes, knee deep in brown water.

Her arm, lightly resting around his neck, tightened a trifle as the water rose to his thighs; then the faint pressure relaxed as they thrashed shoreward through the shallows, ankle deep once more, and landed among the dry reeds on the farther bank.

Miles, the keeper, went back for the guns. Siward stamped about in the sun, shaking the drops from waterproof breeches and gaiters, only to be half drenched again when Sagamore shook himself vigorously.

"I suppose," said Sylvia, looking sideways at Siward, "your contempt for my sporting accomplishments has not decreased. I'm sorry. I don't like to walk in wet shoes even to gain your approval."

And as the keeper came splashing across the shallows: "Miles, you may carry my gun. I shall not need it any longer."

The upward roar of a bevy of grouse drowned her voice. Poor Sagamore, pointing madly in the blackberry thicket all unperceived, cast a dismayed glance aloft where the sunlit air quivered under the winnowing rush of heavy wings. Siward flung up his gun, heading a big quartering bird. Steadily the glittering barrels swept in the arc of fire, hesitated, wavered, then the possibility passed. The young fellow lowered the gun slowly, gravely, stood a moment motionless with bent head until the rising color in his face had faded.

And that was all for awhile. The astonished and disgusted keeper stared into the thicket. The dog lay quivering, impatient for signal. Sylvia's heart, which had seemed to stop with her voice, silenced in the gusty thunder of heavy wings, began beating too fast. For the ringing crack of a gun shot could have spoken no louder to her than the glittering silence of the suspended barrels nor any promise of his voice sound as the startled stillness sounded now about her, for he had made something a trifle more than mere amends for his rudeness. He was overdoing everything a little.

He stood on the thicket's edge, absently unloading the weapon, scarcely understanding what he had done and what he had not done.

A moment later a far hail sounded across the uplands, and against the sky figures moved distantly.

"Aldecdene and Marion Page," said Siward. "I believe we lunch yonder, do we not, Miles?"

They climbed the hill in silence, arriving after a few minutes to find others already at luncheon—the Page boys, eager, enthusiastic, recounting adventure by flood and field; Rena Bonnesdel, tired and frankly bored and decorated with more than her share of mud; Eileen Shannon, very pretty, very effective, having done more execution with her eyes than with the dainty fowling piece beside her.

Marion Page nodded to Sylvia and Siward with a crisp, businesslike question or two, then went over to inspect their bag, nodding approbation as Miles laid the game on the grass.

"Eight full brace," she commented. "We have five and an odd cock pheasant—from Black Fells, I suppose. The people to our left have been blazing away like Coney Island, but Rena's guide says the ferns are full of rabbits that way, and Major Belwether can't hit fur afoot. You," she added frankly to Siward, "ought to take the cup. The birches ahead of you are full of woodcock. If you don't Howard Quarrier will. He's into a flight of jack snipe, I hear."

Siward's eyes had suddenly narrowed; then he laughed, patting Sagamore's cheeks. "I don't believe I shall shoot very steadily this afternoon," he said, turning toward the group at luncheon under the trees. "I wish Quarrier well with the cup."

"Nonsense," said Marion Page curt-ly. "You are the cleanest shot I ever knew." And she raised her glass to him frankly and emptied it with the precision characteristic of her: "Your cup! With all my heart!"

"I also drink to your success, Mr. Siward," said Sylvia in a low voice, lifting her champagne glass in the sunlight. "To the Shotover cup—if you wish it."

In the little gust of hand clapping and laughter he turned again to Sylvia smilingly, saying under his breath, "As though winning the cup would compensate me now for losing it!"

She leaned involuntarily nearer, "You mean that you will not try for it?"

"Yes."

"That is not fair to me!"

"Why not?"

"Because—because I do not ask it of you."

"You need not, now that I know your wish."

"Mr. Siward, I—my—wish"—

But she had no chance to finish. Already Rena Bonnesdel was looking at them, and there was a hint of amused surprise in Eileen Shannon's mischievous eyes, averted instantly, with malicious ostentation.

Then Marion Page took possession of him so exclusively, so calmly, that something in her cool certainty vaguely irritated Sylvia, who had never liked her. Besides, the girl showed too plainly her indifference to other people, which other people seldom find amusing.

"Stephen," called out Alderdene anxiously, counting the web loops in his khaki vest, "what do you call fair shooting at these ruffed grouse? You needn't be civil about it, you know."

"Five shells to a bird is good shooting," answered Siward. "Don't you think so, Miss Page?"

"You have a better score, Mr. Siward," said Marion Page, with a hostile glance at Alderdene, who had not made good. Impatient to start, she had turned her tailor made back to the company and was instructing his crestfallen lordship very plainly: "You fire too quickly, Blinky. Two seconds is what you must count when a grouse flushes. You must say, 'Mark, right,' or 'Mark, left, bang!'"

And so the luncheon party, lord and lady, twins and maidens, guides and dogs, trailed away across the ridge, distant silhouettes presently against the sky, then gone. And after a little while the far dry, accentless report of smokeless powder announced that the opening of the season had been resumed and the birds were dying fast in the glory of a perfect day.

"Are you ready, Mr. Siward?" She stood waiting for him at the edge of the thicket. Miles resumed his game sack and her fowling piece. The dog came up, looking him anxiously in the eyes.

So he walked forward beside her into the dappled light of the thicket.

Within a few minutes the dog stood twice, and twice the whirring twitter of woodcock startled her, echoed by the futile crack of his gun.

"Beg pardon, sir."

"Yes, Miles," with a glint of humor.

"Overshot, sir, excusin' the liberty, Mr. Siward. Both marked down forty yard to the left if you wish to start 'em again."

"Miles," he said, "my nerve is gone. Such things happen. I'm all in. Come over here, my friend, and look at the sun with me."

The discomfited keeper obeyed.

"Where ought that refulgent luminary to scintillate when I face Osprey Ledge?"

"Sir?"

"The sun. How do I hold it?"

"On the p'int of your right shoulder, sir. You ain't quittin', Mr. Siward, sir!" anxiously. "That Shotover cup is easy yours, sir!" eagerly. "Wot's a miss on a old drummer, Mr. Siward? Wot's twice overshootin' cock, sir, when a blind dropper can see you are the cleanest, fastest, hard shootin' shot in the hull county?"

But Siward shook his head, with an absent glance at the dog, and motioned the astonished keeper forward.

"Line the easiest trail for us," he said. "I think we are already a trifle tired. Twigs will do in short cover. Use a hatchet in the big timber. And go slow till we join you."

And when the unwilling and perplexed keeper had started, Siward, unlocking his gun, drew out the smooth yellow cartridges and pocketed them.

Sylvia looked up as the sharp metallic click of the locked breech rang out in the silence.

"Mr. Siward!" in quick displeasure.

"Yes?"

"What you do for your amusements cannot concern me."

"Right, as usual," he said, so gayly that a reluctant smile trembled on her lips.

"Then why have you done this? It is unreasonable if you don't feel as I do about killing things that are having a good time in the world."

He stood silent, absently looking at the fowling piece cradled in his left arm. "Shall we sit here a moment and talk it over?" he suggested listlessly.

Her blue gaze swept him. His vague smile was indifferently bland.

"If you are determined not to shoot we might as well start for Osprey Ledge," she suggested. "Otherwise, what reason is there for our being here together, Mr. Siward?"

Awaiting his comment, perhaps expecting a counter proposition, she leaned against the tree beside which he stood, and after awhile, as his absent minded preoccupation continued:

"Do you think the leaves are dry enough to sit on?"

He slipped off his shooting coat and placed it at the base of the tree. She seated herself, and, as he continued to remain standing, she stripped off her shooting gloves and glanced up at him inquiringly. "Well, Mr. Siward, I am literally at your feet."

"Which redresses the balance a little," he said. Smiling a slow, rare, he[illegible]

He sat there, chin propped on his linked fingers, elbows on knees and, though there was always the hint of a smile in his pleasant eyes, always the indefinable charm of breeding in voice and attitude, something now was lacking. And after a moment she concluded that it was his attention. Certainly his wits were woolgathering again. His eyes, edged with the shadow of a smile, saw far beyond her, far beyond the sunlit shadows where they sat.

In his preoccupation she had found him negatively attractive. She glanced at him now from time to time, her eyes returning always to the beauty of the subdued light where all about them silver stemmed birches clustered like slim shining pillars crowned with their autumn canopy of crumpled gold.

"Enchantment!" she said under her breath. "Surely an enchanted sleeper lies here somewhere."

"You," he observed, "unawakened."

"Asleep? I?" She looked around at him. "You are the dreamer here. Your eyes are full of dreaming even now. What is your desire?"

He leaned on one arm, watching her. She had dropped her ungloved hand, searching among the newly fallen gold of the birch leaves drifted into heaps. On the third finger a jewel glittered. He saw it, conscious of its meaning, but his eyes followed the hand idly heaping up autumn gold—a white slim hand, smoothly fascinating. Then the little restless hand swept near to his, almost touching it, and then instinctively he took it in his own curiously, lifting it a little to consider its nearer loveliness. Perhaps it was the unexpectedness of it, perhaps it was sheer amazement, that left her hand lying idly relaxed like a white petaled blossom in his.

After a little while the consciousness of the contact disconcerted her. She withdrew her fingers, with an involuntary shiver.

"Is there no chance for me, Miss Landis?"

The very revulsion of self possession returning chilled her; then anger came quick and hot; then pride. She deliberated, choosing her words coolly enough, "What chance do you mean, Mr. Siward?"

"A fighting chance. Can you give it to me?"

"A fighting chance? For what?" very low, very dangerous.

"For you."

Then in spite of her her senses became unsteady. A sudden ringing confusion seemed to deafen her, through which his voice, as if very far away, sounded again:

"Men who are worth a fighting chance ask for it sometimes, but take it always. I take it."

Her pallor faded under the flood of bright color. The blue of her eyes darkened ominously to velvet.

"Mr. Siward," she said very distinctly and slowly, "I am not—even—sorry—for you."

"Then my chance is desperate indeed," he retorted coolly.

"Chance! Do you imagine"— Her anger choked her.

"Are you not a little hard?" he said, paling under his tan. "I suppose women dismissed men more gently—even such a man as I am."

For a full minute she strove to comprehend.

"Such a man as you," she repeated vaguely. "You mean"— A crimson wave dyed her skin to the temples, and she leaned toward him in horror stricken contrition. "I didn't mean that, Mr Siward! I—I never thought of that! It had no weight. It was not in my thoughts. I meant only that you had assumed what is unwarranted—that you—your question humiliated me, knowing that I am engaged—knowing me so little—so"—

"Yes, I knew everything. Ask yourself why I risk everything to say this to you? There can be only one answer."

Then, after a long silence, "Have I ever," she began tremblingly—"ever by word or look"—

"No."

"Have I even"—

"No. I've simply discovered how I feel. That's what I was dreaming about when you asked me. I was afraid I might do this too soon, but I meant to do it anyway before it became too late."

"It was too late from the very moment we met, Mr. Siward." And, as he reddened painfully again, she added quickly, "I mean that I had already decided."

And, as he said nothing: "You were a little rough, a little sudden with me, Mr. Siward. Men have asked me that question—several times, but never so soon, so unreasonably soon—never without some preliminary of some sort, so that I could foresee—be more or less prepared. But you gave me no warning. I—if you had I would have known how to be gentle. I—I wish to be now."

Still he said nothing. He sat there listlessly studying the sun spots glowing, waxing, waning, on the carpet of dead leaves at his feet.

"As for what you have said," she added, a little smile curving the sensitive mouth, "it is impulsive, unconsidered, a trifle boyish, Mr. Siward. I pay myself the compliment of your sincerity. It is rather nice to be a girl who can awaken the romance in a man within a day or two's acquaintance. We shall not misunderstand each other again, shall we?"

He raised his head, considering her, forcing the smile to meet her own.

"We shall be better friends than ever," she asserted confidently.

"Yes, better than ever."

"Because what you have done means the nicest sort of friendship, you see. You can't escape its duties and responsibilities now, Mr. Siward. I shall expect you to spend the greater part of your life in devotedly doing things for me. Besides, I am now privileged to worry you with advice. Oh, you have invested me with all sorts of powers now!"

He nodded.

She sprang to her feet, flushed, smiling, a trifle excited.

"Is it all over, and are we the very ideals of friends?" she asked.

"The very ideals."

"You are nice!" she said impulsively, holding out both gloveless hands. He held them, she looking at him very sweetly, very confidently. "And you are content?" persuasively.

"Of course not," he said.

"Then I am sorry for you. Look at that!" turning her left hand in his so that the jewel on the third finger caught the light.

"I see it."

"And yet"—

"And yet."

"That," she observed, with composure, "is sheer obstinacy. How can you really care for me? Do you actually believe that devotion comes like that?"

"Exactly like that."

"So suddenly? It is impossible!" with a twist of her pretty shoulders.

"How did it come to you?" he asked between his teeth.

Then her face grew scarlet, and her eyes grew dark, and her hands contracted in his—tightened, twisted fingers entangled, until, with a little sob, she swayed toward him, and he caught her. An instant, a minute—more perhaps she did not know—she half lay in his arms, her untaught lips close against his. Last trace of faint consciousness, then tiny shock on shock came the burning revulsion, and her voice came back, too, sounding strangely to her, a colorless, monotonous voice.

She swayed toward him, and he caught her.

He had freed her. She remembered that somebody had asked him to—perhaps herself. That was well. She needed to breathe, to summon strength and common sense, find out what had been done, what reasonless madness she had committed in the half light of the silver stemmed trees clustering in shameful witness on every hand.

Suddenly the hot humiliation of it overwhelmed her, and she covered her face with her hands, standing, almost swaying, as wave on wave of incredulous shame seemed to sweep her from knee to brow. That phase passed after awhile. Out of it she emerged flushed, outwardly composed, into another phase, in full self possession once more, able to understand what had happened without the disproportion of emotional exaggeration. After all, she had only been kissed. Besides, she was a novice, which probably accounted in a measure for the unreasonable emotion coincident with a caress to which she was unaccustomed. Without looking up at him she found herself saying coolly enough to surprise herself: "I never supposed I was capable of that. It appears that I am. I haven't anything to say for myself except that I feel fearfully humiliated. Don't say anything now. I do not blame you; truly I do not. It was contemptible of me—to do it—wearing this"— She stretched out her slender left hand, not looking at him. "It was contemptible!" She slowly raised her eyes, summoning all her courage to face him.

But he only saw in the pink confusion of her lovely face the dawning challenge of a coquette saluting her adversary in gay acknowledgment of his fleeting moment of success. And as his face fell, then hardened into brightness, instantly she divined how he rated her and in a flash realized her weapons and her security and that the control of the situation was hers, not in the control of this irresolute young man who stood so silently considering her. Strange that she should be ashamed of her own innocence, willing that he believe her accomplished in such arts, enchanted that he no longer perhaps suspected genuine emotion in the swift, confused sweetness of her first kiss.

"Why do you take it so seriously?" she said, laughing and studying him, certain now of herself in this new disguise.

"Do you take it lightly?" he asked, striving to smile.

"I? As I must, you know. You don't expect to marry me, do you, Mr. Siward?"

"I"— He choked up at that grimly for awhile.

Walking slowly forward together she fell into step frankly beside him, near him—too near. "Try to be sensible," she was saying gayly. "I like you so much, and it would be horrid to have you mope, you know. And, besides, even if I cared for you there are reasons, you know—reasons for any girl to marry the man I am going to marry. So, you see, I could not marry you even if I"—her voice was inclined to tremble, but she controlled it; would she never learn her role?—"even if I loved you."

Then her tongue stumbled and was silent, and they walked on side by side through the fading splendor of the year, exchanging no further speech.

Toward sunset their guide hailed them, standing high among the rocks; a silhouette against the sky. And beyond him they saw the poles crowned with the huge nests of the fishhawks, marking the last rendezvous at Osprey Ledge.

COST $4,281 DURING YEAR.

Arrangements Being Made to Lengthen Course Nearly 500 Yards, Making Total 5,800 Yards.

An extended and comprehensive report has been submitted to the Plainfield Country Club by its green committee, of which Leighton Calkins is the chairman, showing that during the year a great deal has been accomplished in improving the course, which included the construction of the new eighth green and the rebuilding of tees. The new green was constructed at a cost of $211.65 and the total cost of reconstructing the tees was $382.55.

The supported trap on the ninth hole was modelled after certain famous hazards abroad: One on the ninth hole at Sandwich, known as the "Corset," from the appearance presented by a formidable array of railroad ties on end; two at North Berwick, on holes known as "Perfection" and "Redan," and regarded as two of the best holes in the world; one on the "Cardinal," a famous hole at Prestwick, and one on the fourteenth hole at Muirfield. In this country there are two such traps at Garden City, on the first and twelfth holes.

In the matter of up-keep, the report states that two important changes were made during the year, play to begin at the seventh hole and the first hole to become the thirteenth. In the judgment of the committee the change was a great success. The report further states that a year ago the green committee mapped out a plan to lengthen the links nearly 500 yards, thus giving a total playing distance of over 5,800 yards, without buying any additional land. The plan contemplates throwing the present thirteenth and fourteenth holes into one, the present fourteenth green becoming the green for the thirteenth hole. It will make the thirteenth hole about 565 yards long. The new fourteenth hole will be about 480 yards long, having its tee close to Rahway road at the extreme northerly boundary of the club property, the line of play being back towards the clubhouse, crossing the fair green of the present fifteenth hole about midway between tee and green. The fourteenth green will be between the present fourteenth tee and seventeenth green. The new fifteenth hole will be about 300 yards long. The tee will be adjacent to the fair green of the seventeenth hole, on the top of the hill, through the woods, to the present fifteenth green which will remain as it is.

The work remaining to be done includes blowing out the stumps, which will be done this winter; and grading about 100 yards of new fair green for the thirteenth hole, and about 150 yards of new fair green for each of the new fourteenth and fifteenth holes. Three small swamps will be filled in and two new tees built. The sod on the present thirteenth green will be shifted to the new fourteenth green. The estimated expense is $750. It is suggested that if an extra appropriation could be made, the work could be completed next spring and the new holes opened for play in the fall. The greens have been sanded down for the winter. Two tons of Canadian wood ashes have been purchased for use on the course. There has also been ordered a few hundred pounds of Carter's Worm Killer and Fertilizer. The committee acknowledges advice received from Walter J. Travis.

The financial statement of the committee shows that the appropriation for the year, January 15, 1907-January 15, 1908, was $4,300, was disbursed for labor $2,783.00, which together with other expenditures, including mowers, rollers, grass seed, repairs, tools, carpenter work, surveying, printing, stationery, postage, railroad ties, miscellaneous charges, make a total disbursement of $4,281.84, leaving an unexpended balance of $18.16.

Other members of the committee besides Mr. Calkins are George F. Schoonmaker, Rufus S. Rowland and J. Albert Lane.

Playful Dog Bites Owner.

While playing with his pet bulldog, "Colonel," at his home a few days ago, "Allie" Wilson, of Grove street, was severely bitten by the animal. In a spirit of fun, the dog snapped at him and its teeth closed about his left eyelid, inflicting a bad wound. It was dressed by Dr. Dundon and no serious results are anticipated.

W. H. Combs, of Linden avenue, has been detained at home by illness for the past week.

FORESTERS INSTALL THEIR NEW OFFICERS

Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order Foresters, at its meeting last night, initiated one candidate for membership. District Deputy Charles J. McCarthy, assisted by Past Chief Rangers Louis Feiring and James M. Smith, as high marshal and conductor, installed the following officers-elect:

Past chief ranger, James T. McCarty; chief ranger, Henry Hansen; vice ranger, Frederic D. Wilbee; financial secretary, Frederick Breem; recording secretary, James Patterson; treasurer, Edward J. McCue; orator, Joseph E. Kelley; senior woodward, Alfred Gidgeon; junior woodward, John F. Casey, Jr.; senior beadle, William Skinner; junior beadle, Thomas Fitzgerald.

After the installation ceremony a social hour was spent with addresses from the newly-elected officers, songs and piano solos by several members and a smoker. The court starts the new year with 416 members and a substantial balance in the treasury.

ENDORSE C. A. SWIFT FOR PROSECUTORSHIP

Judge C. Addison Swift was endorsed for the position of county prosecutor at the first meeting of the Elizabeth City Republican Committee for this year, held last night. The name of John J. English was also presented for endorsement, but he received but two of the eleven votes and his candidacy with withdrawn.

There was quite a stir over the presentation of the name of J. D. Eldridge, of Elizabeth, for endorsement of the position of clerk to the Assembly committee on municipal corporations. It gave rise to the belief that a Union county member of the Assembly would be named as chairman of that committee. Later it was learned that John R. Moxon would probably be chosen. This member offered considerable objection to the endorsement of Mr. Eldridge until it was known whether he was qualified for the position of clerk. It was stated that he was qualified and the endorsement was made without opposition.

Another endorsement by the committee was that of Joseph Cahill, of Elizabeth, for the position of doorkeeper in the Assembly. No opposition was offered.

This being the first meeting of the committee this year, organization was effected by the election of James White as chairman, George J. Stewart as vice-president, Edward Bauer as secretary, and W. B. Parrot as treasurer.

An Address by Dr. Newell.

Rev. Dr. William W. Newell, of Chicago, a brother to Rev. G. Kenney Newell, former pastor of Hope chapel, will give an illustrated lecture in the Congregational church tomorrow night. His subject will be "The Modern Heroism," and sixty colored stereopticon views will be shown of life in the Mississippi Valley, the great iron ore region of Minnesota, the handling of the ore, the shippins, and the great South Chicago plant where it is turned into steel. He will also give views of Porto Rico and the sod house region of Oklahoma where he drove 125 miles among the sod homes to acquaint himself with the work of the Congregational church.

Burglars Frightened Away.

T. B. Aldrich, who lives on Sherman avenue, below Grant, reported to the police today that burglars had made an attempt to force open the front door of his home, Thursday night. Chief Kiely detailed Detective-Sergeant Flynn to investigate and the latter found that marks had been made about the lock as if a jimmy had been used. The family did not hear any noise through the night and it is believed the men were frightened away.

One of Receiving Party.

At a tea given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Charles Lyman Case, of 86th street, New York, to introduce into society her daughter, Miss Clara Case, Miss Helen Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Irving Brown, of Central avenue, was one of the receiving party.

Organ Recital Numbers.

These organ numbers will be rendered at the recital to be given at Grace church tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock by William E. MacClymont, organist and choirmaster: Overture, "William Tell," Rossini; "Cantilena," Huhn; offertory, No. 6, Wily.

A Lay-off at Pond's.

A lay-off of thirty men was made at the Pond Tool Works last night. It was made necessary by a slackness of orders but a betterment of conditions is looked for within a short time and it is thought the men will not be out long.

NEW BOROUGH OFFICES?

Council Talks Over Plans for Offices of Mayor, Tax Collector and Clerk.

MAY BUILD NEAR FIRE HOUSE.

Councilman Smith Suggests Scheme For New Building—May Decide To Rent Offices at 90 Somerset Street.

Discussion of a place for an office for Borough Clerk Fred Martin and Mayor Samuel Townsend occupied considerable time at the adjourned meeting of the North lainfield Common Council held last night and this matter, which has been taken in charge by the Mayor, will be definitely settled at the next meeting of the Council. One of the prime reasons for securing Fred Martin as borough clerk was that he might be centrally located in the borough, and the Mayor referred to the convenience of the present location of the borough official at present.

The reason for a change in office is that the present office of the borough tax collector is too small even for the business of Mr. Brown as collector, and would be entirely inadequate as a joint office for borough clerk and tax collector, as the plan suggested last night endorses. The borough clerk's safe, moved yesterday from the office of former Borough Clerk Frank Rowley, could not be accommodated in Brown's office, and has been temporarily set in the rear of the main floor of fire headquarters.

There are two plans for a joint offices of Mayor, borough clerk and tax collector. The one calls for the borough's rental of the store at 90 Somerset street and the removal of the officers there, and the other, suggested by Councilman Smith, endorses the erection of a single story building on the lot adjoining the North Plainfield fire headquarters and the installation of the public offices there. The first plan is endorsed by Borough Tax Collector George F. Brown, who is opposed to such a change in location as Councilman Smith's plan would demand and favors the occupancy of the building in the same block as his present office. The store at 90 Somerset street is owned by Congressman J. J. Gill, of Steubenville, Ohio, who is also owner of the present office of the tax collector. It is at present occupied by an Italian firm of wholesale fruiterers and is used as a ripening place for bananas. The Italian rents the building from month to month, and it is thought that the borough could secure the place within a short time. Mayor Townsend, in speaking of this site for the new offices, said that the building is at present in poor condition and would involve the borough in considerable expense before it could be put in shape for the offices. The store is inadequately heated, needs new flooring and entire interior renovation. The additional expense to the borough in the matter of rent would also be doubtless increased, and in connection with the necessary repairs, it is understood that the owner will not make any of the improvements to secure rental.

Councilman Smith's plan, urging the erection of a building on the lot on Somerset street adjourning the fire house, was also discussed at length by the Council. He said that for about $1,500 a one-story building, uniform in architecture with the fire house, could be erected for both the public offices. He suggested that heating pipes could be extended from the fire house and pointed out that the borough could in the end save money, because of the fact that the rental now being paid for Mr. Brown, would be avoided if the borough erected and owned the building. Mr. Brown, the tax collector, is unwilling to endorse this scheme, claiming that the change in location would effect his insurance and real estate business. He claims that his present office is at the vortex of the business district of "The Great White Way" in North Plainfield and feels that the fartherest he should move would be to the store at No. 90 Somerset street. Other members of the Council spoke against Mr. Smith's plan on the grounds that the building planned would spoil the architectural effect of the fire house.

In speaking of the matter in general at the conclusion of the discussion, Mayor Townsend said that the Council should bear in mind the matter of expense to be avoided by either change in coming to any decision of the matter. Through Mr. Brown, he will secure rental terms and provisions for repair from Congressman Gill, and will have a report to make on the matter at the next meeting of the Council.

Grocery Bargains.

The stock of groceries of F. W. Dunn is now being sold at bargain prices to close out the business by order of J. F. MacDonald, assignee. ***

FOR IMPROVEMENTS AT BOROUGH HEADQUARTERS

The report of Councilman Edward Smith, of the fire, water and lights committee of the North Plainfield Common Council, who, with Mayor Samuel Townsend, has been busy since the last meeting with an inspection of the plumbing and sanitation of the North Plainfield fire house, was presented at the session of the borough fathers last night. The inspection, conducted with the borough Board of Health officer, showed that three vents were needed to carry off sewer gases and that a new cesspool was needed outside. These recommendations were presented in the formal report last night.

It was decided that inasmuch as the building was used for sleeping quarters by the firemen, action along the lines suggested by the report ought to be taken at once. Councilman Smith had secured bids for the work and these were presented to the councilmen, and on his resolution, endorsed by the Mayor, the contracts for the work were awarded. C. W. Krausse secured the contract for installing the three vents by his bid of $52, and W. C. Smith's bir of $64 secured the contract for the construction of the cesspool. Work will be commenced at once.

Speaking of the work recently started on the repair of the fire bell tower, Mayor Townsend said that the structure had been scraped preparatory to re-painting and new braces had been installed to replace those rusted through. On motion of Councilman Smith, it was voted to receive bids for the repainting of the tower and to award the contract to the lowest bidder, if the cost does not exceed $70. The award will be made by the chairman of the fire, water and light committee, and the work will be pushed through as rapidly as possible.

A petition by John Morton to erect a two-story frame dwelling house on the lot at 96 Pearl street was granted and a big budget of bills, carried over from the regular meeting, were voted paid. Councilman Nichols was the only member of the council absent, and the new borough clerk, Fred Martin, officiated for the first time. On motions by Councilman McGee, the clerk was authorized to borrow a total of $6,000 for special school tax payment, to pay out $200 for rent of office to the borough tax collector, and to renew his surety bond of $10,000 as tax collector. Mr. McGee was also authorized to secure a bond of $500 from the borough clerk.

COOPER A CANDIDATE TO SUCCEED BATEMAN

Charles H. Bateman, of Somerville, having declined the appointment of journal clerk of the House, State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, as chairman, has called a meeting of the Somerset county Republican committee to make a recommendation for filling the vacancy, and the session will be held at Somerville this afternoon for that purpose.

John C. Cooper, of Warren township, is an avowed candidate for the place. He is a brother of former Sheriff Edward E. Cooper. Mr. Cooper has been a township committeeman for many years and has been an active political worker.

NETHERWOOD WANTS PROTECTION FROM FIRE.

The residents of the East End of the city, including the Netherwood section, are busily engaged in circulating a petition for a new fire house to be located in that part of the city. The action has the sympathy and support of Councilman Robert E. Hall, who will do all in his power to secure the improvement for the great protection of the city from fire.

The question has been the subject of Chief Doan'e report during the past few years. Residents of that part of the city now believe the time is right to make a determined stand for the improvement and they intend to present a strong petition to the Common Council at an early date.

Indoor Track Meet Tonight.

The Y. M. C. A. gym team will meet the athletes from the Orange association in an indoor track meet at the local association gymnasium tonight. The events include the standing broad jump, three standing broad jumps, running high jump, 12-pound shot put, 220-yard potato race, fence vault, and 15-yard dash. The entries are limited to three members from each association in each event.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Leivers, of Grove street, are parents of a ten pound son born to them on Wednesday.

M. O. ENGINEERING WORK

Commitee Presents its Report at Meeting of City Water Commission.

RAPID PROGRESS IS MADE.

Several Technical Points to Be Solved By Law Committee—Getting Plans in Shape.

The first report of importance from the engineering committee was received at a meeting of the Water Investigation Commission, last night, and if there were doubts in the minds of other members as to the progress of the work, it was dispelled, for this committee, of which J. O. Osgood is the chairman, presented much valuable data and statistics on the question of water supply in Plainfield and vicinity.

Certain parts of the engineering committee's report were referred to a special committee, comprising Newton B. Smalley, City Engineer A. J. Gavett and Health Officer Leon R. Thurlow, who will submit the result of their findings later.

All the legal questions were referred to the legal committee, of which Councilman W. S. Tyler is the chairman, and it was also learned that this committee has lots of work to do before it can present its complete report. Many technical points have arisen which must be settled before the final statement can be made. It was decided not to make a final report to the Common Council until all the sub-committees finish their work and the results will be incorporated in the general compilation of facts and recommendations by the commission. All the members were present last night and it was agreed that great progress had been made in reaching a conclusion as to whether the city should establish a municipal water plant or continue to buy water from the Plainfield-Union Water Company.

The engineering committee presented maps, showing the source of the present water supply and where it is sent, together with figures detailing the quantity of water used in the city and borough, as well as by the various towns between here and Elizabeth, as well as a table of statistics showing the water supply each year from the time the present plant was established to date and many other facts all of much value. The committee has been aided considerably by officials of the Plainfield-Union Water Company in obtaining needed data, and an otherwise difficult task has been made comparatively easy in this respect.

The commission feel much encouraged with the progress thus far made and feels that when the complete report is presented the people of Plainfield will be in possession of facts which will tend to settle for many years to come the important question of local water supply.

PRIVATE EXHIBITION OF BRONZE FOUNTAINS.

It will be a matter of interest as well as an occasion of surprise to many lovers of the beautiful in metal work, that there is in this city a place where bronze is wrought in the many forms in which this metal is employed; such as memorial tablets, railings, mausoleum doors and the like. At 719 East Seventh street an unpretentious frame building is the home of the Hinman bronze works, where skilled workmen, proficient in the various branches of the crafe, have been at work upon pieces that would bring credit to larger ateliers in cities of metropolitan size.

The proprietor, Mr. Hinman, will on the afternoons and evenings of January 13 and 14, a private exhibition of two notable fountain pieces, together with the sketch models and drawings relating to them. Interest attaches to these by their having been permiated designs of a competition in which many well known architects participated. These two fountains are to occupy prominent city sites, one in New York and the other in Omaha, Nebraska.

Special Sunday Night Services.

Commencing tomorrow night Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring will give the first of a series of five special sermons on Sunday evenings. The sermons are announced by Dr. Herring as a study of why people believe that Jesus is the great need of the world. The subject tomorrow night will be: "Jesus and Buddhism," and the succeeding ones are as follows: "Jesus and Hinduism," "Jesus and Judaism," and "Jesus and Christianity."

Musical Program Will Be Given.

In connection with the lecture on "Literature and Life," to be given before the Men's Club of the First Baptist church, Monday night, by Prof. Louis Bevier, Jr., of Rutgers College, there will be a musical program under the direction of George H. Smith, tenor soloist of the church choir.

VETERAN MERCHANT RETIRES FROM BUSINESS

Uzal B. Crane, one of the best known merchants in the city, having conducted a hat and men's furnishing goods' business here for thirty-two years, continuously, retires to-day, having sold his business on West Front street to George Finger, who for some time has occupied half of the store in conducting a shoe business. Mr. Crane owns considerable real estate in the city and he will devote his time to looking after his properties and making improvements.

Mr. Crane started in the hat business on West Front street, where Sigmund Frucht is now located, on April 1, 1876, and has been actively engaged as a merchant ever since. For the most of the time he has been located on Front street, although for a few years his store was situated on Park avenue, where Mr. Silbert, the jeweler, is now doing business. Fifteen years ago he moved to his present place of business and remained there continuously. Mr. Finger is one of the younger merchants of the city who has had considerable success. He has acquired several properties in the business section and has a well established shoe trade, to which he has now added men's furnishings.

GEN. D. F. COLLINS WILL REVIEW 2ND REGIMENT

Brigadier-General Dennis F. Collins, commander of the Second Brigade of the National Guard of New Jersey, has accepted the invitation of officers of the Second regiment to attend a review of the regiment to be given in his honor, the evening of Tuesday, January 28, in the Trenton armory.

This will be the first big military social event of teh present year and is of exceptional interest for the reason that General Collins was until a short time ago colonel of the Second Regiment.

The usual military program for review occasions will be arranged for and the drills will probably be followed by a dance, reception and luncheon. Details of the arrangements will be announced later.

Rev. D. W. Cannon Accepts Call.

The Ebenezer Baptist church, Filmore avenue and East Third street, has extended a call to Rev. David Wadsworth Cannon, a student in Princeton Theological Seminary, and he has accepted the same. He will preach tomorrow morning and evening for the first. Mr. Cannon was born at Concord, N. C., and received his early education in the public schools at that place. He then completed the course of study at Biddle University, Charlotte, N. C., and Lincoln University, Chester County, Pa., making further preparation for the work of the ministry at Princeton.

Putting Sidewalks to Grade.

City Engineer A. J. Gavett has undertaken the work of raising the sidewalks on West End avenue to conform to the new grade of that thoroughfare as established by him last year and when completed the improvement will be an excellent one. Much filling in is being done in front of the vacant properties approaching the bridge and sidewalks will soon be laid there. The change in the grade of the street, it is hoped, will prevent the flooding of the walks during heavy rains.

Boys' Department Outings.

Fourteen members of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. are in New York city today on a sightseeing trip, in charge of Secretary Kenneth Robbie, of the association. The party will visit the New York Stock Exchange, Ellis Island immigrants' office, and the Brooklyn Navy Yard. Boys' Secretary L. A. Soule, with seven other members of the association, are spending the day skating on Crystal Lake. The party took food with them and cooked their dinner in the woods.

Martine's Engagements.

James E. Martine has accepted an invitation from Mayor Kenney to speak at the annual banquet of the East Newark Board of Trade on Wednesday night, January 29. His subject will be "Our Country." On Sunday, February 2, he will meet Mr. Bryan at Camden, where the Nebraskan is booked to address the Camden Y. M. C. A. in the afternooon. The "farmer orator" will act as his escort for the rest of that week.

Will Engage Supplies.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, former editor of The Sabbath Recorder, occupied the pulpit at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, this morning. The supply committee of the church has decided that until Rev. Edward B. Shaw assumes the pastorate to fill the pulpit with supplies instead of having one minister serve in this capacity.

FIREMEN'S PAY SCALE

Councilmanic Committee Agrees on Ten Per Cent. Increase for Men.

THE CHIEF IS NOT INCLUDED.

Captain to Get $1,020 While Assistant Chief Will Receive $1,080—What Others Will Get.

Although the scale is subject to change at another conference to be held on Friday night, the Councilmanic fire committee has agreed upon a ten per cent. increase in wages for men in the fire department. The chief is not included in the raise as already told in this paper. This is because Mr. Doane draws $600 as building inspector in addition to his salary of $1,100 as fire chief.

Neither Mayor Fisk nor any member of the fire committee would discuss the subject today but it was learned on good authority that the increase contemplated will be approximately ten per cent. This is about equal to the recent raise given the members of the police department.

By the proposed scale the assistant chief of the fire department will receive approximately $90 a month or $1,080 a year. The captain will get $85 a month or $1,020 a year. The pay for the general men will range from $780 to $960 a year. In other words, their pay per month will range according to length of service at these figures, $55, $66, $71.50 and $80.

At the meeting of the committee to be held on Friday night a proposed ordinance will be drafted. The measure will be presented at the next regular meeting of the Common Council.

REFORMED CHURCH STARTS CAMPAIGN

A new church society has just been organized in the Dutch Reformed Church, its object being the extension of that Church throughout New York and the metropolitan district. Its title is the Reformed Church Extension Society of New York and Vicinity. The Rev. Thomas H. Mackenzie, of Flushing, is president; Charles A. Runk, of New York, is vice president, and Robert H. Robinson, of New York, is secretary and treasurer.

There has been a growing feeling among the ministers and laymen of the Reformed Church that this body, the first to be established on Manhattan Island, has not been doing its full duty in extension work in recent years. As a result of this feeling a mass meeting of men was held a few weeks ago. The result has been the organization of the Church Extension Society, which already has committees studying the outlying districts of The Bronx, Queens, Brooklyn and New Jersey to determine where missions should be established.

The new society is limited to thirty members, half ministers and half laymen. Of this number twelve are to be elected by the society itself and the eighteen others by the nine local church bodies of the district.

"50 MILES FROM BOSTON" HERE ON TUESDAY NIGHT.

Edna Wallace Hopper, in the latest Cohen success, "Fifty Miles from Boston," will make her first appearance at the New Plainfield theatre on Tuesday night. Despite the fact that Manager William Counihan announces that the production is one of his finest bookings for the season at the local play house there are plenty of seats yet unsold and theatre-goers can get choice seats at the box office. On Monday it is expected there will be a great rush for tickets.

New York critics say that "Fifty Miles from Boston" even surpasses the other great Cohen success, "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," in which Fay Templeton and Victor Moore, who is now starring in "The Talk of New York" made such a decided hit. It is expected that the "S. R. O." sign will be seen in front of the local playhouse on Tuesday night.

Collins for Chairman.

The Union County Democratic committee will organize for the year at the meeting to be held Monday night in the headquarters, 78 Broad street, Elizabeth, and plans will be laid for the work to be done by the county forces in 1908. As the committeemen are unanimously in favor of General D. F. Collins to succeed himself he will remain at the head of the Union Democrats and no hitch will be possible in organizing.

LITERARY

As to Corporations.

The January Atlantic is introduced by Bliss Perry's editorial entitled "Turning the New Leaves," which fairly launches the magazine on its fifty-first year. Among the many noteworthy stories, essays, and poems in this number the first installment of Edith Wharton's "Second Motor Flight through France" has a prominent position. "Justice to the Corporations" is a spirited reply to the recent merciless attacks against these "monsters of sin." The writer, Henry Lee Higginson, is a well-known financier, and speaks from long experience.

Newspaper Bulk.

Whatever the present opinion of publishers may be concerning the necessity or wisdom of a great number of pages per issue, thoughtful and intelligent persons generally find the bulk of modern publications, especially of Sunday newspapers, a source of continual annoyance. The huge comic picture supplements are often so puerile that they induce a sense of melancholy; yet merely to divert thoughtless men and women for a brief Sunday morning hour with impossible and extravagant pictures printed in loud colors, thousands of stately spruce and hemlock trees upon the northern hills, which have raised their graceful branches to the sunshine and rain of many changing seasons, have lived,—in vain.—From "The Newspaper and the Forest," by W. S. Rossiter, in the American Review of Reviews for January.

What's in McClure's?

McClure's has gone up in quality as well as in price. "The Needs of Our Navy," by Henry Reuterdahl, gives some staggering facts about our battleships, and our preparation for war. "Great American Fortunes," by Burton J. Hendrick, sums up the history of the Metropolitan Street Railway and its effects on the public. "One Man and His Town," by Marion H. Carter, is an account of a man who practically grew a town and gives some new and amusing first-hand anecdotes of the greatest American. There is a discussion of the relation of Hypnotism to crime and disease by Professor Munsterberg.

Its 43rd Volume.

The January number of Scribner's Magazine begins its 43rd volume with a remarkable list of contributors, and initiates several of the most important features of the year. Theodore Roosevelt describes his recent bear hunt "In the Louisiana Canebrakes." There is a direct and intimate quality in this narrative which makes very real the native hunters, Ben Lilley, Holt Collier and the rest, with their packs of hounds. In addition, there is the final hunt with its successful ending in the killing of the bear, and after that some animal stories told around the camp-fire. The whole is illustrated with abundant photographs.

In the Red Book.

With a timeliness quite extraordinary, Edwin L. Sabin leads the fiction in The Red Book Magazine for January with a story entitled "Love of Women," which has to do with war between Japan and the United States. It is an aerial war and the description of a battle in the clouds may be more prophetic than fictional, after all. Especially noteworthy, among the wealth of interesting fiction in the same issue, are the stories "The Kaiser of Little Germany" by Robert McWilliams, and "The Honor of the Mitcheltrees" by William Hamilton Osborne. The former is a story of state politics and the part played in them by "a recht honest man;" and the latter is concerned with a son's successful effort to re-establish his father.

Scientific Subjects.

The Popular Science Monthly for January contains the following articles: "The Institute of France and other Learned Scientific Societies," by Dr. Edward F. Williams; "The Grayling at Caribou Crossing," by President David Starr Jordan; "What is Matter?" by Professor S. E. Mezes; "Farm Tenancy, a Problem in American Agriculture," by Professor Homer C. Price; "Some Recent Transmutations," by Professor Charles Baskerville; "The Rule of the Road," by Dr. George M. Gould; "Gold," by H. F. Wagennen; "How shall we improve our Race?" by Dr. Gustave Michaud; "A Trip around Ireland," by L. P. Gratacap; "The Convocation Week Meeting at Chicago;" "A Statue of Joseph Leidy;" "Scientific Items."

Vivisection Case Soon Coming Up.

New Brunswick, Jan. 11.—The grand jury, it is expected, will take up soon the charges against Dr. E. Irving Cronk and Dr. H. H. Janeway of practising vivisection upon a dog in a painful way. Dr. Cronk was re-elected physician January 1. The charges were preferred against the physicians largely through the effort of Mrs. Booraem, wife of Circuit Court Judge Theo. B. Booraem. Mrs. Booraem asserts that Mrs. Alberta Lumsden, a trained nurse, and several other women heard a dog howling with pain, while the physicians were operating upon it.

Consumptive Lives Alone in Woods.

New Brunswick, Jan. 11.—Somewhere in the woods in this vicinity there is camping out a young man who is suffering from tuberculosis. Until recently he had been a patient at the consumptives' home at the city's poor farm. The city physician has reported his case to the Board of Health, and says he gave the man one of the hospital tents and medicines, so that he could satisfy his desire to live a sort of Robinson Crusoe existence. He said that the man had received sufficient instruction that he will know how to care for himself.

Miss Elizabeth Smith-Miller and Colonel Thomas Wentworth Higginson are now the only survivors of the eighty-nine persons who signed the call for the first national woman's rights convention, which was held in Worcester, Mass., in 1850.

PHILLIPSBURG STILL IN STATE OF EXCITEMENT.

Phillipsburg, Jan. 11.—Phillipsburg is still in state of excitement owing to the silk workers' strike at the Standard Silk Company. There has been no serious outbreak from the demonstrations of the labor element since the roit of Wednesday night, but Sheriff Andrew S. Merrick, who took charge of the situation Thursday afternoon, has found it necessary to add many deputies to cope with the hundreds who assemble at railroad stations looking for imported labor and at the silk mills at quitting time.

The strikers and sympathizers at the main entrance of the Standard Mill Thursday night, when the whistle blew for the quitting hour, numbered 2,000, and the sheriff and detective force were unable to prevent a blockade in the avenue leading to the mills. Jeers came from the people as the few strike breakers, which, the company has succeeded in employing were marched to the restaurant department of the works, between the two lines of police and special detectives.

The sheriff read the riot act to the crowd at the entrance of the mill yesterday and declared that if a repetition of the scenes of Thursday night occurred force would be used by his deputies to enforce the law.

Recorder Lazarus Wroth.

Bayonne, Jan. 11.—Recorder Hyman Lazarus, in court here yesterday, told Ray S. Feinberg, a lawyer, that he was not telling the truth, when he denied a certain statement which he was represented as having made. Feinberg was defending two men accused of horse stealing, and during his plea declared that he understood that the police were unusually anxious to convict the men, although he did not mention any reasons. This remark riled the recorder, who told Feinberg that he was "the most unprofessional man" that had ever been in the courtroom. Feinberg made some retort which brought from the court the remark that he understood that the lawyer had said that he (Lazarus), too, was interested in having the men convicted. This Feinberg denied, and when Court Clerk Vrabel said that he had heard him say it, the court told Feinberg that he was untruthful. There has been trouble for some time between Lazarus and Feinberg, and as Lazarus' term of office as recorder is near an end, Feinberg has been making efforts to have Hugh H. Mara succeed him. This has caused a rupture between the men, yesterday's incident being one of the sequels of it.

Workman's Scalp Badly Torn.

While George Krouse, of Rahway, was working over a drill in the factory of the Hall Signal Company, at Garwood, yesterday, the spindle caught in his hair and bared his scalp from his forehead nearly to the base of the skull. Despite his injury Krouse continued at his work, and it was with difficulty that some of the employes induced him to have his injuries dressed. Krouse has had several accidents in which he was painfully injured. Last summer two fingers were cut off by a lathe in the Aeolian factory. He stuck at his work, however, until the closing hour, when he went to a doctor and had his wounds dressed. He returned to work the next day.

$10,000 for Reporter's wife.

Mrs. Louise C. Aumack, the wealthy widow of Toms River, who was buried on Wednesday, has, by the provisions of her will, bequeathed to Mrs. Belle Drake, her sister, who is the wife of Edward K. Drake, a reporter on the Elizabeth Daily Journal, $10,000 and to her four daughters, all of whom live in Toms River, $10,000 each. The balance of her estate she gives to her brother, W. Scott Jackson, of Toms River, who was also selected as her executor. Mrs. Aumack during her lifetime gave in donations to the Toms River Presbyterian church, of which she was a lifelong member, in all about $6,000.

Says He Damaged Elevator.

Alfred Mercier, sixteen years old, of Ripley place, Elizabethport, was a prisoner yesterday in police court at Elizabeth on a charge of maliciously damaging the elevator of the J. R. Otterman Lithograph Company, on Third street, Elizabethport. Mercier was employed in the company's factory. James P. Bryan, its superintendent, who appeared in police court to press the charge, declared the damage to the elevator was not less than $500. Judge Mahon fixed bail at $800 and held Mercier in this sum to await the grand jury's action. Not having a bondsman, he was committed to the county jail.

Gets $5,000 for Husband's Death.

The jury in the suit for $10,000 brought against the Public Service Corporation by Mrs. Margaret E. Brink, of Elizabeth, for the death of her husband, came into court yesterday with a verdict of $5,000. Mrs. Brink's husband was killed on Frelinghuysen avenue, Newark, and she claims that the ice wagon which he was driving was struck by a car, the mishap causing his death. This was the second trial, the fist having resulted in a verdict for the same amount. The Public Service appealed the first, the Supreme Court then setting aside the verdict and ordering a new trial.

The Windsor Hotel, Cape May, was looted, Wednesday night, of about $300 worth of lead pipe and spigots.

POINTS FOR THE BUYERS

The Hotel Iroquois offers every convenience for either permanent or transient guests. The rates are moderate and will be furnished by Proprietor Leary upon request.

If you contemplate repairs to your present home or the building of another one, consult W. H. Kirch, of Duer street, the well known carpenter. He will furnish estimates upon application.

L. B. VanCamp, at Front and Somerset streets, handles rugs, carpets and matting and is prepared to show one of the largest lines in the city. He also makes and rents awnings and canopies.

One of the largest nursery stocks to be seen in the city is at Forrestel's Belleview avenue place. Orders can be placed now for spring deliveries of trees, plants or shrubbery. Telephone connection.

For the best of everything in the way of meats, fine Jersey poultry and provisions, place your orders with Frank Neidig, proprietor of the Lincoln market at Somerset and Race streets. He also handles oysters in season and strictly fresh seafood.

B. J. Schreiner, the Park avenue druggist, now has his brother, Robert Schreiner, associated with him in business and is prepared to care for his patronage better than ever before. As in past years, the prescription work at the pharmacy will be a feature.

Neuman Brothers have always maintained that quality is everything in selling groceries and to attain that end they exercise great care in all their buying. As a result they give their customers nothing but the best and in return they have enjoyed the confidence of the local people for many years. They carry everything in the line of staple and fancy goods and in addition make a specialty of fresh fruits and vegetables, new consignments reaching the store each day.

PLAN NEW WESTFIELD SCHOOL.

Board of Education Members Would Build $4,500 Structure—Set Date for Vote.

If the plans of the Westfield Board of Education are ratified by the voters, the town will have a new $45,000 schoolhouse, fully equipped, and adequate to meet the demands of the immediate present, at least, by the beginning of the new school year. A special meeting of the voters to decide the question has been called for Monday evening, January 27, and it is expected that favorable action will be taken.

The necessity for increased school accommodations is urgent, according to the report of the building committee which has the matter in charge. No addition has been made to the accommodations for seven years, and for the past three years the pupils have been crowded into buildings already taxed to their capacity. According to the State law the present enrollment, 1,128, is 169 in excess of the lawful number for the twenty-six rooms now supplied, and in eighteen of these rooms the limit is being exceeded. In order to relieve the congested conditions, it is pointed out that six rooms are needed before the fall of 1908.

$121,356,973 IN GIFTS

1907 the Most Generous Year of the Century According to Statistics.

RATE OF $254 PER MINUTE.

Rockefeller Takes the Lead, With Mrs. Sage Second—Other Liberal Givers in Plenty.

Giving more than as many thousands each day as are days in the twelve-month, 1907 has set a new high-water mark for the twentieth century's gifts to charitable causes. That daily figure (to speak exactly) is $365,536.06, which means over two and a half millions a week, or a "record" total for the completed year of $121,356,973.

The first of the eight years of the nineteen hundreds marked the ebb of the century's figures, with but $47,500,000. Nineteen-one jumped to $107,330,000, and that has stood at the head of charity's ladder till this present year of grace and generosity came, far to surpass it. The eight-figured totals of the five intervening years—none of them reaching the hundred million line—seem, today, almost inconsequential in the light of this latest-achieved proof of mankind's desire to put into tangible practice the spirit of good will and mutual helpfulness which rules this Christmas season.

Limitations of the Chronicle.

Impressive as is the year's great aggregate, it is necessarily imcomplete, much that is given passes with no public notice; even an estimate closely approximating perfect figures is out of the question. The journalistic statistician must rely upon the items published, from day to day, and must yet further define the limits of his work because of the uncertainty of publication in one part of the country of gifts of the smaller sort made in some other part. In the following lists $5,000 has been taken as the minimum to be considered, though multiplicity of small donations, so lost sight of, would raise the year's total by not less than $10,000,000. The $25 and $50 and $100 gifts to such a cause as the Chinese famine fund, to quote but a single instance, ran up in a fortnight into the hundreds of thousands.

Again, only individual givers are here taken account of; the generosities of cities, societies, and clubs, churches, and reform organizations—and no reader of the daily news will fail to realize how such figures as these we represent would climb toward the millions—have not been chronicled.

Finally (and "of course") no items are included save those which have looked to some public good.

The Old World's Part.

That only American givers are listed is as necessary as obvious. If is is not easy to gather accurate figures of the benefactions made here at home, even within the limits specified, it is far more difficult to compile trustworthy tables of similar philanthropies in the old world. It is but fair, in passing, however, to state that the "small" donations of England and the continent are not much less in the aggregate than those of America, while the record of the larger gifts is invariably a splendid one. Foreign benefactions in 1907 have probably fallen considerably short of the United States, but that they are not to be lost sight of is proved by ten characteristic items, as follows:

January—William Whiteley, to London charities, $5,000,000; June—D. E. Osiris, of Paris, to six charities, $5,000,000; April—G. Herring, London's hospital funds, $3,750,000; May—Basil McCrea, Belfast, educational ends, $1,250,000; February—Princess Mary of Saxe-Altenberg, $750,000; April—Baron Heyzu Herrnsheim, of Berlin, $750,000; June—Miss Perry, of Wolverhampton, educational, $750,000; July—A. D. Sasscon, to the poor of Brighton, $350,000; March—M. Hedensteff, to Moscow University, $250,000; May—Mrs. Peter Redpath, to McGill University, $150,000.

John D. Rockefeller, Premier.

That 1907 is a "record year" in its philanthropies is due directly to John D. Rockefeller. When in the second of the months he gave that $32,000,000 to the general education fund, he insured a first for it among its fellows—and incidentally wrote his own name highest of all on charity's roll of honor. Today he is to be thanked for something more than $63,553,000, given in all to various causes of the public good. Assuming him to have donated not less than another $10,000,000, of which only private records have been kept, he heads the long list of American benefactors.

Mr. Carnegie, with nine gifts during the twelvemonth, totalling $8,957,000, is still surpassed by three of the year's givers: Mr. Widener, of Philadelphia, has promised $10,000,000 for a municipal art gallery. Mr. Frick, of Pittsburg, has signed checks for $10,205,000, and Mrs. Russell Sage, in a score of most generous items, has built up her benevolent subscriptions to $12,830,000.

Woman's Share in the Work.

Woman, indeed, has borne a magnificent part in the work. More than a fifth of the whole sum given—$24,234,108—has come from her. The dozen fears have been:

Mrs. Russell Sage, of New York City, $13,830,000; Miss Anne T. Jeanes, of Philadelphia, $2,312,108; Mrs. C. R. Galland, of New Haven, Conn., $1,500,000; Mrs. H. A. Currier, of Manchester, N. H., $1,000,000; Miss E. D. Gibbes, of Newport, R. I., $750,000; Miss Kate McKnight, of Pittsburg, $500,000; Mrs. Sarah Ropes, of Salem, Mass., $500,000; Mrs. Laura Currier, of New York city, $292,000; Miss Helen Gould, of New York city, $265,000; Miss Florence Lyman, of Boston, Mass., $250,000; Mrs. Potter, of Boston, Mass., $180,000; Mrs. H. C. Durand, of Chicago, Ill., $175,000.

The compiled roster of these well-doers, as long as the year itself, and covering every State and Territory of the Nation, contains such widely known names as those of Mrs. John Hay, Mrs. Robert T. Lincoln, Mrs. Anne Weightman, Miss Helen Stokes and Miss Alice Longfellow.

The "Roll of Honor" of millionaire givers, in addition to the first four entered above, reads:

John D. Rockefeller, of New York city, $42,315,000; Henry C. Fricke, of Pittsburg, $10,205,000; P. A. B. Widener, of Philadelphia, $10,000,000; Andrew Carnegie, of New York city, $8,957,000; R. N. Carson, Norristown, Pa., $4,000,000; W. C. Andrews, of New York city, $1,500,000; Thomas R. Patton, of Philadelphia, $1,500,000; J. Pierpont Morgan, of New York city, $1,350,000; Bloodgood Cutter, of Little Neck, L. I., $1,000,000; John Porterfield, of Allegheny City, Pa., $1,000,000; Chas. M. Schwab, of Pittsburg, Pa., $1,000,000.

Hundred More in Plainfield in the Same Plight.

Tired all the time;
Weary and worn out night and day;
Back aches; side aches,
All on account of the kidneys.
Must help them at their work.

A Plainfield citizen shows you how:

Mrs. E. Derflinger, of 219 Mansion place, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Several weeks ago I began to have heavy dull pains in the top and back of my head. Backache continually clung to me and it seemed to me that my kidneys were weak and gradually breaking down. I also had a tired feeling, with a sort of languor or general depression. I saw Doans' Kidney Pills advertised, and as it was a case of 'any port in a storm,' I got a supply of this medicine at Randolph's pharmacy and before I had taken two boxes of it I found that my kidneys were acting stronger and better and the pains were leaving me. I continued with them and am now able to say that Doan's Kidney Pills have cured me,—at least I am not troubled any more and feel well and strong in every way."

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

All the peers of minstrelsy are with the Al. G. Field Greater Minstrels, Doc. Quigley, Comedian, with A. G. Fields' Minstrels at New Plainfield Theatre This Afternoon and Evening.

which come to the New Plainfield theatre this afternoon and tonight. The production this season is filled with novelties from beginning to end and is said to be the most original and best minstrel show ever presented by Manager Field. Banner houses are promised at both performances.

Al. G. Fields, Minstrels at the New Plainfield Theatre This Afternoon and Evening.

During the past summer season, Wilton Lackaye, who will appear at the New Plainfield theatre Monday night in "The Bondman," was spending his vacation at one of the Maine resorts. On the evening of his arrival he was seated at dinner next to the son of the proprietor of the hotel, one of the typical "open three months" kind. The son evidently wishing to make the actor feel at home, remarked: "Pretty good dinner, eh? We have a fine French chef." "Yes, indeed. It's a pity though he has such a Canadian accent," replied the actor who was far from enjoying his dinner. Not seeing the joke the son thought for a while and then said, "How did you guess it? He is a French Canadian."

The offering at the New Plainfield theatre next Tuesday night will be Edna Wallace Hopper in George M. Cohan's big success, "50 Miles from Boston." Miss Hopper is starring under the management of Cohan and Harris, who have given this dainty comedienne a fine supporting company headed by Laurence Wheat, George Parsons, Louise Rial, James C. Marlowe, Lores Grimm, Emma Janiver, James Bradbury, Hazel Lowry and other good players. Mr. Cohan has several new songs which have become popular wherever "50 Miles from Boston" has played. The most catchy are "Jack and Jill," "Harrigan," "Boys Who Fight the Flames," "My Small Town Gal," and "Waltz With Me." Miss Hopper appears in a role which is said to be entirely different from any other in which she has appeared. In "50 Miles from Boston," she appears as the shy little New England village postmistress in love with the "bad man" of the place. The part is said to give Miss Hopper good opportunities for real dramatic work. Mr. Cohan is very proud of this latest play and has embodied in it all the oddities found in a staid old New England town. There is said to be an excellent chorus of pretty girls who can sing and dance and wear good clothes.

It is surely a source of comfort to know that the sensation of delightful freshness is made a part of the guarantee given in connection with the announcements concerning the general excellence of the musical comedy, "Happy Hooligan's Trip Around the World," which will occupy the boards at the New Plainfield theatre next Thursday night. Unlike the familiar entertainments belonging to this class, "Happy Hooligan's Trip Around the World" is provided with a framework of substance upon which to train the necessary features of mirth and melody, and the story outlined is said to contain the highest proofs or originality.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS.

Former Councilman Elwood Griscom, of Salem, yesterday picked eight rosebuds from a bush in his yard.

Dr. Damon Pfeiffer, of Williamstown, is very ill with typhoid fever in the German Hospital, Philadelphia.

The new method of record-keeping in the Gloucester county clerk's office will necessitate the transcribing of some 25,000 names.

Charged with maintaining a speakeasy at Roebling, Augusta Lino was committed for trial by Justice of the Peace Peacock yesterday.

Besides keeping the poor during the past year, the Raritan Township Poor Farm, Hunterdon county, has netted the township $502.47.

William Connell was found just in time to save his life from asphyxiation by gas at Vineland Wednesday night. A main had burst.

The Cape May County Board of Freeholders will present a budget for the ensuing year of $4,000 less than that of last year, and has built a new road from Courthouse to Goshen, a distance of five miles, without bonding.

Frank Rueman, fourteen years old, of Wykoff, was taken to the General Hospital, Paterson, yesterday afternoon suffering from a badly torn left hand and fingers. While at work his hand was caught in the cogs of some machinery.

While descending the steps at the First Presbyterian church, Mrs. Sarah S. Shute, of Salem, caught the heel of her shoe in the rubber matting and fell to the bottom. Her right wrist was broken, her nose cut and her face badly bruised.

From a fracture of the skull received in a fall from the platform of the Pennsylvania Railroad station at Burlington three weeks ago, Harry Breidford died at the County Hospital Wednesday night. Coroner Bisbing has declared an inquest unnecessary.

Anton Grabofski, in the Camden police court yesterday, entered a plea of not guilty of murdering his brother-in-law, Michael Ziemniski, although he has made a complete confession of his crime. He was committed to await the action of the grand jury.

Dave O'Connor, the former pugilist, who was shot a week ago yesterday morning during the progress of a row in "Doc" O'Connor's saloon in Paterson, is able to be up and around St. Joseph's Hospital, and it was stated at that institution yesterday that he will be able to leave in a few days.

Camden's stray goats must go. Mayor Ellis has ordained that these creatures, which have for generations made meals off washings, newspapers and even an occasional streamer of crepe from a doorknob, shall pester the public no longer, and yesterday he appointed Frank Smith to see that his orders are obeyed.

For the first time in years not a teacher in the Atlantic City schools has been won from her place by matrimony, and the 156 instructors who started the school year in September are still on active duty. Experts in matrimonial lines declare that the financial flurry is responsible for the change from former conditions, when nearly a third of the teachers quit before the spring term.

Prosecutor Henry S. Scovel, of Camden, is taking a few days' rest in Virginia. During the year he has been in office Mr. Scovel has conducted five murder trials. It is his opinion that the innocent are entitled to trial as soon as possible and that nothing impresses the guilty so much as quick justice. As a result he has seldom been away a single day from the prosecutor's office, and court is held almost weekly.

Plainfield, N. J., January 11, 1908.

Mr. Roosevelt says that Mr. Taft will be the Republican nominee for the Presidency. Mr. Bryan says that Mr. Cannon will be. All of which is very good, but this sort of talk is not calculated to drive Mr. Hughes to the storm cellar.

Following the example of the illustrous ex-President, Mr. Stokes intends to embark in the insurance business when he becomes an ex-Governor. Men like these solve for themselves the question, "What shall we do with our retiring executives?"

St. Bartholomew's Episcopal church, New York, broke all American records last year according to the annual parochial report just issued by the rector, Rev. Dr. Leighton Parks. The total contributions for the year amounted to $313,000.00. The best of it all is that for every dollar of this amount spent on the congregation's worship expenses, six dollars were used elsewhere for the betterment of mankind. The parish employs 683 workers, 421 of whom receive not one penny for their labors. St. Bartholomew's, the richest parish in America, has 3,045 communicants.

STOKES TO BECOME INSURANCE MAGNATE

Governor Stokes is one of the leading spirits in the new People's National Fire Insurance Company, over whose organization in Philadelphia Thursday he presided.

Representatives of nearly all the 400 industrial, manufacturing and banking firms of Philadelphia and neighboring cities who have subscribed to the stock were in attendance. They authorized the organization committee to apply for a charter at once.

After J. Hector McNeal, who acted as secretary, had explained the laws governing the granting of charters by the States of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, the committee was authorized to use its discretion as to the State under which it would incorporate, although the preponderance of the meeting's sentiment favored Delaware as being the most advantageous.

The incorporators were authorized to take out a charter for $1,000,000 capital, with a surplus of a like amount. There will be 40,000 shares of stock of a par value of $50 per share, none of which shall be sold for less than par, the proceeds to be equally divided between capital and surplus accounts.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Mrs. M. D. Tomlinson will conduct the W. C. T. U. meeting tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, who has been suffering with a severe cold, is much improved and will preach at both services tomorrow.

On account of much illness in the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church, the monthly business meeting has been postponed until February, the date to be announced later.

"How Shall a Man Be Just With His Maker?" will be the subject of the discourse by Rev. A. E. Finn at the Park Avenue Baptist church, tomorrow night. This will be the second in the series of special discourses.

Bulldog Attacks Young Woman.

When Miss Stella Harrington, of Franklin street, Bloomfield, left home yesterday morning to go to New York a bulldog ran from a lot nearby and bit her on the right wrist. The woman who owns the dog, according to Miss Harrington, laughed at the "playfulness" of her pet.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

J. T. MacMURRAY, City Clerk.
Plainfield, N. J., January 6, 1908.

AN ORDINANCE

To Further Amend An Ordinance Entitled "An Ordinance to Create and Define the Duties of a Board of Police and a Police Force," Approved February 28th, 1882, As Amended.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That Section 3 of the ordinance to which this is an amendment, be further amended so as to read as follows:

Sec. 3. The Police Force shall consist of such number of regular and special policemen, each of whom shall be a resident and legally qualified voter of this city, as the Common Council shall from time to time deem necessary and by resolution order to be appointed. The said Police Force shall rank as follows: Chief of Police, Captain, Sergeant, Detective-Sergeant, Roundsmen, Patrolmen, Doorman.

The duties of the several members and officers of said Police Force shall be those prescribed by the laws of the State, the ordinance of the city and the rules and regulations that may from time to time be prescribed and established by resolution of the Common Council for the better government and discipline of the Police Department. The Patrolmen shall be divided into five (5) classes:

Class A—Fifth year of service and over.

Class B—Fourth year of service.
Class C—Third year of service.
Class D—Second year of service.
Class E—First year of service.

Provided, that the Common Council upon recommendation of the Police Board may advance a Patrolman from a lower to a higher class for especially good work or meritorious service, whether he shall have served his full time, specified above, or not.

That beginning with the first day of January, 1908, the salaries of the members of the force who are regular Policemen be and are hereby fixed at the following rates, that is to say:

Chief	$1,600	per annum
Captain	1,200	per annum
Sergeant	1,140	per annum
Detective-Sergeant	1,140	per annum
Roundsmen	1,080	per annum
Patrolmen:
Class A	$1,000	per annum
Class B	960	per annum
Class C	924	per annum
Class D	864	per annum
Class E	792	per annum
Doorman	720	per annum

The times from which the several dates of service in the police department of the city are to be calculated, are the dates at which the continuous service of said policemen, respectively, commenced, and said Sergeant, Detective-Sergeant, Roundsmen, Patrolmen and Doorman, respectively, shall be paid at said rates for the number of full days only of service actually performed by them respectively, in each month, except that they severally may, at the discretion of the Board of Police, be paid for any time during which they severally shall be disabled from the performance of duty by reason of physical injuries, provided that the Board shall be satisfied that such injuries were the direct result of personal violence inflicted upon them, respectively, in the performance of their respective duties; and hereafter, each of such officers and policemen shall provide, at his own expense all uniforms and other wearing apparel necessary for their use respectively, as from time to time required by the Board of Police in compliance with the rules of the Department.

The Union Building & Loan Association

as an investment is the safest and best for the wage earner or person of moderate means, yielding at all times larger returns than any saving institution. All the profits are divided annually among the shareholders. The funds of the association are loaned to its members on first mortgage, this makes the security the very best. There is no speculation whatever connected with the business of this association. Its directors are all local business men who personally look after all its affairs. The money as it is received is immediately invested. No money is kept laying idle, in this way the profits are constantly growing, so that a series will mature between ten and eleven years.

A New Series Will be Opened on

The Secretary will be at the office, 146 Park Avenue, at 6:30 p. m. and will gladly go over the matter with you.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The week of prayer will conclude with services at the various churches tomorrow. Tonight, Rev. George H. Gardner will preach on the topic "Groth" at the First Baptist church, New Market. Tomorrow morning Rev. Henry N. Jordan will speak at the First Baptist church; and in the afternoon Rev. Mr. Gardner will address a men's meeting to be held at the church. This service will be for men only, no one less than sixteen years of age being admitted. In the evening at 6:30, there will be a young people's rally at the church, proceeding the regular evening service. Rev. Henry N. Jordan will preach. The services of the week of prayer have been held every evening at the Baptist, Seventh-Day Baptist and local Methodist church, and much interest has been shown by the attendance of the various congregations.

With the cold snap has come fine skating on New Market pond and throngs of skaters were on the ice today, including several skating parties from Plainfield. John Thornton and Claude Penrose had their iceboat out and, although the wind was light, made some fast trips up and down the lake. The boat was built by the two young men in the fall and this was the second time of the season it had been used. With a heavier wind, the owners claim the boat is good for great speed.

Pomona officers for the coming year were installed today at the meeting of Pomona Grange at New Brunswick, attended by a large delegation of local grangers. The installation ceremonies were performed by Deputy State Master Arthur Perrine, of Hightstown. Grangers from all parts of the county attended the meeting.

The Holy Name Society of St. John's church will attend communion in a body at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning at the church.

There will be a celebration of the Holy Communion at Holy Innocents' church tomorrow at 8:30 o'clock.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Daniel T. Hendrickson, who has been detained at his home for several days with an attack of the grip, is improving and expects to return to his duties as principal of the school Monday.

Services tomorrow at the Baptist church will be held at the usual hours. Morning preaching, 10:45; B. Y. P. U. meeting, 7:15 p. m.; evening sermon at 8 o'clock.

The annual township report is being prepared, and will soon be ready for distribution among the taxpayers.

Rev. Mr. Dieterick will lead the weekly prayer meeting at the Methodist church tonight.

The change in the weather has made skating good again on the small ponds.

Field's minstrels is the attraction tonight at the New Plainfield Plainfield.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The services will be held in the Baptist church tomorrow as usual. Rev. C. W. F. Attlee will preach. The morning subject will be, "How Can Two Walk Together Except They Be Agreed?" The evening subject will be, "Nevertheless thou shall drive the Caananites out of the land."

The Christian Endeavor meeting will be held as usual, Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. The topic will be "The Centre of Life." The leader will be Miss Nellie B. Manning.

Frank Voorhees, who has been visiting his sister-in-law, Miss Emma Manning, on Brookside avenue, has just returned to his home in Asbury Park.

Fred Wilson, of Montclair, has been spending a few days with his friends, Mr. and Mrs. William Clawson, of Clinton avenue.

The South Plainfield auto transfer bus has not been running for the last few days because some part of its machinery is broken.

The dime social, which was held at the home of George Stover's for the benefit of the New Dover church, was a great success.

Mrs. Ayers, who has been staying with Mrs. Lewis Dunn during her illness, has just returned to her home in Metuchen.

Mrs. Ledden, of Brookside avenue, has just returned from a visit with friends at Roselle Park, N. J.

William Voorhees, of Brooklyn, is spending a few days at Chamberlain's Corner.

(Additional suburban news on page 2.)

CLOSED PORTALS.

The second degree was conferred upon one candidate at last night's meeting of Perseverance lodge, No. 74, K. of P. In the regular business session two applications for membership were received.

Mrs. Bartholomew Taylor, of Park avenue, was removed by ambulance to Muhlenberg Hospital, yesterday afternoon, for the purpose of undergoing an operation. It was performed by Dr. Pittis and today Mrs. Taylor was resting easily.

ST. MARY'S GIVES $140 TOWARDS PETER'S PENCE

St. Mary's congregation of Bayonne was the most generous contributor to the Peter's Pence collection, recently taken up in the Roman Catholic churches of the Newark diocese. According to returns made to Bishop John J. O'Connor, $10,240.50 was contributed.

St. Patrick's Cathedral has the distinction of heading the list in Newark, with a contribution of $354. St. Mary's, Plainfield, gave $140.

CHARGING DESERTION HE WANTS A DIVORCE

John Chidester, an employe of Johnson & Johnson, of New Brunswick, who during the past four or five years has been residing at Millstone, has instituted a suit for divorce from his wife, Fanny Chidester, who is supposed to be in New York city. He charges desertion.

The papers in the case have been filed by Woodbridge & March, representing the petitioner. They set forth that the couple were married in the City Hall, New York city, and that they lived together in Sussex county until October, 1901, when Mrs. Chidester left her husband and refused to return to him. The couple have no children.

While Mr. Chidester is well known at Millstone it was not generally supposed that he was a married man. He has boarded with various families at Millstone and so far as known always bore a good reputation.

STATE SURRENDERS ITS "PITCHER" PICTURE

The painting "Molly Pitcher at the Battle of Monmouth," which hung for many years in the office of the State Treasurer at Trenton, has been sent to Mrs. John H. Crosby, of Paterson, daughter and representative of the heirs of the late Senator Joseph T. Crowell, of Rahway, who was the real owner of the picture, generally supposed to be the property of the State.

George Werts, former Secretary of State, called the attention of Governor Stokes to the claim or the Crowell heirs recently when the Governor visited Paterson. The Governor started an investigation, which resulted in the claim being established.

The picture had been in the State House thirty years. It is the intention of Mrs. Crosby to sell it. "Mollie Pitcher's" grave is in the old graveyard at Carlisle, Pa.

First Wedding Anniversary.

In celebration of the first anniversary of their wedding, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Stuerwald, of East Second street, entertained a gathering of fifty friends at their home last night. Guests were present from New York, Newark, Long Island City and Elizabeth in addition to those from Plainfield. Informality reigned during the evening and vocal and instrumental selections and dancing added to the enjoyment. A supper was served at midnight.

Mrs. Nomer's Funeral.

With a large gathering of relatives and friends in attendance, the funeral of Mrs. H. C. Nomer was held at her late home on East Seventh street, yesterday afternoon. It was conducted by Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church. The quartette from the church rendered two selections. Burial was in Elmwood cemetery, New Brunswick, this morning.

S. S. Swackhamer to Speak.

S. S. Swackhamer will speak at the West End Tabernacle tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. There will also be special music. The Sunday-school and Men's Baraca Class will meet at 3 o'clock. The meetings for next week will include the prayer meeting Thursday night at 8 o'clock and the Junior Christian Endeavor Society service Friday afternoon at 3:45 o'clock.

Stricken With Paralysis.

Christopher Becker, of East Fourth street, aged about seventy-five years, was stricken with paralysis while walking on West Front street in front of Endress' market at noon today. He dropped to the pavement and was picked up by Patrolman John Kelley, who afterward had him removed to Muhlenberg Hospital. His condition is considered critical.

Ready for Orange Game.

The basketball five of the Y. M. C. A. will play the Orange association five in the local gymnasium Monday night and the second teams of the two associations will also play here then. The Orange players have been playing together for several years past and were the winners of the

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Josephine C. Brennan.

Mrs. Josephine C. Brennan, mother of Dr. A. K. Brennan, died at her son's home on Grant avenue yesterday afternoon. She was in her fifty-eighth year and came to Plainfield from New Haven, Conn., of which place she was a native. The body will be sent to New Haven this afternoon and the funeral will be held in St. Bernard's church, that city.

Mrs. Mary A. Nedles.

Following a long illness, Mrs. Mary A. Nedles died this morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Harry Mattis, of Somerset street. She was fifty-five years old and had lived in Plainfield for a long time. The funeral will be held in St. Joseph's church Monday morning at 9 o'clock, where a requiem mass will be held for the repose of her soul. Burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mrs. Jemima Parse.

Mrs. Jemima Parse, widow of Stites M. Parse, died at her home in Scotch Plains this morning. She was in her eighty-seventh year and had been failing a long time, death being due to the infirmities of old age. Mrs. Parse was a native of Newark but removed to Scotch Plains with her husband about twenty years ago. Mr. Parse has been dead about ten years. She was a member of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, and an earnest worker until illness prevented. One daughter, Mrs. Clara A. Miller, who lived with her, survives. The funeral will be held at her late home on Front street Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

James Thomas Roach.

James Thomas Roach, a resident of Dunellen, died at his home in that borough yesterday. He was thirty-one years old. The funeral will be held in St. John's church Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock.

Preparations for Banquet.

Covers will be laid for 125 at the annual banquet of the Y. M. C. A. to be held in the association auditorium Thursday evening, at 7 o'clock. Mrs. Henry L. Johnson will be the caterer. Previous to the banquet, an informal reception will be held at the building.

108 KILLED ON JERSEY ROADS IN FOUR MONTHS

Trenton, Jan. 11.—Gen. Joseph M. Congdon and Edmund Wilson, majority members of the New Jersey State Railroad Commission, have reported to Gov. Stokes relative to the number of persons killed and injured on the railroads of the State during the time the new Commission has been in existence. They declare that there are too many fatalities, and place the blame for much of the loss of life on railroad corporations. It is recommended that steps be taken by the incoming Legislature to afford proper protection to the traveling public.

From July 29 to December 1 last the report shows 108 persons were killed and 198 injured in New Jersey railroad accidents. Of the number killed 42 were employes, 7 were passengers, and the others wayfarers or trespassers. Of the injured, 15 were employes, 45 passengers and the rest wayfarers or trespassers.

Many of the fatalities were due to grade crossings, many of which are unguarded.

The commission declares that tracks and crossings are not sufficiently patrolled or inspected, and recommends that men of greater intelligence be employed.

AMUSEMENTS.

The theatrical syndicate is worried considerably by the fact that the Belasco attractions are all playing to capacity houses in New York and that the American playwright-manager does not contemplate any changes of program in the immediate future. "A Grand Army Man" will be the bill at the Stuyvesant and "The Warrens of Virginia" at the Belasco all year, and for an indefinite period thereafter.

One of the greates hits scored on Broadway in a long time has been made by Victor Moore in George M. Cohan's musical success, "The Talk of New York," at the Knickerbocker theatre. Mr. Moore and his talented company have evidently settled down for a long and very successful run. The theatre is crowded at every performance by an enthusiastic audience, who laugh and applaud the funny lines that Mr. Moore, as "Kid Burns," the plunger, reads in an intensely amusing vernacular. "The Talk of New York" was constructed for amusement purposes only and well fulfills its mission in that respect. Mr. Moore's personal triumph in the part of "Kid Burns" is a remarkable one. His performance of this role in "45 Minutes from Broadway" established him as a star and his appearance in the same character in a story which is, in a sense, a sequel to "45 Minutes," has only tended to increase interest in this popular player and his interesting stage work. As a bright, up-to-date musical play, "The Talk of New York" has proved Mr. Cohan's best piece. Its future at the Knickerbocker is so well assured that seats are now on sale for every performance in the next four weeks and may be secured by mail or telegraph.

The most emphatic and immediate success known in years was scored by Charles Frohman's production of the Dutch musical incident, "Miss Hook of Holland," upon its opening performance on New Year's Eve at the Criterion theatre, New York. The verdict of the press is one of enthusiastic unanimity that in "Miss Hook" Mr. Frohman has given Broadway "the merriest and daintiest musical comedy of many seasons."

Charles Frohman has effected a change in the plans of Ethel Barrymore that will result in cancelling much of her road tour. Miss Barrymore will remain "Her Sister" until February and then make a tour of only a few principal cities. She will sail for London on June 2.

Charles Frohman having decided that the production of "Fluffy Ruffles," which has been selected for Hattie Williams, shall not be made till next August. Miss Williams will continue en tour in "The Little Cherub."

MODES OF THE MOMENT.

The prominence of velvet is very marked for street and fancy dresses alike.

In all of the tailored and semitailored suits the novelty note is conspicuous, and indications point very strongly to a continuance of this feature in the coming spring designs.

Dark colors are very much more in order this season than light, and particularly is this true of the velvet costumes, all of the mose exclusive of which are, if not black, then some one of the rich dark shades, with braiding done always in self tone.

For formal wear velvet costumes in one piece are the rule, although, like the pretty semiprincess gowns of last summer, the two parts may be joined with passementerie or band trimming. The princess style and velvet have always been most congenial, and the princess is still the most effective mode for it.—New York Post.

Arthur G. Beekman, who has been detained at home for the past two weeks by illness, is slowly improving.

THE SURRENDER OF ZED BILBRO

By WILLIAM H. HAMBY

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Zed Bilbro's two most troublesome possessions were a violent temper and a pretty daughter.

The temper, like an active volcano, was always either in open eruption or gathering steam for a big explosion.

The daughter was aggravatingly obedient, and was as sweet and modest as she was pretty. She was so much unlike her father that one constantly wondered what an angel her mother must have been.

The disagreement which led to the tragedy was over Ben Hudson.

Zed suspicioned that Helen loved this young man, and she knew that her father hated him.

Ben had courted her a very short time when old Zed's temper had one of its most violent explosions. He ordered the young man off the place and swore by all his fighting ancestors that if he ever set foot on the premises again he would fill him so full of lead that he would not float in brine.

Those who knew intimated the old man's opposition was not by any means solely due to his hate for Hudson. Helen's mother had left her $5,000 which was to be used by her father until she married or attained the age of 30.

She lacked eight years of being 30.

But whatever the cause of his opposition, Helen knew, and Ben knew, and everybody else knew that it was a mighty dangerous proposition to go up against Zed Bilbro's word. If he said he would shoot, shoot he would, no matter if he hung for it within 24 hours.

Therefore Ben, who, by the way, was a very excellent and prosperous young man, wisely stayed off the premises; and Helen went unaccompanied, if sadly, about her work.

Her face grew thinner, her cheeks paler; and there was a far-away look in her eyes that would have touched the heart of anyone but a stingy old curmudgeon who wanted to hang on to the use of her $5,000.

But one Friday afternoon as she stood listlessly by the west window suddenly her eyes brightened and the color came back to her cheeks. Zed looked out just in time to catch the last wave of Ben's handkerchief as he rode by.

The next Friday Helen was at the window at the some time, and again Ben rode by and waved his handkerchief.

Although there was no response from Helen save in her eyes and cheeks, Zed sprang up angrily and jerked the window blind down in front of her.

Quietly she moved to another window. Again he jerked the blind. Then without a word she walked out on the porch and sat down in a rocker. Whereupon Ben gave the handkerchief an extra swing around his head and tossed it triumphantly into the air.

Zed's face grew apoplectic and he looked longingly at his Winchester which hung over the door, but he he could not very well shoot a man down on the public highway for merely waving his handkerchief.

After that the Friday afternoon salute became the weekly event for the girl, whose cheeks once more got back their pink and her step regained its old-time elasticity as she went singing about her work.

But all the time Zed's impotent wrath smoldered under repression, growing hotter and hotter until he was in constant danger of explosion.

"Now, young lady, I want you to remember one thing," he said one Friday evening. "There ain't to be any elopin' 'round here. When you marry you'll be married right here in this house. If you ever run away to get married, I'll kill him just as shore as I'm a foot high."

Helen merely replied: "Yes, father, I'll remember," and went on about her work.

That made him boil all the more, for he had hoped for an excuse to pour out upon her the vials of his wrath, which were too full to be comfortable.

About 11 o'clock Wednesday night Zed awoke with the feeling that something had gone wrong.

He hastily got into his clothes and went to Helen's room.

She was gone.

He went down the stairs three steps at a time and got his rifle. When his hand was upon the door-knob he stopped. There were voices. He went to the window and looked out.

It was a fine June night, and the moon smiled on grass and roses and leaves.

There they were, in the shadow of the grape arbor. They were sitting on the bench, and even in the shadow he could see the young man's arm was about her.

A fit of anger swept Zed until the moonlight looked like blood.

Out of the door, across the porch, and half-way across the yard he dashed before they noticed him.

They sprang to their feet. Helen screamed and started toward her father, but the young man stood his ground defiantly.

Crazy with anger, Zed jumped to one side, so the girl was out of range, threw up his rifle, and fired twice square at the young man's chest.

He fell forward on his face, lifeless.

With an agonized cry, Helen ran back and kneeled over him.

The old man returned to the house, put up his gun, finished dressing, deliberately; then went to the barn and saddled a horse.

He rode back to the gate and called to Helen, who still knelt over the lifeless body: "I am going to Martinville to give myself up." A heart-broken moan was the only response from the girl, and the father rode away.

It was 15 miles to the county seat, and daylight was just streaking the east when Zed presented himself at the sheriff's, told his story and surrendered himself to the law.

"I'll just guard you here in my house, Mr. Bilbro," said the sheriff, "until a warrant is sworn out."

"Very well," assented the old man wearily. Now that his anger had died down and he must face the gallows, he confessed to himself the exceeding folly of his rash act.

The sheriff locked him in his room and went out to investigate.

For hours the old man waited his return, wondering if there would be any attempt to mob him. Ben Hudson was very popular, and certainly public excitement would run high.

But he did not care much if they did lynch him, it would be over all the quicker that way.

About four o'clock the sheriff returned.

"Mr. Bilbro," he said, "I just now had a 'phone message from out your way, and they say there is a large crowd gathered at your house."

"I expected it," said the old man, dismally. "But let 'em come, I don't care a fig which way I go so it is over with in a hurry."

"There has been a wedding out there," added the sheriff. "It is just now over."

"A wedding!" And Zed leaned forward in amazement.

"Yes, your daughter is married."

"Married?" repeated the astonished father. "Why, I killed her sweetheart last night."

The sheriff smiled. "No, Zed, that was a dummy you shot."

The relief that swept over him was so great he grew dizzy. But directly the blood rushed back to his head and he grew apoplectic with rage. To think they would fool him like that and make him the laughing stock of the whole country. He would never hear the last of it.

The sheriff saw the change and understood it.

"I haven't mentioned this to a soul," he said. "I promised Helen I never would."

"And have they?" gasped the old man with a faint glimmer of hope.

"No, and Helen told me to tell you if you would not make any fuss they would never tell it in the world.

"They are to have a big wedding supper to-night; there are about 50 guests there, and she said if you agree to take it in good humor to 'phone her something so she will understand."

For a few minutes Zed struggled with his wrath, but before him stood the certainty of an endless joshing and guying wherever he went, if the thing became known.

He stepped to the 'phone and asked for his number on the rural line.

"This Helen? Well, say, Helen—" his voice was very fatherly, "I got the four gallons of ice cream all right, and will be out with it in time for the supper."

SPORTSMEN OF THE OLD ROCK.

Late English Duke Was a Fighter When a Boy.

To those who knew him in his later years it is difficult ever to think of the late duke of Westminster as a fighter. Yet he was very useful with his fists as a boy and the three who played so prominent a part in the celebrated fight between the duke of Westminster and the late Lord Derby have now each joined the majority. The spectator was the Hon. Francis Lawley, and the three boys were journeying home from school in a coach when the two future dukes commenced quarreling and fought it out at the first inn they came to where the vehicle stopped long enough. The duke of Westminster, known as "Jock" in those days, and the most difficult youth at Oxford to get out of bed in the mornings, proved himself the better man.

All three were at Oxford, and Mr. Lawley had $100,000 worth of engravings, all of religious subjects, in his anteroom. Mr. Lawley cared little for money and it was his habit to send a crossing sweeper with his check to his banker. When this sweeper was called in a case which decided the ownership of Gemma di Vergy, and he had to look at the handwriting of a check he did so through a pair of gold rimmed eyeglasses taken from his waistcoat pocket.

Nelson's Signal Man.

It was in the winter of 1846 that Nelson's signal-man—the man who hoisted the famous "England expects," etc.—was discovered by one who had served as surgeon on board the Tonnant at Trafalgar. The signal-man, John Roome, was selling watercress and red herrings in Blackfriars. He had deserted from the navy after the battle, and this had disqualified him for a pension, but representations were made to Capt. Pasco, signal lieutenant on the Victory at Trafalgar, who used his influence in the old man's behalf. Capt. Pasco was at first unsuccessful; he was informed by the authorities that there were many more deserving candidates for Greenwich. Shortly afterward, however, room was found at Greenwich hospital for old John. Had he lived in our time he probably would have received a princely salary for repeating the signal nightly at music halls.—London Chronicle.

CHAPTER FIVE

THE week passed swiftly, day after day echoing with the steady fusillade from marsh to covert, from valley to ridge. Lord Alderdene, good enough on snipe and cock, was driven almost frantic by the ruffed grouse; Voucher did better for a day or two and then lost the knack; Marion Page attended to business in her cool and thorough style, and her average on the gunroom books was excellent and was also adorned with clever pen and ink sketches by Siward.

Leroy Mortimer had given up shooting and established himself as a haunter of cushions in sunny corners. Tom O'Hara had gone back to Lenox; Mrs. Vendenning, to Hot Springs. Beverly Plank, master of Black Fells, began to pervade the house after a tentative appearance, and he and Major Belwether pottered about the coverts, usually after luncheon, the latter doing little damage with his fowling piece and nobody knew how much with his gossiping tongue. Quarrier appeared in the field methodically, shot with judgment, taking no chances for a brilliant performance which might endanger his respectable average. As for the Page boys, they kept the river ducks stirring whenever Eileen Shannon and Rena Bonnesdel could be persuaded to share the canoes with them. Otherwise they haunted the vicinity of those bored maidens, suffering snubs sorrowfully, but persistently faithful. They were a great nuisance in the evening, especially as their sister did not permit them to lose more than $10 a day at cards.

Cards—that is, bridge and preference—ruled, as usual, and the latter game, being faster, suited Mortimer and Ferrall, but did not aid Siward toward recouping his bridge losses.

Two matters occupied him. Since cup day he had never had another opportunity to see Sylvia Landis alone; that was the first matter. He had touched neither wine nor spirits nor malt since the night Ferrall had found him prone, sprawling in a stupor on his disordered bed—that was the second matter, and it occupied him, at times required all his attention, particularly when the physical desire for it set in steadily, mercilessly, mounting inexorably like a tide. But, like the tide, it ebbed at last, particularly when a sleepless night had exhausted him.

He had gone back to his shooting again after a cool review of the ethics involved. It even amused him to think that a girl who had cleverness enough to marry many millions, with Quarrier thrown in, could have so moved him to sentimentality. He had ceded the big cup of antique silver to Quarrier, too, a matter which troubled him little, however, as in the irritation of the reaction he had been shooting with the brilliancy of a demon, and the gunroom books were open to any doubting guests' inspection.

Time, therefore, was never heavy on his hands save when the tide threatened—when at night he stirred and awoke, conscious of its crawling advance, aware of its steady mounting menace; moments at table when the aroma of wine made him catch his breath; moments in the gunroom redolent of spicy spirits, a maddening volatile fragrance clinging to the card room too. Yes, the long days were filled with such moments for him.

But afield the desire faded, and even during the day indoors he shrugged desire aside. It was night that he dreaded—the long hours, lying there tense, stark eyed, sickened with desire.

As for Sylvia, she and Grace Ferrall had taken to motoring, driving away into the interior or taking long flights north and south along the coast. Sometimes they took Quarrier; sometimes, when Mrs. Ferrall drove, they took in ballast in the shape of a superfluous Page boy and a girl for him. Once Grace Ferrall asked Siward to join them; but, no definite time being set, he was scarcely surprised to find them gone when he returned from a morning on the snipe meadows. And Sylvia, leagues away by that time, curled up in the tonneau beside Grace Ferrall, watched the dark pines flying past, cheeks pink, eyes like stars, while the rushing wind drove health into her and care out of her, cleansing, purifying, overwhelming winds flowing through and through her till her very soul within her seemed shining through the beauty of her eyes. Besides, she had just confessed.

* * * * * * *

"He kissed you?" repeated Grace Ferrall incredulously.

"Yes; a number of times. He was silly enough to do it, and I let him."

"I don't know what he said. I was all nerves, confused, scared—a perfect stick, in fact. I don't believe he'd care to try again."

Then Mrs. Ferrall deliberately settled down in her furs to extract from the girl beside her every essential detail, and the girl, frank at first, grew shy and silent—reticent enough to worry her friend into a silence which lasted a long while for a cheerful little matron of her sort.

Presently they spoke of other matters with much to do in the coming winter between New York, Hot Springs and Florida—surmises as to dinners, dances and the newcomers in the younger sets, and the marriages to be arranged or disarranged, and the scandals humanity is heir to, and the attitude of the bishop toward divorce.

Then at last as the big motor car swung in a circle at Wenniston Crossroads and poked its brass and lacquer muzzle toward Shotover the talk swung back to Siward once more, having traveled half the world over to find him.

"He is the sweetest fellow with his mother," sighed Grace, "and that counts heavily with me. But there's trouble ahead for her—sorrow and trouble enough for them both if he is a true Siward."

"Heredity again!" said Sylvia impatiently. "Isn't he man enough to win out? I'll bet you he settles down, marries and"—

"Marries? Not he! How many girls do you suppose have believed that—were justified in believing he meant anything by his attractive manner and nice ways of telling you how much he liked you? He had a desperate affair with Mrs. Mortimer—innocent enough, I fancy. He's had a dozen within three years, and in a week Rena Bonnesdel has come to making eyes at him, and Eileen gives him no end of chances which he doesn't see. As for Marion Page, the girl has been on the edge of loving him for years. You laugh? But you are wrong. She is in love with him now as much as she ever can be with anybody. Did he propose to you?"

"Did he propose to you?"

"Yes—I think so."

"Then it's the first time for him. He finds women only too willing to play with him, as a rule, and he doesn't have to be definite. I wonder what he meant by being so definite with you."

"I suppose he meant marriage," said Sylvia serenely, yet there was the slightest ring in her voice, and it amused Mrs. Ferrall to try her a little further.

"Oh, you think he really intended to commit himself."

"Why not?" retorted Sylvia, turning red. "Do you think he found me overwilling, as you say he finds others?"

"You were probably a new sensation for him," inferred Mrs. Ferrall musingly. "You mustn't take him seriously, child—a man with his record. Besides, he has the same facility with a girl that he has with everything else he tries; his pen—you know how infernally clever he is, and he can make good verse and write witty jingles, and he can carry home with him any opera and play it decently, too, with the proper harmonies. Anything he finds amusing he is clever with—dogs, horses, pen, brush, music, women." That was too malicious, for Sylvia had flushed up painfully, and Grace Ferrall dropped her gloved hand on the hand of the girl beside her, "Child, child," she said, "he is not that sort. No decent man ever is unless the girl is too."

Sylvia, sitting up very straight in her furs, said, "He found me anything but difficult, if that's what you mean."

"I don't. Please don't be vexed, dear. I plague everybody when I see an opening. There's really only one thing that worries me about it all."

"What is that?" asked Sylvia, without interest.

"It's that you might be tempted to care a little for him, which, being useless, might be unwise."

"I am—tempted."

"Not seriously."

"I don't know." She turned in a sudden nervous impatience foreign to her. "Howard Quarrier is too perfectly imperfect for me. I'm glad I've said it. The things he knows about and doesn't know have been a revelation in this last week with him. There is too much surface, too much exterior admirably fashioned, and inside is all clockwork."

The low whizzing hum of the motor filled a silence that produced considerable effect upon Grace Ferrall, and, after mastering her wits, she said in a subdued voice:

"Of course it's my meddling."

"Of course it isn't. I asked your opinion, but I knew what I was going to do. Only I did think him personally possible, which made the expediency, the mercenary view of it, easier to contemplate."

She was becoming as frankly brutal as she knew how to be, which made the revolt the more ominous.

"Sylvia dear, I wish I hadn't meddled. I'm meddling some more, I suppose, when I say to you, Don't give Howard his conge for the present. It is a horridly common thing to dwell upon, but Howard [illegible] important to be cut [illegible] pulse of the moment."

"I know it."

"You are too clever not to [illegible] the matter wisely, dispassionately, intelligently, dear, then if by April you simply can't stand it, talk the thing over with me again," she ended rather vaguely and wistfully, for it had been her heart's desire to wed Sylvia's beauty and Quarrier's fortune.

"Do you believe I could induce him to wear his hair any way except pompadour?" said Sylvia. "And, dear, his beard is so dreadfully silky. Isn't there anything he could take for it?"

"Only a razor, I'm afraid. Those long, thick, soft eyelashes of his are ominous. Eyes of that sort ruin a man for my taste. He might just as reasonably wear my hat."

"But he can't follow the fashions to eyes," laughed Sylvia. "Oh, this is atrocious of us—it is simply horrible to sit here and say such things. I am cold blooded enough as it is, material enough, mean, covetous, contemptible."

"Dear," said Grace Ferrall musingly, "you are not choosing a husband; you are choosing a career."

"Grace! Do you wish me to marry him?"

"What is the alternative, dear?"

"Why, nothing—self respect, dowdiness and peace."

"Is that all?"

"All I can see."

"Not Stephen Siward?"

"To marry? No. To enjoy? Yes, Grace, I have had such a good time with him. You don't know! He is such a boy—sometimes, and I—I believe that I am rather good for him. Not that I'd ever again let him do that sort of thing. Besides, his curiosity is queuched. I am the sort he supposed. Now he's found out he will be nice. It's been days since I've had a talk with him. He tried to, but I wouldn't. Besides, the major has said nasty things about him when Howard was present—nothing definite, only hints, smiling silences, innuendoes on the verge of matters rather unfit, and I had nothing definite to refute. I could not even appear to understand or notice, it was all done in such a horridly vague way. But it only made me like him, and no doubt that actress he took to the Patroons is better company than he finds in nine places out of ten among his own sort."

"Oh," said Grace Ferrall slowly, "if that is the way you feel I don't see why you shouldn't play with Mr. Siward whenever you like."

"Nor I. I've been a perfect fool not to. Howard hates him."

"How do you know?"

"What a question! A woman knows such things. Then, you remember that caricature—so dreadfully like Howard. Howard has no sense of humor. He detests such things. It was the most dreadful thing that Mr. Siward could have done to him."

"Meddled again!" groaned Grace. "Doesn't Howard know that I did that?"

"Yes, but nothing I can say alters his conviction that the likeness was intended. You know it was a likeness. And if Mr. Siward had not told me that it was not intended I should never have believed it to be an accident."

After a prolonged silence Sylvia said overcarelessly: "I don't quite understand Howard. With me anger lasts but a moment, and then I'm open to overtures for peace. I think Howard's anger lasts."

"It does," said Grace. "He was a muff as a boy—a prig with a prig's memory under all his shallow, showy surface. I'm frank with you. I never could take my cousin either respectfully or seriously, but I've known him to take his own anger so seriously that years after he has visited it upon those who had really wronged him. And he is equipped for retaliation if he chooses. That fortune of his reaches far. Not that I think him capable of using such a power to satisfy a mere personal dislike. Howard has principles, loads of them, but the weapon is there."

"Is it true that Mr. Siward is interested in building electric roads?" asked Sylvia curiously. "Mr. Mortimer said so."

"Then I suppose he is. I'll ask Kemp if you like. Why? Isn't it all right to build them?"

"I suppose so. Howard is in it somehow. In fact, Howard's company is behind Mr. Siward's, I believe."

Grace Ferrall turned and looked at the girl beside her, laughing outright.

"Oh, Howard doesn't do mysterious financial things. Besides that, if Howard is in that thing no doubt Kemp and I are too. So your nice young man is in very safe company."

"You draw such silly inferences," said Sylvia coolly, but there was a good deal of color in her cheeks, and she knew it and pulled her big motor veil across her face, fastening it under her chin, all of which amused Grace Ferrall infinitely until the subtler significance of the girl's mental processes struck her, sobering her own thoughts. Sylvia, too, had grown serious in her preoccupation, and the partie-a-deux terminated a few minutes later in a duet of silence over the teacups in the gunroom.

A few moments later Sylvia, glancing over her shoulder, noticed that a fine misty drizzle had clouded the casements. That meant that her usual evening stroll on the cliffs with Quarrier before dressing for dinner was off. And she drew a little breath of unconscious relief as Marion Page walked in, her light woolen shooting jacket, hat, shoes and the barrels of the fowling piece tucked under her left armpit, all glimmering frostily with powdered raindrops.

She said something to Grace Ferrall about the mist promising good point shooting in the morning, took the order book from a servant, jotted down her request to be called an hour before sunrise, filled in the gunroom records with her score—the species and number bagged and the number of shells used—and, accepting the tea offered, drew out a tiny cigarette case of sweet bay wood heavily crusted with rose gold.

"With whom were you shooting?" asked Grace, as Marion dropped one well shaped leg over the other and wreathed her delicately tanned features in smoke.

"Stephen Siward and Blinky. They're at it yet, but I had some letters to write." She glanced leisurely at Sylvia and touched the ash tray with the whitening end of her cigarette. "That dog you let Mr. Siward have is a good one. I'm taking him to Jersey next week for the cock shooting."

Sylvia returned her calm gaze blankly.

An unreasonable and disagreeable shock had passed through her.

"My North Carolina pointers are useless for close work," observed Marion indifferently, and she leaned back, watching the blue smoke curling upward from her cigarette.

Marion Page.

Sylvia, distrait, but with downcast eyes on fire under the fringed lids, was thinking of the check Siward had given her for Sagamore. The transaction for her had been a business one on the surface only. She had never meant to use the check. She had laid it away among a few letters, relics, pleasant souvenirs of the summer. To her the affair had been softened by a delicate hint of intimacy—the delight he was to take in something that had once been hers had given her a faint taste of the pleasure of according pleasure to a man. And this is what he had done!

In ones and twos the guests reported as the dusk curtained fog closed in on Shotover. Quarrier came, dry as a chip under his rain coat, but his silky beard was wet with rain, and moisture powdered his long, soft eyelashes and white skin, and his flexible fingers as he drew off his gloves seemed startling in their whiteness through the gathering gloom.

"I suppose our evening walk is out of the question," he said, standing by Sylvia, who had nodded a greeting and then turned her head rather hastily to see who had entered the room. It was Siward, only a vague shape in the gloom, but perfectly recognizable to her. At the same moment Marion Page rose leisurely and strolled toward the billiard room.

"Our walk?" repeated Sylvia absently. "It's raining, you know." Yet only a day or two ago she had walked to church with Siward through the rain, the irritated major feeling obliged to go with them. Her eyes followed Siward's figure, suddenly dark against the door of the lighted billiard room, then brilliantly illuminated as he entered, nodded acceptance to Mortimer's invitation and picked up the cue just laid aside by Agatha Caithness, who had turned to speak to Marion.

His fiancee's inattention was not agreeable to Quarrier. A dozen things had happened since his arrival which had not been agreeable to him—her failure to meet him at the Fells Crossing and the reason for her failure and her informal acquaintance with Siward, whose presence at Shotover he had not looked for, and her sudden intimacy with the man he had never particularly liked and whom within six months he had come to detest and to avoid.

In a few years indifference to Siward had changed to passive disapproval, that again to an emotionless dislike, and when the scandal at the Patroons club occurred for the first time in his life he understood what it was to fear the man he disliked. For if Siward had committed the insane imprudence which had cost him his title to membership he had also done something, knowingly or otherwise, which awoke in Quarrier a cold, slow fear, and that fear was dormant, but present now, and it for the time being dictated his attitude and bearing toward the man who might or might not be capable of using viciously a knowledge which Quarrier believed that he must possess.

For that reason when it was not possible to avoid Siward his bearing toward him was carefully civil. Silence was always desirable to Quarrier. Silence concerning all matters was a trait inborn and congenially cultivated to a habit by him in every affair of life—in business, in leisure, in the methodical pursuits of such pleasures as a limited intellect permitted him, in personal and family matters, in public questions and financial problems.

He listened always, but never invited confidences. He had no opinion to express when invited. And he became very, very rich.

And over it all spread a thin membrane of vanity, nervous, not intellectual, sensitiveness, for all sense of humor was absent in this man, whose smile when not a physical effort was automatically and methodically responsive to certain fixed cues.

A sudden rain squall, noisy against the casements, had darkened the room. Then the electric lights broke out with a mild candlelike luster, and Quarrier, standing beside Sylvia's chair, discovered it to be empty.

BISMARCKS DEVELOPE A STREAK OF HARD LUCK

Running against a streak of hard luck, the Napoleon bowlers dropped two games out of the series of three with the Wellingtons in the tourney last night. The losers got splits by the bunch and when the pins were pounded for strike hits they stubbornly refused to drop, calling for a lot of extra work with spare balls. The first game was taken from Captain Britton's men by a margin of four, they won the second by thirty-one and lost the last by sixty-three.

To make matters worse for the Bismarcks, an error on the part of Scorer Jack Todd made them believe they had the first try and were starting off on the second lap when a discrepancy was discovered in the adding. The information stopped the misinformed men in the midst of a hearty cheer and the jubilant expressions on their faces gave way to absolute chagrin when the Wellingtons were declared winners.

The only 200 scores for the night were made by Captains Britton and Blatz,, each getting one double century. Britton hit the wood for an average of 173 and Blatz accounted for 171, a score of 124 in the second try being the drag. Chauncey Stout was somewhat out of form and an average of 179 put a slight kink in his total standing. Tom Muir fell off to 149.2 and McInerney and Runyon chalked up 169.2 and 140.1 re-respectively. One of the surprises of the night was the form displayed by Henry Crane, who got a nice set of figures in 154, 161 and 183, decidedly above his usual gait. Harry Montross landed 163.2, Pope 156 and a bad hand kept Harry Gillmore out of the game. His average less ten as rolled against was 167.

The result of last night's games hauled the Bismarcks down to third place and pulled the Wellingtons from the bottom to next to last.

The scores:

BISMARCKS.
Britton	200	160	159
Muir	142	154	153

Y.M.C.A. TRIMS ELIZABETH

Local Five Plays Real Basketball for a Change and Wins at Elizabeth 22-12.

COLLIER MADE GOOD ON FOULS.

Plainfield Centre Adds 12 Points to Score From the Foul Line—Elizabeth Five Strengthened.

In the game for victory from the very start, the Y. M. C. A. basketball five redeemed their recent record by winning from the Elizabeth association five in a fast game played at Elizabeth last night. The final score was 22-12, and with the score against them at the end of the first half, the Plainfielders got together for some real basketball and pulled out a victory by fast play in the second period. The local five had an easy time with the Elizabethans on December 16, when the teams met here, for then victory went to the local five by a score of 95-21. On the floor last night for the Elizabeth five was only one member of the team which came to Plainfield. He was Griscimer, the forward, who made all the points for his team in the game here.

The home team started things with a rush last night and kept ahead of the local five, shooting four baskets for a total of eight points to the local team's five points scored in the first period. Plainfield got in the game hard and fast and soon pulled ahead in the score, retaining the lead until the whistle. Each team scored five baskets from the floor but Collier made good in shooting fouls, vibrating the netting twelve times out of eighteen chances. This won the game, for the Elizabethans could not increase their score from the foul line by but two points. In last night's game, Miner took Rumsey's place at forward and Rumsey went in guard, getting two baskets. The lineups and summaries follow:

PLAINFIELD.		ELIZABETH.
Miner	left forward	Griscimer
Gilmore		White, Gothaway
Collier	right forward	Richards
Gavett	centre	Loeser
	right guard

Baskets from the floor: Rumsey, 2; White, 2; Miner, Collier, Gavett, Griscimer, Krug, Richards. Goals from fouls: Collier, 12; White, 2. Referee, Cann, of Elizabeth. Umpire, Charles B. Morse, of Plainfield. Timer and scorer, George L. Listman. Twenty minute halves.

P.H.S. FIVE LOSES IN LAST MINUTE OF PLAY

The basketball five of Hasbrouck Institute, Newark, won out in the last minute of play in a fast game with the Plainfield High School five at the local high school gymnasium yesterday afternoon. With the score 34-30 in favor of the Plainfielders, the visitors got together with a rush in the last few minutes, breaking away from his man several times in succession Foster, of the visitors' five, scored several baskets, coupled with some scoring by Andreae, the Hasbrouck captain. When the final whistle blew, the score was 38-35, and the Hasbrouck team was won the game.

The local schoolboys, playing first-class basketball, managed to keep in the lead much of the game. At the end of the first half, they had piled up 18 points to the visitors' 16. The local five played a fast game, marked by good passing and excellent shooting, but were weak in their guarding at the end. The school teams will meet in basketball again Friday, February 14, at Newark. The lineups and summaries follow:

HASBROUCK.		P. H. S.
Foster	right forward.	Riffert
Ewin	centre.	Caldwell (captain)
Andreae (captain)	left guard.	Morris
Cross	right guard.	Snyder, Robins

Baskets from the floor: Landrine, 6; Caldwell, 6; Foster, 4; Ewin, 4; Morris, 4; Cross, 3; Mortimer, 3; Snyder, 3; Riffert. Goals from fouls: Ewin, 3; Foster, Morris. Referee, Paul Collier; umpire, Sherlock, of H. I.; scorer, Roy Woodhull; timers, Prior and Irving; 20 and 15 minute halves.

LEAL'S SECONDS LOSE TO Y.M.C.A. JUNIORS, 32-23

The basketball team of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. defeated the second team of Leal's School in a closely contested game at the association gymnasium this morning. The final score was 32-23, the Y. M. C. A. team forging ahead in the last few minutes of play for the nine point lead. The teams had some close playing, for at the end of the first half the association five only had a four point lead with the score 17-13 in their favor.

The best work of the game was the playing of Russell Conroy, captain of the Y. M. C. A. five. He scored eight baskets from the floor, while Hochberger added ten points to the score in the same way. Leal's chances were crippled by lack of team work, but the Y. M. C. A. boys did some good passing, which their opponents were unable to break up. The work of the private school five was marked by some brilliant individual play, Dallas, Day and Campbell taking advantage of chances when unguarded for several baskets. The lineups and summaries follow:

Y. M. C. A. JR.		LEAL'S 2ND.
Line	left forward.	Randolph
Manley	right forward.	Day
Conroy (capt.)	centre.	Campbell (capt.)
Hochberger	right guard.	Foote

Baskets from the floor: Conroy, 8; Hochberger, 5; Dallas, 3; Day, 2; Campbell, 2; Manley, Randolph, Foote. Goals from fouls: Manley, 2; Vail, 2; Campbell, 2; Dallas, 2; Day. Referee, G. L. Listman; umpire, Mr. Adams, of Leal's; Timers, Durham and Bennett. Fifteen minute halves.

LEGISLATURE TOMORROW

After Governor Stokes's Final Message is Read, Lawmakers Will Adjourn.

A YOUNG MAN'S SESSION.

Legislature Will Not Get Down to Work Until the Third Week of the Session.

The 132d legislature of New Jersey will convene tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at the State House, at Trenton. The work of the session will be the formalities of organization, reading of the final message of Governor Stokes, and the naming of committees by President Hillery, of the senate, and Speaker Jess, of the house of assembly.

Adjournment will then be taken to the following week. As the inauguration of Governor Fort will take place January 21, it will not be until the third week that the legislature will get down to the work of considering bills.

The joint inaugural committee will meet this evening at the state house to complete the details of that event. The bulk of the preliminary work has been carried on by the local members of the committee, Senator Leavitt and Assemblyman Ginnelly.

The legislative vanguard will arrive tonight, although the majority of the members will not come until tomorrow.

The house and senate will be called to order by the clerk and secretary of last year. Michael Higgins, of Newark, will perform this duty in the house, and then the clerk's desk will be taken by Captain "Jim" Parker, of Paterson, who made way just a year ago for Clerk Higgins.

In the senate Secretary Tyler holds down the senate old job and, therefore, will not have to "turn right 'round and go out again."

YOUNG MAN'S SESSION.

This is a young man's session, so far as the presiding places are concerned. President Hillery of the senate is 35 years old and Speaker Jess of the house is 36. Both are lawyers. President Hillery is serving his second term in the senate and was previously in the assembly. Last year he was the majority leader in the senate.

The popularity of Speaker Jess is evidenced by the fact that he has been in the house but one year. He won the speakership upon a candidacy announced but a few hours before the meeting of the caucus. Before taking up the law he was engaged in newspaper work in Philadelphia. He studied law with his brother, the late William H. Jess, and was admitted to the Camden county bar in 1897. He is a resident of Haddon Heights and his law offices are in the city of Camden.

A new bill providing for the exclusion of children from theatrical performances, dance halls and similar places of amusement, unless accompanied by parents or some other responsible adult has been framed by Wilbur A. Mott, assistant prosecutor of Essex county, for presentation to the new legislature. This bill differs to a considerable extent from its predecessors, two of which in as many years have reached the governor, only to be denied his signature. Both of these bills made it a misdemeanor for the proprietors or managers of theatres, dance halls, etc., to admit children under 14 unless accompanied by parent or guardian. The proposed new bill raises the age of exclusion to 16.

Dr. Richard's Theme.

Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, formerly pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, will address the Mens Club of that church tomorrow night. He will speak on "Experiences of a Moderator." Dr. Richards is now pastor of the Brick Presbyterian church, New York, and is exerting a strong influence in the religious circles of the metropolis.

Building Loan's New Series.

The Union Building and Loan Association will open a new series tonight at their offices, 146 Park avenue. The Union is a safe up-to-date association and the indications are that the shares of the new series will soon be all taken. Special attention is directed to the association's advertisement in another column.

Missionary to Speak.

Miss M. E. Rogers, a Presbyterian missionary, recently returned from Fatehgarh, India, will speak at the Women's Foreign Missionary meeting to be held in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Members of other churches are cordially invited to attend.

PERTH AMBOY WANTS BRYAN TO VISIT CITY

J. P. Holm, who has been instrumental in bringing several famous speakers to Perth Amboy, is now at work making every endeavor to have Wm. Jennings Bryan visit that city sometime during the early part of February, when he is to be the guest of James E. Martine, of this city.

Although Mr. Holm has received a letter from Mr. Martine stating that Mr. Bryan's visit in the state will be very short, he has not by any means given up hope of having him visit Perth Amboy. Mr. Holm stated yesterday that it is not because Mr. Bryan is such a Democrat that he wishes him to come to his town, but because of his great popularity as a speaker.

Mr. Martine's letter is as follows:

"Plainfield, Jan. 5, 1908.
"Cedar Brook Farm.

"Hon. J. P. Holm:

"My Dear Friend—I very well remember my visit to you, with James Parker, and also your kind attention and courtesy. Mr. Bryan's stay in our state will be so short that I doubt whether he could get to Perth Amboy at this time, but I will be glad to aid in bringing it about if possible.

"Your friend,
"JAMES E. MARTINE."

Mr. Holm is the Danish consul at Perth Amboy.

"LA TRAVIATA" BILLED FOR MANHATTAN OPERA

Mme. Tetrazzini, who arrived on the Lorraine, Saturday, will make her first New York appearance at the Manhattan Opera House Wednesday in "La Traviata." It was in this opera she made her success in London a few months ago. The tenor on the occasion of M. Ancona, who was fully recovered from his illness, will be the father. M. Gilbert and Mmes. Zaccaria and Severina will complete the cast. Mme. Tetrazzini will also sing "La Traviata" at the Saturday matinee.

"Louise," with Miss Garden, Mme. Bressler-Gianoli and MM. Dalmores and Gilbert will be heard again tonight. "Thais" will be given on Friday evening and Miss Garden and MM. Renaud and Dalmores.

M. Renaud will also be heard again in his impersonation of Mephistopheles in Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust" at the popular price performance on Thursday night.

M. Zenatello will sing in "The Masked Ball," at the Saturday night popular price performance.

WILL TELL OF THE WORK AT HAMPTON INSTITUTE.

The work of the Hampton Normal and Agricultural Institute will be presented at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Wednesday night. Rev. Dr. H. B. Frissell, principal, will give a general address on the work of the school, which will be illustrated with stereopticon views. He will also show something of the broad work Hampton graduates are doing all through the South. For forty years the school has been working out the plans of its founder, Gen. Armstrong, and its results are encouraging and inspiring. Captain Allen Washington, a representative negro graduate of the school, and for several years its drillmaster, will also speak. He will tell of his struggles for an education and some observations of the work among his people. Music will be furnished by the well-known Hampton quartet, who will sing old folk songs of the blacks. No admission fee will be charged and the public is invited.

COOPER RECOMMENDED.

Will Succeed C. H. Bateman as Assistant Journal Clerk of the House.

At a meeting of the Somerset County Republican Committee at Somerville, Saturday, John C. Cooper, of Warrenville, was recommended for appointment as assistant journal clerk of the House. He will succeed Charles H. Bateman, of Somerville, who declined to be a candidate for re-appointment. Mr. Cooper is a brother to former Sheriff Edward Cooper and has been an active political worker in Somerset county for many years.

State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen was chairman of the meeting and other business transacted included the recommendation of John De Hart, of Montgomery township, for the position of door-keeper, and Walter French, of Hillsboro, for clerk to Senator Frelinghuysen's committees.

The Women's Home Missionary Society of the First Baptist Church will hold an all-day sewing meeting in the church tomorrow. The members will provide their luncheon at noon.

PROGRESS OF A CHURCH

Congregationalism's Growth in Southwest Told by Rev. W. W. Newell.

ILLUSTRATED BY MANY VIEWS.

A Brother of Rev. G. Kennedy Newell Interests His Hearers at the Congregational Church.

Telling of the growth of the Congregational Church in the South Chicago district of iron workers and in the southwestern states, Rev. W. W. Newell, secretary of the Congregational Church Building Society, gave an interesting stereopticon lecture at the Congregational Church last night. Despite the storm, there was a gratifying attendance, and a substantial offering was taken for the work of the church building society. Mr. Newell is a brother of G. Kennedy Newell, former pastor of Hope Chapel, who is now in charge of St. Cloud church, Orange.

The lecturer told many interesting facts about the iron workers of the great South Chicago district and showed beautifully colored slides reproduced from photographs taken by himself. Among the pictures shown was a photograph of the home of Huckleberry Finn, the character in Mark Twain's book, one of the pictures taken by Mr. Newell on his trip up the Mississippi valley. He spoke especially of the growth of the Congregational Church in Minnesota, where there are at present some 250 churches. The most interesting of the slides are those from photographs taken in the iron ore district on Lake Michigan. The pictures showed the ore being mined, transported in the "whale-back" steamers and finally being converted into steel. The lecturer also spoke of the church work being done in the vast sand regions to the north, where the United States Steel Corporation's purchases of land for blast furnaces, is responsible for the rapid growth of towns where the 15,000 iron workers are employed. Mr. Newell spoke of the great work being done by Rev. Mr. Bird in fighting the religious problem of the city and founding a Congregational Church where the congregation is composed almost entirely of the iron workers.

The latter part of the lecture comprised the explanation of slides reproduced from photographs taken by Mr. Newell in the great southwest, where the Congregational Church is having a most gratifying development. Pictures of the Alamo, and other historic buildings of Texas were shown and the speaker explained the work being done among the Indians, Creoles and "poor whites" in Indian Territory. Mr. Newell also showed photographs taken on his 125 mile driving trip through the waste "sod house region," where the Rev. Mr. Owen is conducting a great work for the church.

RAIN STORM REDUCES ATTENDANCE AT CHURCHES.

While the disagreeable weather of yesterday had an appreciable effect on the attendance in the local churches, none were omitted as a result of the rain. In the morning there were only fair sized congregations out, but in the evening there was a decided falling off in the number present.

The regular services were held last night at the First Baptist, Park Avenue Baptist, Trinity Reformed, Congregational, First M. E., Monroe Avenue M. E., Grace M. E., Crescent Avenue and First Presbyterian Churches, Warren and Hope Chapels. The congregations numbered from twenty to between fifty and sixty.

At the Park Avenue Baptist Church Rev. A. E. Finn preached the second sermon in the special series on the topic: "How Can a Man be Just With His Maker?" in the morning Rev. J. O. McKelvey and Rev. L. R. Howard exchanged, and in the evening they occupied their own pulpit. Rev. Mr. Trumbower, of Bayonne, preached both morning and night at Grace M. E. Church, to small congregations.

Local Elks to Attend.

The singing of the 11 o'clock toast at the Elizabeth Elks' Ladies' Reception, to be held at Turn Hall, Elizabeth, next Wednesday evening, will be arranged in a novel manner. The hall will be darkened at 11 o'clock and simultaneously with this a large clock, engaged especially for this feature, will automatically light and ring the eleven strokes, and will be followed by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" by a chorus. Through the efforts of the committee exalted rulers from New York, Jersey City, Newark, Bayonne, Rahway, Plainfield and New Brunswick lodges will be in attendance.

SAVED FROM DROWNING

Miss Catherine Stryker Has Miraculous Escape While Skating on Tier's Pond

BROKE THROUGH THE ICE.

Rescuer Also Plunges in the Water in Getting Her Out— Modestly Refuses His Name.

Miss Catherine Stryker, of Sandford avenue, a trained nurse, had a miraculous escape from drowning while skating on Tier's pond, Saturday afternoon. She was enjoying the sport immensely with a company of children from her neighborhood, when she struck a thin stretch of ice in the middle of the pond and was almost thrown headfirst into the water. The children were greatly frightened and they started off in search of help.

Presently a party of men arrived and found Miss Stryker clinging desperately to a thin edge of ice and struggling with might and main to get out of the water. One man more brave than the rest ventured close to where she was grasping frantically and in his efforts to save her Miss Stryker caught hold of his coat pulling him into the water. The two floundered about each trying to keep the other's head above the ice.

In the meantime a large crowd had gathered and it was seen at a glance that something must be done quickly or serious results would follow. A stout rope and stick were secured and after much difficulty the pair were landed safely on the thicker portion of the ice. Both were suffering greatly from their cold bath, their clothing being almost frozen to their bodies. Warm wraps were secured and Miss Stryker was taken hurriedly to her home in an autobile where she was soon revived, while the man sought a place of refuge where he had a chance to change is clothing and warm up. He refused to give his name. Thus far neither Miss Stryker nor her would-be rescuer have felt any ill-effects from their unwelcome experience.

FORMER PLAINFIELD GIRL AIDS GRAFTING OPERATION.

Through the act of her little brother Frederick and Miss Elsie Perine, Marion Webb, of Westfield, who was so badly burned while playing near a bonfire in front of her home several weeks ago, is on the safe road to recovery. Miss Webb, who has been in a critical condition ever since the accident, underwent the operation of skin grafting, and it appears as if the process will prove successful. The necessary skin was taken from the bodies of Miss Webb's little brother Frederick and Miss Elsie Perine. Over one hundred and sixty pieces were taken from the body of the little boy and about half that from the body of Miss Perine. It may be necessary to graft more skin, and if so Miss Ruth Jackson has volunteered to be the one to make the sacrifice. There are nine other volunteers. Miss Perine is the daughter of E. T. Perine, who recently succeeded August Belmont as president of the Audit Company of America. He formerly resided in Plainfield. She is under the care of a trained nurse and the doctors report her condition as excellent.

Y. M. C. A. BOYS SEE SIGHTS OF NEW YORK ON OUTING.

In charge of General Secretary Kenneth Robbie of the Y. M. C. A. fourteen members of the boys' department of the association spent Saturday in New York and Brooklyn sight-seeing. The party left town on a morning train, visiting the aquarium at the Battery and the fire boat "New Yorker" at her slip there, then going in the new subway to Brooklyn, where they went through the Navy Yard. Returning to New York, they took in the show at the Hippodrome in the afternoon. Those who made the trip were Charles Hand, Fred Thickstun, F. O. Dunning, Jr., Bergen Naylor, William S. Brown, Warren Butler, Carl Taylor, Allen Van Deventer, Roy Vanderbeek, Raymond Wyckoff, Richard Taylor, Robert Gavett, Craig Blair and James Manning.

Boys' Secretary L. A. Soule, with a party of seven members of the association junior department, spent the day skating at Crystal Lake, cooking dinner in the woods.

Men's Club Tomorrow Night.

William Jeffery, father of the "Bungalow Boys," will speak before the men's club of the Congregational Church at the church tomorrow night. He will speak on "Life in a Bungalow," and there will be banjo music by Frank C. Schaffer, of Berkeley Heights. Refreshments will be served.

WEALTH BRINGS TROUBLE

If You Don't Believe It, Ask L. B. Coddington Because He Can Quote Facts.

HE FOUND A ROLL OF MONEY.

Possession of It Got Him Into a Justice's Court and Upset His Sunday Routine.

In an address made a short time ago, Millionaire Stuyvesant Fish confided the fact to his hearers that the possession of wealth brings trouble. Louis B. Coddington, of Scotch Plains, was one of the many people who sniffed when they read of the remark but if anyone asks Coddington about it today he will declare that Mr. Fish was absolutely correct and that possession of American coin is an awful worriment. This is how he knows:

Coddington was driving along Mountain avenue, Scotch Plains, Friday morning, when he espied a purse in the road. Picking it up he found it to contain a roll of bills big enough to choke a horse and when counted up amounted to $720. There was no one around who looked like the owner of so much real money and Coddington took it home. He announced his find to the family and it so happened that his daughter, Mrs. Clifford Smith, was among those present. Mrs. Smith later told her husband and the incident was fresh in his mind when he came down to Plainfield Saturday night.

In the course of his visiting around town he engaged in conversation with Arthur Brokaw, of Duer street, who carts hay to Newark. Brokaw was feeling "blue" and declared that his depression was due to the loss of $720.

"Why," exclaimed Smith, "that's just the amount that my father-in-law, Lou Coddington, found on Mountain avenue yesterday."

Brokaw gave a whoop and inside of a few seconds was speeding toward Scotch Plains in search of the father-in-law. Coddington was soon found but he refused to admit that he had found Brokaw's money. The Plainfielder coaxed and pleaded but all to no purpose and finally had to come away without getting what he was after. Yesterday he went before Justice Clark and swore out a warrant for Coddington's arrest, the papers being served shortly afterward.

A hearing was held in the township committee rooms at noon but Coddington still refused to commit himself. No amount of argument could make him say "yes" or "no" about finding the money and Brokaw and his friends were nonplussed. Coddington finally asked for an adjournment until 10 o'clock this morning and the request was granted. Later in the day, the loser and the finder held a private conference and Coddington concluded that Brokaw was the rightful owner of the bulging purse; a decision that resulted in his handing it over. The court proceedings were then withdrawn. Facts are lacking as to what reward, if any, was passed over to Coddington but the finder declared today that if he saw any more pocketbooks in the road they would be allowed to rot if it depended on him to pick them up.

AL. G. WELCOMED BACK.

Famous Minstrel Man a Pleasant Visitor After Many Years.

After skipping Plainfield for fourteen years in his annual tour about the country, Al. G. Field's greater minstrels returned Saturday and delighted two big houses at the New Plainfield theatre. The unanimous verdict was that Mr. Field had presented the finest black-face show yet seen in the city and if he doesn't come here at least once each season he will make himself decidedly unpopular.

The show was a revelation in minstrelsy throughout and the services of fifty singers, dancers and comedians were required in giving it. The first part was enhanced by a magnificent setting and the succeeding numbers called for heavy scenic effects. One in particular, "The Little Boy in Green," brought four distinct changes and served to introduce one of the prettiest clog dancers local playgoers have ever witnessed.

Local Men in New Concern.

Certificate of incorporation has been filed with the county clerk by the Home Building and Supply Company of Westfield. The incorporators are William H. Abbott and Isaiah L. McVoy, of Westfield. The capital stock is $50,000, divided into 500 shares at a par value of $100 each.

Mr. and Mrs. Orson Rogers, of Westerly, R. I., who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Rogers, of Madison avenue, returned home today.

SWOLLEN BROOK AIDS COPS IN CRAP GAME RAID

Preferring arrest and possible punishment to a dash through rain-swollen Green brook in their "glad rags," seven borough young men who were shooting crap back of the Woodhull-Martin building yesterday, allowed police officers to gather them in. Under ordinary circumstances the stream that divides Plainfield and North Plainfield has about six inches of running water and the same gamesters have frequently gotten across when the danger signal was flashed but yesterday the brook had risen to fully four feet.

The crap game had been in progress an hour or more when the police were tipped off. Detective-Sergeant Flynn was assigned to land them if possible and took Patrolmen Charles Flynn and James Flatley with him to help. The sergeant went down along the race-way from Watchung avenue, Patrolman Flynn entered from Somerset street and Flatley went through Fairchild's alley. Patsy Kelleher, an auburn-haired youth who had been in the game and went broke, was on the lookout but the cops swooped down before he had a chance to shout a warning. When the crowd saw the bluecoats closing in they instinctively started toward the brook, but one look at the rushing torrent was enough to convince them that escape to the borough side was impossible and they philosophically awaited arrest.

Beside Kelleher, the raid yielded Edwin Fitzgerald, Benjamin DeCamp, Edward Seader, Henry Hansen, Rinaldo Coon and William Chatman. They remained in jail until this morning and when arraigned before Judge Runyon were fined $1 each. All paid up.

D. J. HILL'S STORY OF A PLAINFIELD COOK

A Bucknell University professor was talking about David Jayne Hill, formerly of this city, the successor in the Berlin Embassy to Charlemagne Tower, says the Los Angeles Times.

"Dr. Hill," he said, "impressed us here—you know he was our president for a number of years—no less with his wit than with his learning. He had thought and written on many subjects—psychology, rhetoric, socialism, finance—and to hear him discuss these subjects was a delight. I heard him take down one day an ultra-socialistic student.

"'Young man,' he said, 'you and your extravagant friends remind me in your attitude toward capital, of a Plainfield cook's attitude toward her mistress. One Christmas time, when I lived at Plainfield, a lady sent her cook out to buy the Christmas turkey. But when the cook returned, she had two chickens.

"'Martha,' the lady said, 'I told you to get a turkey, not chicken.'

"'I know, mum,' Martha answered, 'but I don't like turkey.'"

LOCAL Y. W. C. A. WORKERS AT MISS GOULD'S RECEPTION.

Miss Helen Gould entertained at her home, 597 Fifth avenue, New York, last Friday afternoon the members of the territorial committee of the Young Women's Christian Association for New York and New Jersey. Several members of the board of managers of the Plainfield association attended.

The speakers of the afternoon were the state secretaries who reported on the year's work. Mr. William Johnson, vice-president of the Y. M. C. A. of New York City, and Miss Grace Dodge, president of the National organization. The meeting was most delightful and instructive to those present.

The guests from Plainfield were Mrs. Frederick Mead, Miss Frederick Andrews and Mrs. Percy Stewart, members of the state committee, also Mrs. John Gray Foster, Mrs. Robert Lowry, Mrs. J. S. Schoonmaker, Mrs. Charles B. Tennant, Miss Margaret Mead and Miss Amy Tapping.

Preachers Exchange Pulpits.

Rev. Robert S. Townsend, of the church mission house at Trenton, who is temporarily in charge of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, preached at Holy Cross church yesterday morning. Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the borough church, occupied the pulpit at the Church of the Heavenly Rest in his stead. Despite the heavy storm, there was a good attendance at the services.

To Address Mother's' Club.

Prof. Maxmilian P. E. Groszmann, of Watchung Crest, will address the mother's club and teachers of the local schools at the Plainfield High School auditorium Wednesday afternoon. His topic will be "Some problems of Discipline."

SUICIDE AFTER TRAGEDY

Crazed by Grandson's Death, Mrs. Dora Schierholtz Kills Herself at Her Home.

MADE DEATH DOUBLY CERTAIN.

Brooded Over the Accidental Killing of Eddie Schierholtz in North Plainfield on November 23.

Crazed by the tragic death of her grandson, Herbert Schierholtz, who was accidentally killed in North Plainfield on November 23, Mrs. Dora Schierholtz committed suicide Saturday morning by slashing her wrist with a razor and hanging herself at her home, Emory street and Munroe avenue, Asbury Park. The body, dangling from the end of a rope fastened to a coat hanger on the back of a door, was discovered by Blanche Schierholtz, a sister of the boy who was killed.

When Mrs. Schierholtz, who was 73 years of age, failed to respond to summons to dinner Saturday noon, Edward Schierholtz, a son of the dead woman and a former borough resident, sent his daughter for her. Pushing open the door of her grandmother's room, across the hall, she peered in, and seing no one in the room was about to go out when the sound of something striking the door from the inside attracted her attention. Looking behind the door she gazed into the dead face of her grandmother, distorted and blood stained. The body was swinging from the end of a small piece of rope, which had been twisted several times around a coat hanger and tied in a single knot. To the end of a larger rope had been tied two smaller strands, scarcely larger than an ordinary piece of twine. This end the woman had fastened around her neck.

Screaming with horror the child ran across the hall and into her father's arms. Covering her face with her arms to shut out the ghastly sight, she pointed toward her grandmother's room and burst into hysterical sobbing.

Pushing his daughter gently aside, Mr. Schierholtz rushed over to his mothers room, suspecting all was not right but being little prepared for the horrible sight that greeted his eyes. There hanging on the back of the purple painted door was the lifeless body of his mother. The twine had cut deeply into her besh and a long gash in her right wrist showed that she had made death doubly certain.

Hastily cutting the body down, Mr. Schierholtz, believing that there might possibly be a chance of saving his mother's life, sent for a physician. The body was still warm when the doctor arrived, but he said the woman had probably been dead for over an hour. The discovery was made about 12.30 o'clock.

Mrs. Schierholtz was born in Germany and had been in this country over forty years. She removed to Asbury Park from the borough with her son shortly after Thanksgiving Day and had since lived with him. The aged woman had brooded continually since the death of her grandson and refused to be consoled. Otherwise she seemed to be in good spirits and had never threatened her life.

The accident by which young Schierholtz met his death occurred in North Plainfield on the evening of November 23. The boy, who was 11 years old, and lived with his maternal grandmother, Mrs. Kaeding, of Wilson avenue, had been sent to the store of Colonel Albert Perry for an yeast cake and had just placed his foot on the doorstep of the store when a gun which Perry was cleaning inside exployed, the charge going through the door and into young Schierholtz's abdomen. Perry rushed out only to find the boy dying on the ground. He expired a few minutes later. Perry was exonerated of all blame.

HOLY CROSS CHURCH HAS DONE MUCH IN PAST YEAR.

In the year book of the Church of the Holy Cross, recently issued, Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the parish, reports a most successful year in his letter to the parish. During the past twelve months, the parish debt of $2,500 has been wiped out, and only a small indebtedness remains. The parish house and robing room have been renovated, a new furnace put in, and a kitchen fitted up in the parish house. The church vestry is at present considering the purchase of the property adjourning the church on Washington avenue, with the idea of erecting a new church building.

The year book, which is annually issued at Advent, contains excellent photographic reproductions of the church interior, the Sunday-school room, the parish house kitchen, the choir boys' athletic team and scenes from the life at the choir boys' vacation camp in the Berkshires.

OUR 2ND ANNUAL JANUARY CLEARANCE SALE BEGINS TOMORROW

Our policy is, not to carry from one season to another any merchandise other than the most staple articles. During this sale which will continue for the balance of this month, we will not consider cost, our only thought being the closing out of all lines we are overstocked with, also broken assortments, odd lots, etc. These must be disposed of before we inventory. On account of the many items we quote, the type is necessarily small, but it will pay you to read every item. Don't fail to attend this great sale, as it will prove the most exceptional money-saving event in the "White Store" history.

POINTS FOR THE BUYERS

Fancy southern fruits in great abundance of perfection at Lusardi's shop on Front street. Bananas, oranges and all kinds of nuts a specialty.

Interior decoration, painting, varnishing and paper hanging, should only be entrusted to an expert. James C. Hansen, the East Front street decorator, will do the work right. Let him estimate.

When you mean to improve your property with a coat of paint or wall paper let Charles Conover & Co., of Elmwod place, estimate on the work. The firm uses only the best materials and the work will be satisfactory.

Everything in the house furnishing goods line, including cutlery, kitchen ware, as well as builders' materials can be found at low prices at the H. E. Gayle Hardware Company store. The goods are the best in the market.

If you have never traded with Roth & Co., of East Front street, you have no idea how much you can save on every purchase, besides you will always get the best cuts of meat, fresh fish and prompt deliveries are made to all parts of the city and borough.

Weinberger's clothing store on West Front street is the place to get bargains in men's clothing. A big sacrifice sale is now on and men cannot afford to lose this wonderful opportunity to get such clothing at low prices; also men's furnishings in a large variety.

A Pretty Safe Safe.

A remarkable burglar proof safe has been placed in a bank in England. At night the safe is lowered by cables into an impregnable metallic lined subvault of masonry and concrete. After reaching the bottom it is fastened down by massive steel lugs, operated by a triple time lock. Until these lugs are released automatically at a desired time no human agency can raise the safe, and to break in through a mass of stone and concrete which measures 10 feet by 10 feet by 16 feet with dynamite would wreck the building without making it possible to get at the safe.

Team Slides Down Hill to Creek.

Frank Lamb, of Cherry street, Montclair, figured in a unique "slide for life" at that place yesterday. Driving a wagon laden with barrels along Cherry street, he struck an icy incline. The horse and wagon began sliding down the slope, and for a hundred and fifty feet the outfit flew along like an express train, finally coming to a stop in a creek. Lamb jumped and saved himself from serious injury. The horse, wagon and barrels were badly mixed up, but they were rescued after two hours' work.

Too Improbable.

"Mr. Addemup," inquired Mr. Spotcash, head of the firm of Spotcash & Co., "can't you afford to smoke better cigars than that one?" "Not on my salary, sir," answered the bookkeeper. "Hereafter," rejoined his chief, "your salary will be $10 a week more." With a violent effort Hr. Addemup woke himself. He knew it was nothing but a dream.—Chicago Tribune.

Miss Lois Stanley a Bride.

Many Plainfield friends will learn with interest of the marriage of Miss Lois Stanley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Stanley, of Jacksonville, Florida, and Charles Bagwell, also of that place, which occurred on December 23 at the home of the bride's parents. The bride formerly visited Plainfield, where she has many acquaintances.

Sprinkling Cart Makes Appearance.

An unusual sight on Saturday was the appearance in the business section of one of the city sprinkling carts. The moderate temperature made it safe to sprinkle the streets and give merchants relief from the great amount of dust prevalent.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS

Don't be Frozen by Popcorn-Snow

You remember the old story of a mule that slept in a barn across from a popcorn field.

One night sparks from a passing engine set fire to the dry stalks and the corn got so thoroughly heated that it popped. Next morning at daybreak the old mule looked out of his window, saw the ground was white, and, thinking it was snow, froze to death.

The business man who gets scared stiff at false impressions of business conditions is equally hasty and unfortunate in his conclusions.

Recently, right in the midst of warm, glowing prosperity, business men woke up and saw a flurry of cold feet covering Wall Street. That little Wall Street excitement may have tempted certain alarmists to predict that the country is going to the eternal bow-wows. It isn't. It's only a flurry of near-snow. And there isn't a chilblain in a ton of it.

If the mule had gone out and browsed among the corn he would have found nothing to chill his nozzle. On the contrary, he'd have enjoyed a comfortable breakfast.

If the manufacturer will dip straight into the marketing possibilities of his product just now he will find unexpected success.

That's simply because his competitors are all inactive—transfixed with apprehension. There never was a time when good, aggressive action counted for so much.

Don't you be afraid of popcorn-snow.

If you manufacture or distribute an article of real merit, let us place before you definitely—without obligation—the possibilities of advertising it properly at the present time.

Newspaper advertising—as a wheel-mover of trade in all times—as a sure means of untying tied-up money in nervous times—has no equal.

The newspaper is the universal medium.

But newspapers, like all other mediums, must be wisely used—so that each advertising-dollar's weight will tell.

That is our part—to suggest, outline, construct and carry through unusual campaigns that bring unusual results.

We have an auxiliary salesmanship plan, too, that gets orders when orders are hard to get—just drop us a line and we'll tell you all about it.

May we call—at your convenience—and discuss the matter with you?

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

BASEBALL.

Regarding the American Association's desire to place a club in Chicago, President Johnson of the American League says: "I give President O'Brien and the club owners in the American Association credit for knowing the fundamental principles of the National Agreement. A schoolboy could tell by reading the agreement that the National Commission has nothing to do with changing territorial rights of any league. It is impossible to believe that either of the major leagues will give up any territory. Of course this is a free country and the Association has a perfect right to place a club in Chicago if it desires to break away from organized baseball. Perhaps in the long run it would be a good thing for baseball if the American Association or any other league would attempt to kick over the traces at this time. I will guarantee that there will be no baseball war for twenty years after we get through with them if they do start anything, for there is but one way out of it—a defeat for the outlaws." This means that when President O'Brien appears before the National Commission at Cincinnati next Monday with the request for the right to place a club in Chicago he will be met with a rather frosty reception.

The rumor is being circulated in the West that Chris Von der Ahe, once the owner of the St. Louis Browns and a picturesque figure in baseball fifteen years ago, is planning to return to the game as a magnate. Von der Ahe recently sold his saloon in St. Louis, which gave rise to the report that he would either back an out-law team in that city or run a similar affair in Chicago. When reporters visited Chris the other day to confirm these persistent reports, the Dutchman's servant said he was in bed, threatened with pneumonia, and that the physicians had left orders that he could not be disturbed under any circumstances. Von der Ahe's sad experience with the magnates who succeeded in getting his St. Louis club away from him after extended court proceedings, prompted him to make the memorable comment: "A man who goes into der star chamber mit der magnates, if he doesn't leave his vatch and money mit der hotel clerk first, iss von grand idiot!"

William Yawkey, the millionaire backer of the Detroit Americans, has resigned from the presidency of the club, and former Secretary Frank Navin has been elected in his place. Yawkey still retains a half interest in the club, but says that he can no longer find time to be actively associated with its affairs. He says that he promised to give Detroit a pennant winner before quitting and that he now feels that he is entitled to get into the background.

President Ebbets has closed a lease on Washington Park for five years, dating from next May, when the original ten years' lease signed when the Brooklyn Club grounds were opened, in 1898, expires. Ebbets had to pay a substantial advance, owing to the increased value of the property and the success of the club. No option on the Park could be obtained after 1913, but Ebbets says he entertains no fear as to a further lease.

GOLF.

The annual meeting of the Fox Hills Golf Club which maintains a course on Staten Island, will be held on January 27. It has an added importance this year, as there has been some talk of reorganization. Some time ago it was decided to levy an assessment on the members to meet the club's indebtedness, and the time limit for paying their assessment expired yesterday. One of the directors said last night that so far as he knew the members had responded to the call. If, however, they do not put their shoulders to the wheel a reorganization seems inevitable.

Herbert L. Pratt has been elected president of the Nassau Country Club for the coming year, and J. R. Maxwell, jr., is vice president; A. P. Alvord, secretary; C. D. Smithers, treasurer, and Howard W. Maxwell, captain. The chairman of the various committees have also been chosen, as follows: Golf, F. C. Jennings; house, Charles A. Frank; grounds, H. F. Whitney; membership, F. P. Moore; lawn tennis, George D. Pratt; auditing, A. G. Hodenpyl. These men will select their associates in the near future.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Wilton Lackaye and a splendid company of twenty-five players in "The Bondsman" is the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tonight.

A George M. Cohan play, under Cohan and Harris management, with Edna Wallace Hopper in the stellar role, is about as good a combination as any house manager can ask, so things look bright at the New Plainfield theatre, where "50 Miles from Boston" comes tomorrow night, with dainty Miss Hopper as a blushingly demure little village postmistress. Miss Hopper's new role is as different as can be imagined from her haughty lady of fashion in "Floradora," or the careless circus girl in "The Silin "The Heart of Maryland" back in in "The Hart of Maryland" back in her Balasco days, but critics have praised her work in "50 Miles from Boston," which is said to be exactly suited to her dainty personality. Cohan and Harris have surrounded her with a brilliant company which includes Laurence Wheat, James C. Marlowe, Hazel Lowry, Lores Grimm, James Bradbury, Emma Janiver, George Parsons and Louise Rial. A fine chorus of Broadway beauties who can sing and dance is also promised. Mr. Cohan has written some new songs for "50 Miles from Boston." The are "Jack and Jill," "My Small Town Gal," "Harrigan," "Boys Who Fight the Flames," and "Waltz with Me."

Novelty in any form of theatrical offering rules the day with a firm and convincing hand, the greater and more decided the novelty the stronger the belief in its powers of endurance. In no direction has the idea of novelty moved with more determined force than in the preparations for musical comedy, a style of stage entertainment that holds public affection with a sure and loving grasp. "Happy Hooligan's Trip Around the World," the latest recruit to the ranks of fun and music amalgamation, and which hopes to emphasize its success at the New Plainfield theatre next Thursday night, is reported to fairly reek with novelty. In fact our amusement friends have learned that for genuine novelty of the very advanced kind, "Happy Hooligan's Trip Around the World" is entitled to the palm. At any rate the interest in a musical comedy, with pretty girls, beautiful gowns, magnificent scenic effects, and all the other real favors, has never been so highly keyed up as it is, concerning this one which claims plot as well as striking features in its announcements.

SECRETARY TAFT TO BE THERE.

Will Speak at Dinner of Yale Alumni in East Orange.

Secretary of War William H. Taft, Yale '78, is expected to be the guest of honor at the alumni dinner of the Essex County Yale Alumni Association, at the Woman's Clubhouse, East Orange, January 24.

Besides Secretary Taft the speakers will be Governor-elect Fort, Professor William L. Phelps and John Oxenbridge. Assemblyman Austen Colgate, who is president of the association, will preside.

Announcement is made of the engagement of William Taylor Jelliffe, of North Branch, to Miss Elizabeth Leigh Ten Eyck, of New Centre. Mr. Jelliffe is well known here where he has many friends.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS.

Owing to an outbreak of diphtheria among the pupils the public school at Cologne, near Egg Harbor City, has been closed.

In extinguishing a fire that threatened to destroy her home at Hightstown, Mrs. A. M. Norton suffered severe burns to her hands.

Mounted policemen went on duty in the Second and Third police districts of Camden Saturday. As soon as the city purchases more horses all the outlying districts of Camden will be covered by mounted officers.

There is no race suicide in Atlantic City. The Board of Health reports 678 births and 486 deaths. There were 527 marriages. It was the best year for the stork since the bureau was established thirty years ago.

For the alleged smashing in of the door of the house of his boarding mistress, Mrs. May Varielle, of Beverly, and threatening her life, J. R. Chambers was committed to the county jail Friday night by Squire Jones. Chambers was ejected from the house early in the evening by male boarders.

The new borough council of Pennsgrove will make an ecort to include within the borough limits the Dupont Powder Works adjoining. This is said to be agreeable to the company, providing the tax rate is not higher than that paid in the township. The borough rate is $1.75 while the township is $1.06.

From burns he received by the explosion of a lamp on a boat moored at Cooper's Point in Camden, about a week ago Louis Brown, of Elsmere, Del., died in the Cooper Hospital, Camden, yesterday afternoon. After his clothes caught fire Brown jumped overboard aflame and was rescued from drowning by two men.

A proposition to convert the hundred acre city park at Egg Harbor City into a health resort by Dr. Chas. Smith, who offers to replace the present buildings in the park with fine new structures, to erect boathouses and furnish boats. He also asks a franchise for a trolley to connect the park with Egg Harbor City.

Amy Barber, eighteen years old, of Milville wandered from home in her night clothes and when the Cape May local train came along she stopped on the track and beckoned to the engineer, who, by applying the emergency brake stopped the train in time. The girl fled to the wods, where she was found almost frozen and taken home. Melancholia is said to be the cause.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. Church will meet in Vincent Chapel tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The Boys' Mission Band of the Crescent Avenue Church, will meet in the large parlor at 4 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon. It is hoped that every member will attend.

Mrs. J. D. Runyon will present a paper on "Missions in the Philippines," at the mid-week prayer meeting in the First Baptist Church Wednesday night. The topic for the service will be "The Progress of the Kingdom."

The Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the First Baptist Church will meet tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. Mrs. William B. Vail will lead the devotional exercises and Mrs. Charles H. Smith will speak on "Medical Missions." Mrs. J. D. Runyon will present current events.

Miss Phoebe Hicks, of Brooklyn, is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Leader, of Duer street.

LOST SOUTH SEAS CONTINENT.

Australian Professor Seeks Solution of Ancient Mystery.

The lost continent of the South seas is a pet study of Dr. Woolnough of Sydney university. The main difficulty in the way of reconciling existing conditions with an original great area was that depths of 2,000 fathoms occurred between the islands. It was necessary to look for land evidence of faulting or breaking to account for the submarine depths. The granite area in Viti Leva was found to be from 400 to 600 square miles in extent, underlying the modern volcanic rocks. A range of granite mountains with precipitous cliffs on each side gave evidence of heavy faults creating chasms of great depth. He found the rivers forming a marked rectangular network, an upraised coral reef 200 feet above the sea level, conglomerate rock showing sea shells at a height of 800 feet above the sea, and certain tilts and tufts which had formerly been submarine and were now at a height of 4,500 feet. All these indicated a tremendous uplift sufficient to cause greater faulting, in the original continent. The rivers of Fiji were of comparatively youthful development, and even at present passing through the canon cycle.

REPARTEE OF THE JUVENILES.

Washington Children in Smart Exchange of Compliments.

Evidently there was a severance of friendly relations between two of a group of small girls who a minute before had been romping about the sward in Dupont Circle, for just as the writer approached the daughter of a southern legislator called out to her small companion from the west: "The girl with the red dress on is a cowgirl! The girl with the red dress on is a cowgirl!" Again and again the taunting challenge was hurled at the red-frocked western maid, who finally, with one supreme effort at self-control, retorted: "Oh, very well, then, the girl who is a-hollerin' is a sheep! I'd sooner be a cowgirl than a sheep, 'cause the president is fond of cowboys and cowgirls, but not even a secretary likes a sheep!"

He Knew How.

"How," asked the young man who had just bought the village paper and desired to win prominence as an editor, "can I get the public to become interested in my journal? I know the principal thing is to make a good paper, but if nobody takes it how will anyone find out that it is good? Something must be done to attract attention—to cause the people to understand that we are on earth.' "That'll be easy," said the traveling printer, who had stopped over to assist in putting the patient on its feet. "Just print an item saying that a certain preacher in this town will get into trouble if he doesn't cease paying attentions to a certain married member of his flock and cease quick. I'll bet the paper containing that item won't be off the press 40 minutes before there's a copy of it in every house in this town."—Chicago RecordHerald.

Fat Men and Jobs.

Employment agents say it's about as hard to get work for a fat man as for a gray-haired one. According to their statements, employers of labor hold that a fat man is indolent. They assert that the hustler, the fast, nervous, energetic worker, is sinewy rather than fat, and does 30 per cent. more work than the soft, fat fellow. "It is not uncommon for us to advise fat applicants to diet," said an employment agent, "and reduce their weight before beginning to canvass for a job." So far as recorded, Dr. Osler has expressed no opinion on the expediency of chloroforming men who are running to adipose tissue.

All Were Prime Ministers.

An eminent surgeon was once sent for by Cardinal Du Bois, prime minister of France, to perform a very serious operation upon him. The cardinal said to him: "You must not expect to treat me in the same rough manner as you treat your poor miserable wretches at your Hotel Dieu." "My lord," replied the surgeon, with great dignity, "every one of those miserable wretches, as your eminence is pleased to call them, is a prime minister in my eyes."—Success Magazine.

Worse and Worse.

A convict in a German prison had been extremely refractory. One means and another had been tried, but nothing could break his spirit. One morning the governor said to the warder: "I say, Huber, the scoundrel is behaving worse than ever. Put him on bread and water." "But he is already doing two fast days, sir." "Then give him a cookery book to read. We must break his spirit somehow."—Illustrated Bits.

Simple and Logical.

A teacher observed what he thought a lack of patriotic enthusiasm in one of the boys under his instruction. "Now, Tommy," said he, "tell us what you think if you saw the stars and stripes waving over the field of battle." "I should think," was the logical reply of Thomas, "that the wind was blowing."

Information.

The visitor to New York was in search of information. "Do you know anything about the copper corner?" he asked his host. "No," was the reply, "but I know the corner copper."

The Union Building & Loan Association

as an investment is the safest and best for the wage earner or person of moderate means, yielding at all times larger returns than any saving institution. All the profits are divided annually among the shareholders. The funds of the association are loaned to its members on first mortgage, this makes the security the very best. There is no speculation whatever connected with the business of this association. Its directors are all local business men who personally look after all its affairs. The money as it is received is immediately invested. No money is kept laying idle, in this way the profits are constantly growing, so that a series will mature between ten and eleven years.

A New Series Will be Opened on

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN.

New Market residents are dissatisfied with the arrangements of the New Market Field Club in keeping their club rooms open on Sunday, claiming that the room over Clark Rogers office in the village, which has been secured as a club room, is now little more than a lounging place for the club members, who congregate there Sundays as well as week days. The stormy weather of yesterday brought fewer members to the club room than there were last week, when the young men kept things lively for a Sunday afternoon and evening. The organization rented the rooms so that the members might have a place to congregate evenings and Sundays, instead of holding their meetings at the homes of the various members. There are about twenty members of the club, all young men over sixteen years of age, and it is reported that action will be taken by certain residents of the village to have the club rooms closed on Sundays. William T. Piddington is president of the organization, which is active in all branches of athletics.

The week of prayer in the local churches concluded with services last night. These closing services were but slimly attended on account of the rain. At the First Baptist Church, Rev. Henry N. Jordan spoke at the young people's rally early in the evening, and later preached from the topic "Growth" at the regular evening service. Rev. George H. Gardner conducted the service at the Seventh-day Baptist Church Saturday night, and Rev. W. W. Casselberry spoke last evening at the Presbyterian Church. During the week services were held each evening at the various churches and much interest has been shown by the congregations.

New Market pond was well patronized by local skaters Saturday when the ice was in fine condition. Skating parties from Plainfield came to take advantage of the sport, and the pond was thronged afternoon and evening. Yesterday's storm weakened the ice, which was not very thick, so as to make skating dangerous today, and the small boys have been warned to keep off the ice.

The Dunellen A. C. will hold an entertainment and smoker for members at the Jr. O. U. A. M. Hall tonight and a big turn-out is looked for. There will be a musical entertainment by local talent and pipes and tobacco will be supplied for the smokers.

The Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church will meet with Mrs. W. W. Casselberry at the manse tomorrow afternoon.

Mrs. Francis F. Randolph, who has been quite ill during the past week, is able to be about again.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Funeral services of Mrs. Jemima Parse, who died at her home on Front street, Saturday morning, will be held from the house tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The storm yesterday morning interfered materially with the attendance of the morning church services, but few being out at any of the services.

John E. Flannery, of East Second street, Plainfield, spent Sunday with his daughter, Mrs. George H. Johnston, of Westfield avenue.

Mr. William Hazel and daughter, of Plainfield, were the guests Sunday of Miss Hazel's father, A. L. Frentz, of Westfield avenue.

Charles Hengler has removed from Plainfield to the Hollingsworth house, Valley Road.

The weekly meeting of the B. Y. O. U. was held last night in the church parlors.

Anthony Warnock was the guest over Sunday of relatives in New York.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society was held at the home of Mrs. R. B. Manning. A literary entertainment will be given in a short time. Rev. C. W. F. Attlee was requested to give one of his lectures on "Dickens," some time in March.

Miss Matilda Nevius, who resides with her sister, Mrs. J. Manning, has returned home after spending several weeks with relatives at Middlebush.

Miss Catherine Harrison, of Potter's Crossing, is spending a few weeks with Mrs. Lewis Dunn on Maple avenue.

Nellie Manning, who is teaching in the public school at Irvington, spent the week here with her parents.

The youngest child of George J. May, manager of the Sunswick Poultry farm, is ill with bronchitis.

Mrs. Clara Smith has returned from a visit with her sister in New York City.

USED POISON OF RATTLESNAKE.

Preparation That Made War Arrows of Cherokee Indians Deadly.

An old Cherokee Indian recently gave away the secret how the Indians of olden times used to poison their arrow heads for war purposes or for killing bears, according to the Denver Field and Farm. They took a fresh deer liver, fastened it to a long pole, and then went to certain places where they knew they would find rattlesnakes in abundance. About midday the rattlers are all out of their dens, coiled up in the cooking sun. The bucks would poke the first rattler they found with the liver on the long pole. A rattler, unlike common snakes, always shows fight in preference to escaping. The snake would thus repeatedly strike at the liver with its fangs until its poison was all used up, whereupon it would quit striking and try slowly to move on. The bucks would then hunt up another rattler and repeat the performance, keeping up the work until the liver was well soaked with snake poison. Then the pole was carried home and fastened somewhere in an upward position until the liver became as dry as a bone. The liver was then pounded to a fine powder and placed in a buckskin bag, to be used as needed for their arrows. This powder would stick like glue to any moistened surface and was death to any creature which it entered on arrows.

TOOK HIS OWN FROM ROBBER.

How a Pilgrim Got Back His Stolen Purse in Church.

From Czenstochowa, the Mecca of Polish pilgrims, comes an amazing story of coincidences. A pilgrim went to one of the priests and complained that some thief had stolen his purse while he was in church, and asked for money. The priest replied that he had no money and that the best thing for the pilgrim to do was to try to find the thief. "I shall go into the church and steal money from somebody else," said the pilgrim, "for I have nothing to go home with." He went into the church and seeing a man in the crowd with a wallet on his back slipped his hand into it and pulled out his own stolen purse, with the exact sum he had left in it. He was so glad to find his money that he hurried off to tell the priest and the thief got away.

First Idea of the Telegraph.

Long before Prof. S. F. B. Morse had perfected his great invention the word "telegraph" was used for a sort of semaphore. In the French revolution a "telegraph," assisted by telescopes, was devised to carry news over immense distances. Forty years before this time, however, there was published the first detailed scheme for communication by means of electricity. It is outlined in a letter to the Scots magazine, written February 1, 1753, from Renfrew and signed "C. M." This suggestion was to transmit a "charge from the conductor of an electrical machine at the sending station along an insulated wire to the receiving machine, the presence of the charge being indicated by the behavior of a light pith ball or the passage of a spark." Each letter of the alphabet was to have a separate wire, so that any word might be spelled out and any message sent.

"Time, the Great Healer."

A doctor who had treated a patient for a long time without giving relief finally wrote to him that he could do no more, and that tempus edax rerum was the only remedy. The patient immediately went to a drug store and applied for the remedy. The druggist gave him a bottle of some kind of mixture and charged him a large sum for it. After the patient had taken the compound for some time he met his doctor and thanked him for the wonderful prescription, which had cured him. The druggist's trick was discovered and the patient sued him for the money spent on the bogus medicine.

Trend of Civilization.

I had thought that civilization meant the attainment of peace and order and freedom, of good will between man and man, of the love of truth, and the hatred of injustice, and by consequence the attainment of the good life which these things breed, a life free from craven fear, but full of incident; that was what I thought it meant, not more stuffed chairs and more cushions, and more carpets and gas, and more dainty meat and drink—and therewithal more and sharper difference between class and class.—William Morris.

"Shopping Headache."

A prominent physician says that "shoppers' headache" is due to the fact that one has not eaten enough. He declares that no work is so nerve trying as shopping, and advises a good, substantial luncheon in the midst of the store hunt. Take an hour for rest and eat, thinking as little as possible of the tasks yet to be accomplished, and there will not be such a splitting headache to take home.

Making Sure.

Artist—I want to get a frame for a rather important picture I've just finished. Picture Dealer—Certainly, sir. For your own use? Artist—No; I'm sending it to the exhibition. Picture Dealer—Just step this way. I've the very thing. There! You see; the design of the frame is a nymph on each side! Absolutely excludes all danger of having the picture hung upside

THE HALL OF FAME.

The new king of Sweden is one of the best shots in Europe.

William T. Stead's lates hobby is the bacteriological regeneration of barren land in England.

Miss Cornelia H. Herriman, second daughter of E. H. Harriman, is announced to be engaged to marry Robert Livingston Gerry, son of Elbridge T. Gerry, of New York.

Daniel Reilly, of Mansfield, O., has all the windows and doors of his house wired and connected with a phonograph, which sings out when connection is broken, "Get out of here or I'll fill you with lead."

Vice-President Fairbanks has appointed Senators Cullom an Bacon as regents of the Smithsonian institution to fill vacancies, and Speaker Cannon has reappointed Representatives Dalzell, Mann and Howard as regents.

After thirty-six consecutive years with the Pullman company, George F. Brown, of Chicago, sixty-four years old, treasurer of that corporation and recently its general manager, has retired. Mr. Brown entered the employ of the Pullman company in 1871. He has been retired on a pension.

Henry B. Seaman, who has become chief engineer of the public service commission of New York city, at a salary of $15,000, is a self made man, a product of the east side, New York, and is forty-six years old. He is six feet tall, powerfully built and is physically impressive. He comes of Quaker stock, being on his father's side a descendant of Elias Hicks, a noted Quaker preacher, while an ancestor of his mother was a brother of Oliver Cromwell.

Playing Before the King.

A "command" to play before the king is always appreciated by actors, but the honor of taking a company to Windsor or Sandringham is an expensive one, says the Dundee Advertiser. First class railway tickets are provided by his majesty's secretary, but everything else has to be paid by the manager. These expenses include special scenery to suit the improvised stage, the carriage of properties and dresses and the cab fares for the members of the company, who always arrive in London at an unearthly hour, when "growlers" are few and far between. Sir John Hare's recent appearance before the king cost him about $4,000.

The New Chinese Army.

Reorganization of the Chinese army, which began three years ago, is making steady headway. The Peiho army is already completely organized. It consists of three divisions of 9,000 men each, formed on the European model. To this Peiho army of thirty-six infantry battalions, twelve cavalry squadrons and six engineer battalions there is a reserve of 40,000 trained and disciplined soldiers. Six other divisions more or less regularly constituted occupy the northern garrisons of the Celestial empire, or the immediate neighborhood of Peking, and form the northern army.

WOMAN HURLS SELF BEFORE FAST TRAIN.

On Way to See Her Baby, Orange Patient Ends Life.

Mrs. Marie Lemcke Bohme, who threw herself in front of a Lackawanna train in Newark yesterday afternoon, lived at No. 16 Fairview avenue, Orange. She was twenty-three years old, and was the wife of Henry O. Bohme and daughter of Ernest E. Lemcke, of No. 36 Fuller terrae. She and Mr. Bohme were married about three years ago and have a son about three months old. At the Lemcke home it was said that Mrs. Bohme had not been well for some time and that she evidently ended her life while temporarily insane. Before she left her home she said she was going to walk over to her own house to see her baby.

The body was taken to Kunz's morgue in Orange, where it was identified by Ralph Bohme, the dead woman's brother-in-law.

NEW JERSEY SHELL FISH.

State Bureau Excepts to Findings of Hahn Committee.

The New Jersey Bureau of Shell Fisheries in its annual report takes vigorous exception to the finding of the Hahn investigating committee.

The one dominating thought which prevails throughout the report for the improvement of the oyster industry is the development of the natural seed beds.

A plan for development that is suggested is that the natural beds be properly leased as planting grounds, under intelligent restriction. The old scheme of shelling the beds is not recommended.

New Jersey is spoken of as having taken first rank in the oyster producing States since the adoption of the plan of State control.

"What is most needed in New Jersey now," says the report, "is careful, intelligent and comprehensive readjustment of the existing laws governing the industry, so that what is now regarded as the top-heavy plan of government may be simplified."

The State is now divided into four districts, governed by four commissions. The statistics of the report show that there are now 23,616,75 acres of oyster lands leased, that 945 licenses are outstanding and that the total receipts for the last year from leases and licenses were $23,346.20. The total sum handled by the bureau in 1907 was $30,011.

PENNSY CALLS OFF LOBBYIST.

Will Rely On Its Lawyers For Work At Trenton This Year.

The Pennsylvania Railroad will not have a lobbyist at the State House at Trenton this winter. It will be the first session in many years during which Colonel Richard B. Reading will be missing from the corridors.

Colonel Reading has been in the Pennsylvania Company's employ ever since he was a youth, and for years has been its legislative agent. Colonel Reading is assistant inspector-general of rifle practise on General Spencer's staff, and is not only an exceptionally fine marksman, but a lover of all good sports.

The Pennsylvania Company has decided to rely in the future on its law department in the matter of attention to legislation. The company has adopted the same plan with the Pennsylvania Legislature.

"UNWRITTEN LAW" IGNORED.

Bergen Jury Convicts Man Who Punched Wife's Insulter.

The unwritten law was ignored Thursday at Hackensack, when a jury convicted Benjamin D. Stern, a merchant, of assault on Alfred H. Schaefer, his neighbor, in Ridgefield Park. Mrs. Stern told her husband Schaefer had said as he passed her:

"Oh, there's a pretty girl; I'll get a kiss!" and Stern punched Schaefer.

Chief of Police Hayes and many others testified to Stern's good reputation.

"How do you determine his reputation?" asked Prosecutor Koester.

"Because he is not on our black list," said the chief. "When a man stays out late o' nights and cavorts around our patrolmen put him on the black list."

The prosecutor was so certain the jury would acquit that he did not sum up.

Wants Hudson Man for Assessor.

Soon after Governor-elect Fort is inaugurated Mayor Wittpenn of Jersey City man be appointed successor to Eckhard P. Budd, of Burlington county, of the State Board of Assessors, whose term expires next March. The decision of the Errors Court placing the assessing of second class railroad property in the hands of the State Board, Mayor Wittpenn thinks, renders it necessary that some representative of Jersey City familiar with its values should be on the board.

Steeplejack Falls 30 Feet.

Frank Tallon, a Trenton "steeplejack," placed a new cross on the Greek Catholic church there yesterday, rescended from the high steeple to the main roof and then slipped and fell a distance of thirty feety feet to the ground. He was picked up unconscious and hurried to a hospital, where it was found that he was not dangerously hurt.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

Maxine Elliott has scored nicely in her latest play, "Under the Greenwood Tree."

William Faversham has signed to appear in "The Squaw Man" in London during the spring.

John Drew's season in New York in "My Wife" is said to be one of the most successful he has ever played in that city.

William Morgan, who has been with the Robers brothers in several of their former plays, will appear with them again in "The Rogers Brothers in Panama."

Miss Mary Ryan will play one more season with "Brewster's Millions;" then, if the proper vehicle can be found, she will be a star in the season of 1908-9.

Richard Carle's latest production, "Mary's Lamb," has been withdrawn from the stage and permanently shelved. This is the musical play in which Harry Conor has been starring.

Mrs. Rida Johnson Young is at work on a comedy, "Sweet Sixteen," for Margaret Clark, which is to be produced in February, and will write a rural play on "Life on the Eastern Shore."

Franz Lehar, the composer of "The Merry Widow," is to have a new comic opera produced in Vienna called "The Man With Three Wives." The American rights have already been secured, but by whom it is not stated.

RIPPER LAW ARGUMENT.

When the argument on the constitutionality of the "ripper law" comes up before Justices Pitney and Hendrickson, in Newark, today, Warren Dixon, Corporation Counsel of Jersey City, will have Charles L. Corbin and ex-Senator Edwards to assist him in endeavoring to convince the court that the act is good law. Mr. Edwards drew up the measure.

Robert Davis, who is deeply interested in the outcome of the case, has employed Messrs. Corbin and Edwards as private counsel. The decision is awaited with great anxiety in Jersey City, and if a decision favorable to the Fagan men is given by Monday, their dollar dinner on that night will be a jollification affair.

PITH AND POINT.

Some men are able to do nothing well except eat, sleep and find fault.

It is easy for the man who isn't interested to tell the man who is to hope.

When you give a man a "dig," remember that he will probably "get even." Men harbor grudges.

Blessings on polite people! People admire them more than they admire the rich and the great. And how easy it is to be polite.

When we are in trouble, some people can say, "Isnt it too bad?" and make us madder than though they should say, "I'm glad of it."—Atchison Globe.

Greets Burglars With Bullets.

With an idea that two suspicious looking men that were lounging about Masonic Hall, Nutley, might try to break into his drug store Thursday night, James G. Crammond sat by a window with revolver in hand to welcome the thieves. At 3 oclock he saw two men back a junk wagon up to the curb in front of the store. As they attempted to force open a window, Crammond fired two shots at the would-be looters, who jumped into the wagon and drove away. John Carr, a milkman, gave chase to the men, but did not go far, as the men in the wagon shot at him.

Fire Destroys Hay Press.

The large hay press located at Whitehouse Station, which was owned by Mrs. Catherine Clark, of that place, and the contents, representing an unusual supply of hay, which was the property of Samuel D. Skillman, were destroyed by fire at 1 o'clock this morning, resulting in a loss of many thousands of dollars. The building, which was situated near the railroad station, was one of the landmarks. Mr. Skillman had had it under lease for several years. The cause of the fire is a mystery. The building and contents were covered by insurance.

Jury Deems Each Leg Worth $3,250.

New Brunswick, Jan. 11.—The jury in the case of Christian A. Anderson, of Metuchen, against the Public Service Corporation yesterday returned a verdict for $6,500 and costs for the plaintiff. Anderson claimed $20,000 for the loss of his legs, as a result of an accident. The defense vainly sought to show that Anderson was intoxicated.

The Fighting Chance.

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS.

Copyright, 1906, by Robert W. Chambers.

It was not until he had dressed for dinner that he saw her again, seated on the stairs with Marion Page, a new appearance of intimacy for both women, who heretofore had found nothing except a passing civility in common.

Marion explained that Siward was too busy to do any southern shooting, which was why he was glad to have her polish Sagamore on Jersey woodcock.

"I thought it was not good for a dog to be used by anybody except his master," said Sylvia carelessly.

"Only second raters suffer. Besides, I have shot enough now with Mr. Siward to use his dog as he does."

"He is an agreeable shooting companion," smiled Sylvia.

"He is perfect," answered Marion coolly. "The only test for a thoroughbred is the field. He rings true."

They exchanged carefully impersonal views on Siward's good qualities for a moment or two. Then Marion said bluntly, "Do you know anything in particular about that Patroons club affair?"

"No," said Sylvia, "nothing in particular."

"Neither do I, and I don't care to. I mean that I don't care what he did, and I wish that gossiping old major would stop trying to hint it to me."

"My uncle!"

"Oh, I forgot! Beg your pardon, you know, but the major hinted that the woman—the one who figured in it—is—rather exclusively Mr. Siward's 'property.'"

And all through dinner an indefinitely unpleasant remembrance of the conversation lingered with Sylvia, and she sat silent for minutes at a time, returning to actualities with a long, curious side glance across at Siward and an uncomprehending smile of assent for whatever Quarrier or Major Belwether had been saying to her.

Cards she managed to avoid after dinner and stood by Quarrier's chair for half an hour, absently watching the relentless method and steady adherence to rule which characterized his bridge playing. Then she turned on her heel, restless, depressed, inclined for companionship. The Page boys had tempted Rena and Eileen to the billiard room; Voucher, Alderdene and Major Belwether were huddled over a table immersed in preference; Kathryn Tassel and Grace Ferrall sat together looking over the announcements of Sylvia's engagement in a batch of New York papers just arrived; Ferrall was writing at a desk, and Siward and Marion were occupied in the former's sketch for an ideal shooting vehicle to be built on the buckboard principle, with a clever arrangement for dogs, guns, ammunition and provisions. Siward's profile as it bent in the lamplight over the paper was very engaging.

Siward's profile was very engaging.

Sylvia had taken a hesitating step toward them, but halted, turning irresolutely, and suddenly over her crept a sensation of isolation—something of that feeling which had roused her at midnight from her bed and driven her to Grace Ferrall for a refuge from she knew not what.

The rustle of her silken dinner gown was scarcely perceptible as she turned. Siward, moving his head slightly, glanced up, then brought his sketch to a brilliant finish.

"Don't you think something of this sort is practicable?" he asked pleasantly, including Mrs. Ferrall and Kathryn Tassel in a general appeal which brought them into the circle of two. Grace Ferrall leaned forward, looking over Marion's shoulder, and Siward rose and stepped back, with a quick glance into the hall—in time to catch a glimmer of pale blue and lace on the stairs.

"I suppose my cigarettes are in my room as usual," he said aloud to himself, wheeling so that he could not have time to see Marion's offer of her little gold incrusted case or notice her quickly raised eyes, bright with suspicion and vexation.

He greeted her in his usual careless, happy fashion just as she reached her chamber door, and she turned at the sound of his voice, confused, unsmiling, a little pale.

"Is it headache or are you, too, in quest of cigarettes?" he asked as he stopped in passing her where she stood, one slender hand on the knob of her door.

"I don't smoke, you know," she said, looking up at him, with a cold little laugh. "It isn't headache, either. I was—boring myself, Mr. Siward."

"Is there any virtue in me as a remedy?"

"Oh, I have no doubt you have lots of virtues. Perhaps you might do as a temporary remedy—first aid to the injured." She laughed again uncertainly. "But you are on a quest for cigarettes."

"A rendezvous—with the sand man. Good night."

"Good night, if you must say it."

"It's polite to say something, isn't it?"

"It would be polite to say, 'With pleasure, Mr. Siward!'"

"But you haven't invited me to do anything—not even to accept a cigarette. Besides, you didn't expect to meet me up here?"

The trailing accent made it near enough a question for him to say, "Yes, I did."

"How could you?"

"I saw you leave the room."

"You were sketching for Marion Page. Do you wish me to believe that you noticed me and"—

"And followed you? Yes, I did follow you."

She looked at him, then past him toward a corner of the wide hall where a maid in cap and apron sat pretending to be sewing. "Careful!" she motioned with smiling lips. "Servants gossip. Good night again."

"Couldn't we have a moment"—

"No."

"One minute"—

"Hush! I must open my door"—lingering. "I might come out again if you have anything particularly important to communicate to me."

"I have. There's a big bay window at the end of the other corridor. Will you come?"

But she opened the door, with a light laugh, saying "Good night!" again and closed it noiselessly behind her.

He walked on, turning into his corridor, but kept straight ahead, passing his own door, on to the window at the end of the hall, then north along a wide passageway which terminated in a bay window overlooking the roof of the indoor swimming tank.

It appeared that he had cigarettes enough, for he lighted one presently and, leaving his chair, curled up in the cushioned and pillowed window seat, gathering his knees together under his arm.

The cigarette he had lighted went out. He had bitten into it and twisted it so roughly that it presently crumbled, and he threw the rags of it into a metal bowl, locking his jaws in silence, for the night threatened to be a bad one for him. A heavy fragrance from his neighbor's wineglass at dinner had stirred up what had for a time lain dormant, and by accident something—some sweetmeat he had tasted—was saturated in brandy.

Now his restlessness at the prospect of a blank night had quickened to uneasiness, with a hint of fever tinting his skin, but as yet the dull ache in his body was scarcely more than a premonition.

He had his own devices for tiding him over such periods—reading, tobacco and the long, blind, dogged tramps he took in town, but here tonight in the rain one stood every chance of walking off the cliffs, and he was sick of reading himself sightless over the sort of books sent wholesale to Shotover, and he was already too ill at ease physically to make smoking endurable.

After awhile he began to walk monotonously to and fro the length of the corridor, like a man timing his steps to the heavy ache of body or mind. Once he went as far as his own door, entered and, stepping to the wash basin, let the icy water run over hands and wrists. This sometimes helped to stimulate and soothe him. It did now for awhile—long enough to change the current of his thoughts to the girl he had hoped might have the imprudence to return for a tryst, innocent enough in itself, yet unconventional and unreasonable enough to prove attractive to them both.

Probably she wouldn't come. She had kept her fluffy skirts clear of him since cup day, which simply corroborated his vague estimate of her. Had she done the contrary his estimate would have been the same, for unconsciously, but naturally, he had prejudged her. A girl who could capture Quarrier at full noontide and in the face of all Manhattan was a girl equipped for anything she dared, though she was probably too clever to dare too much; a girl to be interested in, to amuse and be amused by; a girl to be reckoned with. His restlessness and his fever subdued by the icy water, he stood drying his hands, thinking coolly how close he had come to being seriously in love with this young girl, whose attitude was always a curious temptation, whose smile was a charming provocation, whose youth and beauty were to him a perpetual challenge. He admitted to himself calmly that he had never seen a woman he cared as much for; that for the brief moment of his declaration he had known an utterly new emotion, which inevitably must have become the love he had so quietly declared it to be. He had never before felt as he felt then, cared as he cared then. Anything had been possible for him at that time—any degree of love, any devotion, any generous renunciation. Clear sighted, master of himself, he saw love before him and knew it when he saw it—recognized it, was ready for it, offered it, emboldened by her soft hands so eloquent in his.

And in his arms he held it for an instant, he thought, spite of the sudden inertia, spite of the according of cold lips and hands still colder, relaxed, inert—held it until he doubted.

Then she had become intelligent again, with a little laughter, a little malice, a becoming tint of hesitation and confusion. All the sense, all the arts, all the friendly sweetness of a woman thorough in training, schooled in self possession, clear enough to be audacious and perverse without danger to herself, to the man or to the main chance.

He leisurely and mentally took the measure of his own state of mind and found all well, all intact; found himself still master of his affections and probably clear minded enough to remain so under the circumstances.

By instinct and experience normally temperate, only what was abnormal and inherited might work a mischief in this man. His listlessness, his easy acquiescence, were but consequent upon the self knowledge of self control, but mastery of the master vice required something different. He was sick of sickness, and because in this sickness will, mind and body are tainted, too, reason and logic lack charity, and to the signals of danger his reply had always been either overconfident or weak, and it had been always the same reply: "Not yet. There is time." And now, this last week, it had come upon him that the time was now. The skirmish was already on, and it had alarmed him suddenly to find that the skirmish was already a battle, and a rough one.

As he stood there he heard voices on the stairs. People had already begun to retire, because late cards and point shooting at dawn do not agree. And a point shooting picnic in snugly elaborate blinds was popular with women, or was supposed to be.

Little by little the tumult died away. He turned and looked grimly at his bed; then, shutting off the lights, he opened his door and went out into the deserted corridor, where the elevator shaft was dark and only the dim night lights burned at angles in the passageways.

He had his rain coat and cap with him, not being certain of what he might be driven to, but for the present he found the bay window overlooking the swimming tank sufficient to begin the vigil.

Secure from intrusion, as there were no bedrooms on that corridor, he tossed coat and cap into the window seat, walked to and fro for awhile listening to the rain, then sat down, his well shaped head between his hands, and in silence he faced the enemy.

How long he had sat there he did not know. When he raised his face, all gray and drawn with the tension of conflict, his eyes were not very clear, nor did the figure standing there in the dim light from the hall mean anything for a moment.

"Mr. Siward?" in an uncertain voice, almost a whisper.

He stood up mechanically, and she saw his face.

"Are you ill? What is it?"

"Ill? No." He passed his hand over his eyes. "I fancy I was close to the edge of sleep." Some color came back into his face. He stood smiling now, the significance of her presence dawning on him.

"Did you really come?" he asked. "This isn't a very lovely but impalpable astral vision, is it?"

"It's horridly imprudent, isn't it?" she murmured, still considering the rather drawn and pallid face of the man before her. "I came out of pure curiosity, Mr. Siward."

She glanced about her. He moved a big bunch of hothouse roses so she could pass, and she settled down lightly on the edge of the window seat. When he had piled some big downy cushions behind her back she made a quick gesture of invitation.

"I have only a moment," she said as he seated himself beside her. "Part of my curiosity is satisfied in finding you here. I didn't suppose you so faithful."

"I can be fairly faithful. What else are you curious about?"

"You said you had something important"—

"To tell you? So I did. That was bribery, perjury, false pretenses, robbery under arms, anything you will. I only wanted you to come."

"That is a shameful confession!" she said, but her smile was gay enough, and she noiselessly shook out her fluffy skirts and settled herself a trifle more deeply among the pillows.

"Of course," she observed absently, "you are dreadfully mortified at yourself."

"Naturally," he admitted.

The patter of the rain attracted her attention. She peered out through the blurred casements into the blackness. Then, picking up his cap and indicating his rain coat, "Why?" she asked.

"Oh, in case you hadn't come"—

"A walk? By yourself? A night like this on the cliffs! You are not perfectly mad, are you? What is the matter, Mr. Siward?"

"Well," he said, with a humorous glance at her, "I haven't seen you for ages. That's not wholesome for me, you know."

"But you see me now, and it does not seem to benefit you."

"I feel much better," he insisted, laughing, and her blue eyes grew very lovely as the smile broke from them in uncertain response.

"Only that I wanted you."

"So you had nothing really important to tell me, Mr. Siward?"

"Only that I wanted you."

"Oh, I said important! Why have you so ostentatiously avoided me, Mr. Siward?" she asked languidly.

"Well, upon my word!" he said, with a touch of irritation.

"Oh, you are so dreadfully literal!" she shrugged, brushing her straight, sensitive nose with the pink blossom. "I only said it to give you a chance. If you are going to be stupid, good night!" But she made no movement to go. "Yes, then; I have avoided you, and it doesn't become you to ask why."

"Because I kissed you?"

ANGLO-AMERICAN COMPETITION

International Contest in Which Two Well Known Authors Are Principals.

PUBLIC TO BE THE REFEREE

Question Up for Decision Is, Which Has Written the Better Novel?—Votes to Determine.

NEW YORK, January 8.—Great interest has been aroused both in this country and England by the New York Herald's announcement of an Anglo-American Competition to determine the comparative popularity of two famous novelists.

The opposing candidates are Mary E. Wilkins Freeman, of America, and Max Pemberton, of England, and the referee who will decide upon whose head shall rest the laurels of victory is the public.

The New York Herald has purchased from the authors mentioned two brand new novels, upon which they are willing to stake their reputations and their chances of success in this contest.

Mrs. Mary E. Wilkins Freeman's production is entitled "The Shoulders of Atlas." It is said to be one of the best things this typical American novelist has written, replete with wit, pathos, tragedy and romance. Mrs. Freeman has long enjoyed great popularity as a novelist, her tales of New England life being reckoned among the best of American works of fiction.

Mr. Pemberton has called his story "Sir Richard Escombe." It is described as a fascinating romance of the Thames country in the middle of the eighteenth century, when fighting was plentiful and there were damsels in distress to be rescued. Mr. Pemberton is a vivid word painter, and is at his best in depicting thrilling scenes and describing heroic exploits. He is one of the best known of English authors.

These two novels will appear simultaneously in the New York Sunday Herald's Magazine Section on facing pages, full page instalments being published every Sunday for eighteen weeks. The stories will be finely illustrated, the American by the foremost artists of this country, and the English by the leading illustrators of England.

To determine which is the more popular readers will be asked to vote on each instalment, and the story that has received the greatest number of votes at the end of the contest will be adjudged the winner.

Nor will it be an empty victory, for to the writer of the winning novel the Herald will pay a large cash prize in addition to the $10,000 already paid for exclusive publication rights.

The public also will be duly rewarded for its services as referee, seven weekly cash prizes being offered by the Herald for the best criticisms for each instalment while the very best of all the criticisms sent in will be awarded a large additional cash prize at the close.

This Anglo-American Competition is one of the most remarkable contests of recent years. The fame of the competing authors, the merits of their stories and the wide circulation of the New York Sunday Herald, all combine to emphasize its importance and to make it of international interest.

Certainly it is a notable test of popularity, and already there is much speculation in the literary world as to whether the palm and the author's cash prize will remain in America or cross the water for the glory and enrichment of the Britisher.

The first instalment of the novels will appear in the Herald of Sunday, January 19.

P.H.S. GIRLS' FIVE WON

Local Team Clinched State Basketball Title by Defeat of Newark H. S. Girls.

THE FINAL SCORE WAS 14-10.

Local Pupils Turned Out at P. H. S. Gym to See Season's Most Important Game— The Visitors Outplayed.

Outplaying their opponents in a fast game at the school gymnasium Saturday afternoon, the girls of the Plainfield High School basketball team strengthened their claim for the girls' championship of the state by defeating the girls' five from the Newark High School. The final score was 14-10. Winners of the championship last year by their defeat of the Newark girls, the Plainfield five, which has not lost a game since its organization two years ago, clinched the title for another year by Saturday's victory.

Starting the game with a rush, the home team scored six points on baskets from the floor before Miss Woolston, captain of the Newark five began the scoring for her team by eaging the ball from the foul line. The Plainfield girls held this lead throughout the game, and te score at the end of the first half was 10-2 in their favor, Miss Woolston scoring again from the foul line for the visitors. Fouls called by the linesmen gave the Newark girls a chance to score in the second half, when they added five points to their score from the foul line. The visitors made but one basket from the floor during the game. This was in the second half, when Miss Pierson caged the ball neatly on an angle shot. In the second period Miss Moodey scored from the floor and two points were added for the Plainfielders from the foul line. For being interfered with while shooting a basket, the Newark five was awarded a point on the technicality.

For the Plainfield girls, Miss Catherine Sminck did the best work, scoring three baskets from the floor. The other two baskets were scored by Miss Gertrude Moodey, one in each half. The Plainfielders were weakened by the absence of Miss Barbara Fleming, who was unable to be in the game. For the visitors, Miss Constance Pierson took the honors, scoring the only basket from the floor and throwing two fouls. Her close guarding was a feature of the game. Miss Sadie Woolston, captain of the visitors, made five points for her team from the foul line.

The game was well attended by girls and boys of the school and the Newark team brought a large delegation of supporters. The game was especially free from roughness, most of the fouls being called by the linesmen. The line-ups and summaries follow:

P. H. S.—Gertrude Moodey, Catherine Sminck, Madeline Durar, forwards; Maude Day, Dorothea Merrill, centres; Esther Crampton, Bessie Alpaugh, (captain), guards.

N. H. S.—Sadie Woolston, (captain); Constance Pierson, forwards; Sarah McGee, Violet Hoyt, centres; May Van Duzen, Blanche Hull, Mildred Littell, guards.

Referee, Ray Smith, of Newark. Charles B. Morse; umpires, Miss Janet Linnett, of Newark, Paul Collier; timesmen, Miss Marguerite Bissell, Miss Barbara Fleming, Roy Woodhull, Kenneth Phillips. Timer, Miss Margaret Leggett. Fifteen minute halves.

Y.M.C.A. SECOND FIVE LOST AT NEW YORK, 41-12

The second team of the Y. M. C. A. was defeated at Washington Heights, New York, Saturday night, by the Parthian five, when the metropolitan basketball players ran away from them in the second half, scoring 41 points to the Plainfielders' 12. The New Yorkers had everything their own way from the whistle, and kept the lead through the entire game.

Henshaw, captain of the Parthians, did the best work, scoring seven baskets from the floor and adding five points from the four line. Mayers, at forward, also did good work, shooting five baskets. The Parthians were superior in team work and guarded close, so that the Plainfielders only scored three baskets from the floor, making the other six points from the foul line. The lineups and summaries:

PARTHIANS.	PLAINFIELD.
Wells	Bentley (capt.) right forward.
Buchanan, Burgess	Joseph centre.
Henshaw (capt.)	Woodland left guard.
Callahan	Hoagland right guard.

Referee, Charles B. Morse. Twenty minutes halves.

BOWLING.

The Park Club five will journey to Jersey City Thursday night and make an effort to capture three games in its match with the Jersey City Club. The next match to be rolled on the Park Club alleys will be on Tuesday night, January 21, with Elizabeth.

Church Fives to Play.

The basketball team of the Hope Chapel Y. M. C. A. will play the five representing the First Baptist church at the Hope gymnasium tomorrow evening. The game will be called at 8:30.

Y.M.C.A. ATHLETES WON

Local Gym Team Turns Tables on Orange Association Team, Winning 34-29.

POTATO RACE DECIDES MEET.

Burgess and Viebrock, Taking First and Second, Win for Locals, With the Score Against Them.

With the score 28-26 against them just before the last event in the track meet with the Orange Y. M. C. A. at the local gymnasium Saturday night, the Plainfield athletes took first and second in the potato race, the final event, and won out by a score of 34-29. Burgess and Viebrock did the trick, the former winning the event in 53 seconds and Viebrock finishing three-fifths of a second later. Fosdick, of Orange, finished third. It is a coincidence that Plainfield was beaten in the meet at Orange December 7 by losing first place in this same event, with the score a tie before this race, the last of the meet, was run off. Burgess, who fell when in the lead of the race at Orange, won out handily Saturday night.

Though no new records were established by the local association gym team, the time was fast and the records good in general. Lawrence, of Plainfield, did the best work for the team, taking firsts in the standing broad jump, three standing broad jumps, and shot put and getting Plainfield's only point in the fence vault. Plainfield was strong in the standing broad and the potato race, but the Orange athletes had things their own way in the running high jump and the fence vault. Wildenauer and Brown tying for first place in both events. The summaries:

Fifteen Yard Dash—Won by Carter, O.; Douglass, P., second; Burgess, P., third. Time, 3 1-5 seconds.

Standing Broad Jump—Won by Lawrence, P., 9 ft. 11½ in.; Banks, P., second, 9 ft. 7 in.; Wood, O., third, 9 ft. 3 in.

Shot Put (12 pound shot)—Won by Lawrence, P., 45 ft. 7 in.; Wood, O., second, 36 ft. 10 in.; Payne, P., third, 36 ft. 2¾ in.

Three Standing Broad Jumps—Won by Lawrence, P., 28 ft. 11¾ in.; Davis, O., second, 28 ft. 10½ in.; Banks, P., third, 28 ft. 6½ in.

Running High Jump—Wildnauer, O., and Brown, O., tied for first place with 5 ft. 3 in.; Burgess, P., third, 5 ft. 2 in.

Fence Vault—Wildnauer, O., and Brown, O., tied for first place with 6 ft. 4 in.; Lawrence, P., third, 6 ft. 3 in.

PLENTY OF PLUMS TO DROP IN UNION COUNTY

Union county is to receive a larger than usual share of State patronage to be distributed by the legislators this year and it is largely due to the activity of County Chairman F. H. Smith that additional plums are to drop in this part of the State.

Among the appointments decided upon are those of William G. DeMeza, attorney of this city, as clerk of a committee in the Senate; John W. Clift, of Summit, as Senate journal clerk, and William Kline, colored, of this city, as doorkeeper. In the House, George H. Johnston, of Fanwood, will be journal clerk; J. D. Eldridge, of Elizabeth, clerk to the committee on municipal corporations; Joseph T. Carroll, of Elizabeth, doorkeeper and George Randolph, of Rahway, as page.

The prestige of the county will be still further increased by the fact that Assemblyman John R. Moxon will be chairman of the committee on municipal corporations, while Senator Ernest R. Ackerman is to receive the appointment to a number of important committees. It is also said that Assemblyman Carlton B. Pierce, of Cranford, will be placed on more important committees than is usually accorded a first year member.

Strict Catholic Rules on Marriages.

In accordance with a recent decree issued by Pope Pius X, pastors of local Catholic churches will be obliged to give instructions to their congregations on the general law of the church regarding marriages and engagements. This instruction will begin February 19, the beginning of Lent, and is to be strictly enforced in the Catholic Church throughout the world after Easter. Engagements will be recognized by the church authorities only after they have ben made by written contract, and it is believed that the strict enforcement of the law will prevent many rash engagements and hasty marriages. Both bride and groom are required to have lived one month in the parish where the marriage is to take place, and all marriages must be registered not only in the usual book of marriages but also in the baptismal records of the parish of the married couple.

Educational Work to be Exhibitied.

The mid-year exhibition of the educational classes will be held Thursday, January 23, at the Young Women's Christian Association, instead of Friday next. The classes have held twelve lessons and are prepared to make a splendid showing of work accomplished in a very short time. A chance will be given that evening for registration in the next term's classes. The work for the second term will be similar to that of the first and classes of the same character and under the same competent instruction will be formed. A class for mothers in the making of children's clothes will be offered and be held one afternoon a week.

Senior Dance at High School.

A most successful reception and dance was given by the young men of the Senior class of the Plainfield High School at the school auditorium Saturday night. The affair was in honor of the young women of the class and in return for a straw-ride given the class in the fall. There were ten dances on the card, including the barn dance and a Paul Jones, which concluded the evening's program. Refreshments, consisting of ice cream and cake were served. Henry Pound was chairman of the committee in charge of the affair, and there were about thirty couples on the floor.

Moore Coddington.

Moore Coddington, of Harmony street, died last night at Muhlenberg Hospital after a short illness with asthma. He was a widower, seventy-five years of age, son of the late Archibald Coddington. He is survived by two sons, Lewis B. Coddington, of Scotch Plains, and Eugene M. Coddington, of Newark, and two brothers, Worth and Harrieon Coddington. The funeral will be from Mount Horeb church Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock, and the interment will be in the Mount Horeb cemetery.

Funeral of Mrs. Nedles.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary R. Nedles, who died at her home on Somerset street, after a long illness, was held in St. Joseph's Church this morning. A solemn requiem mass was said by Rev. Father Miller. Burial was in St. Mary's Cemetery, the pall bearers being Hugh Reilley, David Barry, Patrick McGauley and Patrick Bergen.

Benjamin I. Farbman to Wed.

Invitations have been sent out for the wedding of Benjamin I. Farbman and Miss Anna Traner, of Baltimore. The wedding will take place in Baltimore Sunday, February 20. The groom is proprietor of the Arlington Hotel, on Somerset street, and the couple will make their home in the borough.

The Sunday-school Teachers' Union will meet at the Y. M. C. A. tonight at 8 o'clock. Miss M. Wilson will lead the devotional exercises and Charles W. McCutchen will teach the lesson. James E. Church will lead the discussion on the topic: "The Organized Adult Class Department."

WHEN IT IS ECONOMY.

It is economy for the housewife to refuse to order her market supplies by 'phone.

The wise matron will rise early and get the choicest things from market, beautifully fresh.

It is economy to arise a little earlier some morning in order to tell the baker you will not needso many loaves of bread for a couple of weeks because part of your family has gone away.

It is economy not to leave the soap in a basin of water after washing; also to put little scraps in a bag to be used for the bath or dishwashing, according to the quality of the soap.

It is economy when caught in a rainstorm, especially if in your best clothes, to spend fifty cents or even a dollar for carriage hire rather than run the risk of having the clothes spoiled.

To admit all the sunshine and fresh air possible is economy, for it will bring health and save many doctors' bills, even if it does fade the rugs.

To rest by the wayside and stay here on earth with your dear ones a while longer, rather than striving to do everything and failing under the yoke, is economy.

ENGLISH ETCHINGS.

Saturday is the busy day of the London firemen. In ten years London had 3,393 Saturday fires against 3,002 on Monday, the day they were least frequent.

Six terrapin taken recently to the Carlton hotel, in London, aroused great curiosity, the newspapers referring to them as "six interesting American guests."

Mrs. Mansfield Robinson.

Mrs. Annie Robinson, wife of Mansfield Robinson, colored, of West Third street, died yesterday after a long illness. She was one of the founders of the Calvary Baptist church and advanced considerables money for the erection of the structure. When the church became involved in financial difficulties most of her funds were lost to her and she suffered a mental worriment in consequence. The funeral will be held in Calvary Baptist church Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Theodore S. Totten.

Theodore S. Totten, aged fifty-five years, died Saturday at his home on West Third street, near Clinton avenue. He had been ill for nearly two years. Mr. Totten came to Plainfield from Elizabeth and was employed for a long time as motorman on the Fourth and Somerset street trolley line. The funeral will be held at the late residence tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock and burial will be in Evergreen cemetery, Elizabeth.

FORT'S RINGING SPEECH

Governor-elect Declares Himself in Favor of Free and Open Primaries.

NO SECRET POLITICAL ACTION.

And No More Ripper Bills Says Former Judge at the Mark M. Fagan Dinner.

Governor-elect J. Franklin Fort was the guest of honor at the dollar dinner held in Grand View Hall, Jersey City, last night, under the auspices of the Central Republican Committee of Hudson County, composed of the followers of former Mayor Mark M. Fagan.

Governor-elect Fort's speech was as follows:

"Partisan considerations do not count as much as they once did. There are no overshadowing public issues today which are sufficient to submerge the individual in any mighty principle. Hence the people are now looking more closely at the candidate. This is fortunate.

"To make a campaign for governor in a great state impresses one with the power of the people in a republic more than anything else could. In our state there are 425,000 registered voters. In the last election about 400,000 of them voted and over 194,000 of them voted for me. When one thinks of a vast army of men like that standing behind him and giving him their confidence, it has, or should have, a steadying effect. He realizes more than ever before the truth and force of Lincoln's statement that this is a government 'By the people, of the people, and for the people."

"You men in my hearing tonight, I suppose would not take offense if I called you all politicians. Politician should not be an offensive word. It has come to be objectionable in the mind of many because men who have been made leaders in nation, state or locality have assumed to think they are the party, and hence are looked upon as bosses, and have thus become objectionable. If we could only look at the matter truly and remember that the men active in political work are very few compared with the mighty mass of high-minded citizens who care nothing for the offices or who administer them, so long as the official is honest and incorruptible and will stand for the principles which make for good government.

I believe in party and party organization, and that it is the duty of a man who believes in the principle for which a party stands to support its candidates, if they are honest and competent. I have no use for anyone who, after an honest and competent man, in a fair and open contest gets the nomination of his party, refuses to support such a candidate. We are coming to better ideals in our time. We must keep close to the people. The strength of Theodore Roosevelt is in the fact that the people believe in him. Has he made mistakes? Most certainly. But the people know these have been few and honest. What the American people want in our time is men who will do and stand for something. They prefer that, now and then, an official make a mistake, if it is honest, rather than that he never attempt to do anything.

"It is not the man of great wealth or of great power or great political influence who counts for the most in a republic. It is the body of average citizens who live quietly love their country and vote disinterestedly. This government will fail when they cease to take interest in it. The man who claims to have wonderful political power and comes blustering in to tell you what he can do politically, can do very little if the people do not approve what he does, and will attend at the primary and vote at the election.

"He is a wise man who today sees the signs of the times. What is the cause of the strength of Speaker Cannon? Simply the fact that the people believe he is honest and that he is looked upon as one of them.

"Why is Governor Hughes strong? Because the people believe he is beyond improper approach and that he will do nothing to forfeit their confidence.

"Why has Secretary Taft such a large following for the Presidency? Simply because he hides none of his plans from the people and has the courage to declare what he believes irrespective of whom it may please or displease.

"The days of secret political action are over. What we need in our time is to encourage all the people to take part in public affairs. There must be the most open and free primaries. Some way must be devised to require every citizen who is entitled to vote to exercise his prerogative on election day. Possibly as good a way as any would be to impose a poll tax, of say $5 or $10,

CITY POSTPONES LEASE

Common Council Fail to Make Agreement with Owner of Smalley Building.

SUBJECT AGAIN REFERRED.

Finance Committee to Try to Come to Terms with David T. Kenney—Offer as Submitted.

After spending the whole of last evening in conference, David T. Kenney, the owner of the Smalley Building, and the Common Council failed to agree on terms of a lease or purchase of the structure and finally the proposition submitted by Mr. Kenney was referred back to the finance committee for further consideration, it being understood that it will again be brought up at the regular February meeting. According to Mr. Kenney's proposition the city is given until February 15 to decide.

It was a special meeting called by President Tolles to consider propositions to establish city hall headquarters, either by purchase or lease of the Smalley building or any other structure or the purchase of land upon which such a building could be erected and to provide for suitable quarters for the police department. All of the members except Councilman Charles C. Randolph were present. Mr. Kenney and his agent, Charles L. Lyman, were both in attendance. Mayor Charles J. Fisk also attended the conference.

The original proposition of Mr. Kenney to sell the building to the city was referred to Corporation Counsel Marsh and to use the expression of one of the Councilmen, "When it was returned it was a case of where a father could not recognize his own son." The draft had been changed considerable to meet legal requirements and some of the changes did not receive Mr. Kenney's approval.

Mr. Buxton, chairman of the finance committee, presented a written offer from Mr. Kenney in which he stated that he was willing to surrender the lease on the building made by the city with Woolston & Buckle, when that firm was the owner, and make a new lease for a term of five years at an annual rental of $3,100, to be paid in quarterly installments. The city to reserve the right to terminate the lease on March 1, of any year by giving three months notice.

It was further required under the terms of the new lease that the city should pay the taxes on the building; also the premium on $20,000 worth of fire insurance in a first-class company, and the city at the end of the first five years will have the option of renewing the lease for another five years at an annual annual rental of $3,500. Privilege is given the city to change the character of the partitions in the building to suit its convenience, but upon terminating the lease must be restored to their original character. Right is also given to build a stable in the rear of the structure for the use of the patrol wagon and horse and a right of way is given from East Second street to the building. The city is also given the right to purchase upon thirty days notice for $39,000.

The landlord further agrees not to erect a building or any other obstruction on the easterly side of the structure within three feet to shut off the light.

Some of these provisions were considered far too stringent by the Mayor and Common Council and every effort was made to obtain a modification of them, but to no purpose. Mr. Kenney felt satisfied with his proposition and did not care to change it any further.

In connection with Mr. Kenney's offer, Mr. Buxton stated that he had received a verbal one from a person, whose name he did not mention, agreeing to erect a building on East Second street for police headquarters, at a cost of $15,000, the city to pay for the same in rent. This proposition did not seem to have much weight with the members and it was immediately moved that the Common Council go into a committee of the whole to consider Mr. Kenney's offer. Councilman Robert E. Hall was appointed chairman and the members adjourned to the Mayor's office where the conference was continued until 10:30. When the meeting was resumed, nothing was done except to refer the proposition to the finance committee to be reported on later.

It is understood that one of the serious objections to Mr. Kenney's proposal was that he might erect a structure adjoining the Smalley building on the east and shut off the light which is now considered so valuable. He said that he did not know when he would build.

MACHINISTS' GRIEVANCES

Louis Fulton, Who Went to Panama for Canal Work, Reports to Local Union Men.

UNION MAY TAKE ACTION.

Fulton Claims Misrepresentation by Canal Commission and States Grievances in Letter to Local Machinists.

Local machinists of Plainfield Lodge 167, International Association of Machinists, decided at their meeting last night to refer the grievances and alleged misrepresentations of the Panama Canal Commission in the case of Louis Fulton, a local machinist, who went to the Isthmus in November to work on the Canal, to their district business agent, and it is reported today that the matter will be taken up by the Associaion in the district meeting. Fulon, who has been employed in a local machine shop, went to the Canal region last year, and was to have spoken last night at the Association meeting. He was unable to come to the meeting, but sent a letter, in which he claims that the Canal Commission at Washington mis-represented the conditions in the south to himself and other union machinists who went to the Canal region for employment in November in answer to an appeal from the government officials for machinists for the Canal districts.

As summarized by Fulton in an interview with a Daily Press reporter today, the treatment of the men, three ship loads of whom went south to the Canal region in Panama, was not what he considered just and the work to be done was misrepresented to the men. Fulton secured an appointment to go south from the Isthmian Canal commission at Washington, and after considerable delay, was sent south as a machinist along with forty-one other machinists. The commission was very particular about the experience of the men employed, but when the men arrived at the Canal region, only fifteen of them were taken on to work and these were assigned to railroad work on the Panama railroad. This was late in November and Fulton stated that the men were accommodated at temporary quarters in every way unsatisfactory. After three nights in such quarters, the men applied for better accommodations at the Labor Quarters Bureau. They were there informed that, despite their understanding before they sailed from New York, the work was only temporary, and on December 9, the master mechanic of the force discharged the entire force of fifteen, on grounds of "incompetency." Meanwhile two more boat loads of men had arrived from Philadelphia, and they, too, learned that they could only expect temporary work.

When the notice of their discharge was given out, the men, most of whom were members of the union, were informed that they would have to pay the government rate of $20 to get transportation to New York again. They worked for sixty-five cents an hour while they had work. Indignant at their treatment, a delegation visited Colon where they went before the general manager of the Panama Railroad with their grievance. The transportation matter was finally djusted by the mster mechanic of the force changing the formal reason for their discharge from "incompetency" to "reduction of force" and the men were transported to New York again free of charge.

The grievance now centres about the misrepresentation as to the length of time the men were to work. Fulton, along with the others who sailed from New York, understood that the work was to be permanent, and was to be in connection with the Canal. Most of the men signed for their jobs as machinists, but were put to work on the repair gang of the Panama railroad. This representation of the class of work they were engaged for —and the requirements and references of all the men were carefully looked into before they were hired by the Commission—will constitute another grievance, which the Union will take up through its district officers

Collins Again Chairman.

The Union County Democratic Committee at Elizabeth last night re-elected Brigadier General D. F. Collins as chairman and Fred Zior as secretary. After he took his seat, Chairman Collins urged that the members outside of Plainfield be more faithful in attendance at meetings. J. V. F. Dilts, of this city, spoke along the same lines.

Not Holding Seats.

No seats engaged for tonight's performance, "Fifty Miles from Boston," at the New Plainfield theatre will be retained at the box office after 6 o'clock. Those who have ordered seats but have not called for the tickets will have to get them before that hour or run the risk of their being sold to other parties.

L. V. EXPRESS KILLS TWO

Section Men Met Their Death on the Track Near Goodman's Station.

BOTH BODIES BADLY MANGLED.

The Victims Had Large Families —Another Fatal Accident at Menlo Park.

Westbound Lehigh Valley express train No. 3 due in South Plainfield at 6.40, struck and killed two section men on the straight stretch of track between Ash Brook and Goodman's who had evidently stepped away from an eastbound train directly in front of the flyer. Both men were thrown beneath the engine and bodies were terribly mangled. Conductor Kleckner had the train stopped and carried the remains to South Plainfield from which place they were brought to this city by Undertaker George Cole, the scene of the accident being in Union county.

An investigation revealed the fact that the victims were Paskois Andrasnak and Martin Ronovomi, both about thirty-five years old. They were brothers-in-law and were members of the section gang station near Picton. Both were married and leave large families. In appearance the two men were very much alike and until their identity was established it was thought they were brothers.

At almost the same time the double killing occurred on the Lehigh Valley, a similar accident was reported from Menlo Park on the Pennsylvania road, less than two miles away. Two young men, whose names have not yet been learned, were struck by a train and tossed into a ditch alongside the tracks.

SAVING THE SHADE TREE

Telephone Company Linemen Arrested for Multilating Trees Without Consent.

EMPLOYERS PAY THE FINES.

Beautiful Trees on Public Thoroughfares Ruined by the Axes of Utility Corporation Gangs.

Plainfield's Shade Tree Commission has taken drastic steps to prevent the mutilation of trees about the city streets and yesterday Chairman Barrows instructed Chief Kiely to arrest a gang of telephone men who were lopping branches on Arlington avenue, between Rose and Union streets. Detective Sergeant John Flynn was sent to the scene and took in custody Thomas Johnson, Christian Flack, August Buck and Harry Bunn, busily plying axes in an effort to clear the way for a pair of wires. In the city court this morning the four were fined $5 each, the telephone company standing good for the money.

When the linemen were arrested, they exhibited a permit from the owners of the property in front of which the trees stand, Mrs. Catherine Manning and A. J. Brunson, but Chief Kiely refused to recognize it. When the Shade Tree Commission entered office all telephone, telegraph and electric light companies operating in Plainfield were notified that they must not mutilate trees without first securing a permit from the commission itself, the ownership of the abutting property not being taken into consideration. Accordingly, no attention was paid to the Brunson or Manning permit in passing sentence.

The action of the authorities in making arrests for cutting the trees came as a big surprise to the companies affected and hereafter the commission will be consulted before any limbs are removed. It is said that the trees the men were engaged on yesterday were beautiful in their symmetry but after the axes were wielded they assumed a deplorable appearance, the tops being taken off completely.

Suffering from Blood Poisoning.

Charles P. Brewin, employed at Miss Mary A. Brown's cleaning and dyeing establishment on West Second street, is suffering from blood poisoning in the hand. The infection is believed to have been due to handling goods which were recently dyed, the poison having got into a scratch on the hand. Prompt medical treatment it is believed will save the member. Mr. Brewin is the man who lived in Plainfield for two years under the name of William Johnson, when suddenly his dual personality was disclosed by the motorman of a trolley car upon which Brewin was a passenger, who recognized him as a former resident of Burlington.

A DEEP, DARK MYSTERY

Automobile Party of Four Conducts Itself so Peculiarly Police take Notice.

MEN ACT VERY UNGALLANTLY.

Desert the Women They Brought to the City After One Couple Has Stormy Encounter.

Mystery, deep, dark and dire, surrounds a chapter of events that occurred on Park avenue late last night and which has set the local police on a gum shoe hunt to unravel. The affair brings into play, two men, two women, a costly White touring car and just a dash of villainy that would provide enough material to Theodore Kremer or Owen Davis to write a new "powder play."

Shortly after 10 o'clock, the auto pulled into Martin's garage, the two men and two women being in it. The men asked to leave the machine for a short time after which all four went out. Three hours later the men and and one of the women returned, the former busying themselves in getting the car to the street while their companion remained on the sidewalk. As soon as the engine was working properly, the men sprang into the auto and sent it toward Fourth street at full speed, leaving the woman behind.

Their action was totally unexpected on her part and when she saw the car pulling away, she emitted a piercing scream, following it up with frantic calls for them to stop. They were out of hearing in less than a moment and her shouts gave way to a violent fit of weeping that closely aproached hysterics. Employes of the garage kindly offered her a seat in the office and though she accepted, she refused to say a word about herself or as to what was the meaning of the ungallant procedure of her friends. Some minutes later she was joined by the other woman, also giving evidence of having had a crying spell, and the two remained in the office until the 3.37 train was due at the North avenue station. They boarded it without previously buying tickets, probably having figured out that it would keep people from learning where they were going.

The facts as related were told to the police and today a Daily Press reporter was enabled to give Chief Kiely some further information regarding the affair. As the scribe was proceeding along Park avenue a few minutes before 1 o'clock this morning, one of the men and one of the women concerned, stood at the foot of the steps at the south abutment of the railroad bridge. They were engaged in a heated argument during which the woman exclaimed in angry tones, broken by sobs:

"All I want you to do is to take me home."

Her companion cautioned her to keep still as he noted the approach of the newspaperman but she only grew more angry.

"I'll not be quiet," she said, "and if you're any friend to me you'll take me home. There's no train and no car and I want to get out of here."

She was allowed to say no more after that as the man rudely pulled her to the shadow of a brick pile and in a threatening way compelled her to remain silent. The woman was the same who was left on the sidewalk when the machine started off.

Both couples were well dressed and were evidently people of means. It is thought they came from Newark and the police of that city will be apprised of the occurrence.

Greenbrook Council Installs.

Grand Deputy Barr, of Bayonne, installed the following officers-elect of Greenbrook Council, No. 1725, Royal Arcanum, last night: Regent, Opye Runyon; past regent, Horace Conover; vice regent, J. L. Hillier; orator, Philip Butscher; chaplain, Adam L. Seals; guide, John Dixon; outside sentry, Ralph Runyan; warden, John Lewis; secretary, Webster Grant; treasurer, Lewis B. Skillman; collector, J. W. F. Bamberger. After the installation the members enjoyed a smoker and piano selections by A. E. Willard, together with vocal numbers by visiting Arcanumites.

Friendship Lodge to Install.

Friendship Lodge, No. 104, Daughters of Rebekah, will meet tonight, when the officers-elect will be installed by the deputy and staff. New Brunswick will be well represented and members from Esther Lodge, Elizabeth; Hope Lodge, Newark, and Evergreen Lodge, Jersey City, will be in attendance. Mrs. John Ludgate, Mrs. A. Kettenring, Mrs. Joseph Sheppard, Mrs. W. J. Ford and William Welsh, the finance committee of Friendship Lodge, were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Higgins, of West Front street, Saturday afternoon, to plan for tonight's affair.

BEQUEATHED A MILLION

Rev. Walter T. Griffin's Estate, However, May Only Amount to $20,000.

ONE-THIRD TO HIS WIDOW.

Will Drawn on Belief That His Peat Company Investments Would Show Fabulous Profits.

Walter T. Griffin, ex-United States Counsul to Limoges, France, and a former Plainfielder, died at the home of his sister, Fannie E. Griffin, of 74 Mason street, New York, on December 13, leaving a will dated three days before his death in which he made bequests of more than $1,000,000 to his friends and relatives and other large ones to charitable and philanthropic societies. He made these bequests in the belief that his investment in the Peat Chemical Company would bring millions to his estate. The will was filed yesterday.

Dr. James A. Blake, of Brooklyn, to whom the will entrusts the philanthropic bequests, said last night that he had known Mr. Griffin for many years.

"Recently," said Dr. Blake, "he perfected an invention for utilizing peat instead of coal in running machinery and organized a company which has built a large plant at Ogdensburg, N. Y., and is incorporated under the laws of New York with a capital of $20,000,000. A subsidiary company has been organized in Mexico where another plant is being built. Mr. Griffin's fortune consists solely of his interests in this enterprise in which the stock is just about to be issued. Until something more tangible than this stock is disclosed in his fortune I shall not bother myself about carrying out the terms of his bequest."

James S. Darcy, of 280 Broadway is the attorney for the estate. He said:

"The estate may really prove all which he believed it to be, but at present there is no way to tell. The enterprise in which he invested his savings looks good, but it it still in its infancy. The estate may be valued all the way from $20,000 to $2,000,000."

The will provides that $100,000 shall go to his adopted sister, Isabel S. Graves; $25,000 each to his brothers and sisters, Mrs. Mary Barr, Newburg, N. Y.; Mrs. Grace Roberts, of this city; Fannie E. Griffin, Brooklyn; Carrie Griffin, Manhattan, and Nathan K. Griffin, Kingston, N. Y. To his married daughter, Mrs. Mary Clark, and her husband, Charles, he assigns $25,000 each. To Dr. James A. Blake and his son, James Eddy Blake, he leaves $2,500 each, and to Isabel S. Graves is given his art gallery and collection of books and pictures at Limoges, France. One-third of his estate, including personal property and his home in this city he leaves to his widow, Cynthia W. Griffin.

Both Orange Fives Won.

The Orange Y. M. C. A. five representing the association in the Northern New Jersey Association basketball league won from the Plainfield five by a score of 63-29 at the local gymnasium last night and the second team from Orange defeated the local second team 45-21 in a game played before the league contest. The Orange teams had things all their own way and did some whirl-wind playing, excelling the local fives in passing, team work and shooting.

Silk Co. Elects Officers.

The Watchung Silk Company at the annual meeting, yesterday, re-elected these directors to serve for the coming year: William R. Codington, B. Frank Coriell, Henry Leifke, Allen B. Laing, J. Fred MacDonald and Eugene M. Laing. Afterward these officers were chosen: President, J. Fred MacDonald; vice-president, Eugene M. Laing; secretary, Henry Leifke; treasurer, William R. Codington.

A Sixty Days' Sentence.

Daniel Driscoll, one of the proprietors of a local lunch wagon, was sent to jail for sixty days by Judge Runyon this morning. He has been drinking steadily for several weeks past and his condition reached the stage, where it became necessary to put him away. A few months ago Driscoll was given a thirty days sentence in the hope that it might do him some good but it failed to have the desired effect.

Dill for Magie's Place.

It is reported that Judge J. B. Dill, of Orange, of the Court of Errors and Appeals, will be named by Governor-elect Fort to succeed Chancellor Magie, whose term expired at midnight last night.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Butler, of West Seventh street, are spending several weeks in the south.

LEGISLATURE IN SESSION

Organization Effected in Both Senate and House this Afternoon.

GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE READ.

After Officers Are Selected and Committees Announced Adjournment Is Taken for a Week.

The 132nd Legislature of New Jersey convened at Trenton shortly after 3 o'clock this afternoon. The chief business in both the Senate and the House was formal organization and the reading of Governor Stokes' last message. After officers were chosen, the usual committees were named by the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House.

In the Senate, Thomas J. Hillery, of Morris county, was chosen president. Samuel K. Robbins, of Burlington, was selected as majority leader. George S. Silzer, of Middlesex, was chosen minority leader. Ernest R. Ackerman, of Union, came in for some good committeeship plums as did Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of Somerset.

Frank B. Jess, of Camden county, was named as speaker of the House. William P. Martin, of Essex, is the new majority floor leader. Mark A. Sullivan, of Hudson, is the Democratic leader. As a returned member, Assemblyman Moxon, of Union, fared well on the committee appointment list.

Four of the best committees will have Senator Ackerman as their chairman. He is head of the appropriation committee, the corporations committee, the finance committee and the riparian rights committee. He is also a member of some joint committees including those for tuberculosis work and the hospital for the insane.

Assemblyman Moxon is on the municipal corporations committee and the banking and insurance committee of the House. Pierce is on the boroughs, home for feeble minded and State home for boys.

Senator Frelinghuysen is chairman of the committee on banking and insurance, chairman of the militia committee and a member of the public health committee. He is also chairman of the joint committee on public health and is a member of the joint committee on State Home for Boys as well as chairman of the treasurer's account committee. Assemblyman Smalley is on the borough, miscellaneous, public grounds and tuberculosis committees.

After the message of Governor Stokes, which will be found in condensed form in other columns today, was read, both branches of the Legislature adjourned until next Tuesday, when the inauguration of the incoming Governor, J. Franklin Fort, will take place.

The inauguration in Taylor Opera House, Trenton, is scheduled for noon Tuesday, January 21. The Rev. Dr. James N. Ludlow, of East Orange, a warm friend of the incoming Governor, was selected to invoke Divine blessing on the proceedings. Following the prayer, Chief Justice William S. Gummere, of the Supreme Court, will administer the oath of office and then will follow a salute of seventeen guns in the State House grounds.

Following the turning over of the Great Seal to the new Governor by Governor Stokes, Mr. Fort will be presented to the president of the Senate and, in turn, by the president to each member of the new Legislature. The inaugural address and a benediction by the Rev. Dr. W. Strother Jones will conclude the official ceremonies.

Nonpareil Club Minstrel Show.

The Nonpariel Social Club, composed of local colored young men, is arranging a minstrel show and dance to be given in Saengerbund Hall, Lincoln's Birthday night. H. Karney will be the interlocutor and the end men assigned are William Jones, George Hewlin, Howard Cobb, Seymour Van Blake, bones; Robert Stevens, William Mayer, Eugene Johnson and Jack Hedgeman.

150 DEAD; 75 INJURED.

Boyertown, Pa., Jan. 14.—When daylight dawned today, the full extent of last night's horror, when the Rhoades Opera House was burned, became apparent. The list of dead is placed at 150 and the injured at seventy-five. Many of the latter will probably die.

The entertainment which was being given in the theatre at Boyertown, Pa., last night, when fire broke out from a picture machine and 150 lives were lost, was in charge of Mrs. Monroe, who is well known in Plainfield. She has given two entertainments of a similar nature at Hope chapel, one of them "Oliver Cromwell" and the other "John Knox."

The Lesson of the Eagle and the Weasel

The familiar story goes that once, when an eagle pounced upon a weasel and soared with it high into the air, the weasel fastened its fangs deep into the eagle's breast and commenced to draw its life-blood. The eagle tried to shake the weasel off, but the weasel hung on until the eagle fell lifeless to the ground.

There is a moral in this for every sufferer from coughs or colds. Don't let your cough hang on—for every day it weakens your lungs and gradually wears down your system until serious lung troubles develop.

DR. D. JAYNE'S EXPECTORANT

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

That much heralded musical comedy production of Cohan & Harris, "50 Miles From Boston," written by George M. Cohan, comes to the New Plainfield Theatre tonight with Miss Edna Wallace Hopper as the bright all star cast. The production is said to cost $6,000 a week.

Manager Counihan in securing Scott Siddons' excellent company to appear at the New Plainfield Theatre, next Saturday afternoon and night in Goethe's immortal "Faust," is offering his patrons a dramatic treat as this company comes highly endorsed by the press in other cities, where they have appeared. It is almost unnecessary to say that "Faust" will always live in memory of those who have been fortunate enough to witness a production of this great play. Managers Wynne & Siggins present this attraction with all special scenery and electrical effects and a company of artists headed by the well known actor, Scott Siddons.

In the announcement that "Happy Hooligan's Trip Around the World" will be the attraction at the New Plainfield Theatre next Thursday night the patrons of that house receive assurance that they are to see a standard quality of theatrical entertainment. When one goes to a store to purchase dry goods or groceries there are certain reliable brands which it is always well to insist upon receiving. As it is in the mercantile business, so it is in the theatrical business. There is a standard quality of attractions, and in the line of farce comedy, "Happy Hooligan's Trip Around the World," represents the very highest possible quality. Such entertainments cannot be thrown together over night. This production represents months of constant toil and labor, and the expenditure of upwards of $25,000. The services of the best scenic painters, costumers, musicians and stage managers in the country have been utilized in this production. Everything about it is new and bright. The members of the company are artists of wide reputation, and the girls forming the chorus are the prettiest specimens of young womenkind that it was possible to secure. As is well known, the comedy is built about the mythical doings and the strange misadventures of Mr. F. Opper's genial hobo, so funnily illustrated in the great metropolitan newspapers.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Girls' Mission Club will meet at the Congregational Church tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Grace M. E. Church will hold its monthly business meeting this afternoon.

The Epworth League of the Monroe Avenue M. E. Church will hold a social and business meeting in Epworth House tonight.

Rev. A. C. McCrea, pastor, will address the Junior Epworth League of the First M. E. Church in Vincent Chapel, Friday afternoon.

The monthly meeting of the Missionary and Aid Society of Warren Chapel will be held Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the chapel.

The monthly literary and social meeting of the Epworth League of the First M. E. Church will be held in Vincent Chapel Friday night.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Park Avenue Baptist Church will hold its monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. John H. Doane, on East Seventh street, this afternoon.

The regular sewing meeting of the Women's Home Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church will be held in the church parlors Friday afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock.

Rev. Francis E. Whiteside, formerly of this city, but now pastor of the M. E. Church at East Quogue, L. I., has been spending a few days in town with relatives. Last night he conducted the meeting at the Plainfield Rescue Mission.

"Does the Soul of the Christian go Directly to Heaven at Death?" will be the subject of the special sermon to be delivered by Rev. A. E. Finn at the Park Avenue Baptist Church next Sunday night. The subject was suggested by a number of inquiries that have been made to Mr. Finn.

The Young People's Association of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church will meet on Friday night for Bible study in a class on "The Epistle to the Ephesians," to be taught by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie; a class on "Isaiah," to be taught by Howard H. Williams, and a class for the younger members taught by Miss Elsie Goddard on the Life of Christ.

An Engaging School.

Miss Emma R. Beach, instructor in the Fifteenth avenue school, Newark, and whose engagement to Howard D. Allen of this city, has been announced is one of the five young women whose engagements have just been announced, and in whose honor a dinner is being planned by their friends, in which the fiances are to be included.

Society notes of Morristown record the visit of Miss Lowe, of Plainfield, to Mrs. Henry Forrester Taylor, of that place.

Mrs. J. Evarts Tracy and her daughter, Miss Tracy, of New York, formerly of West Eighth street, have been visiting friends in town.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

BASEBALL.

The veteran Al Selbach has signed a contract to play in the Harrisburg outfield next season.

The directors of the Lancaster (Tri-State League) team have made arrangements to hold a mammoth skating carnival during the latter part of this month for the purpose of raising funds to run the ball team next year.

The Harrisburg club has purchased the release of Outfielder Huelsman from Kansas City. Huelsman played with Montreal two years ago.

Jack McFetridge, the former Philadelphia National League pitcher, who broke his kneecap last November, will go to a Philadelphia hospital, where he will have his injury X-rayed. Since meeting with the accident McFetridges broken kneecap has failed to properly heal.

Manager Lezotte, of the Wilkes-Barre team, of the New York State League, his signed James Gillespie, of Albany, a clever infielder, who comes highly recommended as a fielder and a hitter.

A shooting match at live birds was arranged at Lebanon, Pa., Saturday, between Otis E. Clymer, outfielder of the Washington American League baseball team, and Daniel Weagaman, of Reading, Pa. The contest will be held January 14 and will be for a purse of $200, each man shooting at 100 birds.

Charley Dooin, catcher of the Philadelphia Nationals, has decided to enter the theatrical field with a minstrel troupe in the Quaker City. Dooin has a fine tenor voice and had previously turned down offers from vaudeville managers through fear of stage fright. "Going on the stage is different from playing baseball," Dooin says. "On the diamond I have a mask on and that acts as some sort of protection. I guess I'll feel about the same way with my face blackened and won't get nervous."

Herman Schoefer, second baseman of Detroit, underwent an operation in a hospital in that city Saturday. Schaefer will be able, it is expected, to return to his home in Chicago within two weeks and that he will be in good physical shape by spring.

Jimmy Barrett, who is well known in Eastern League circles as a member of the Rochester team in 1906, has signed to play with the Boston Americans again next season.

Many new faces will appear in the line-up of the Rochester team next season. President C. T. Chapin is busily engaged in getting new material in an effort to make the Broncos a pennant-winning aggregation. The three latest players he has secured are Bill Duggleby, the former Philadelphia National League twirler, who figured in a deal with Pittsburg last season; "Goat" Anderson, a heavy-hitting outfielder, and Mark Campbell, a utility infielder. All three players were secured from the Pittsburg club.

POINTS FOR THE BUYERS

When you want an expressman, be it for carting or simply to take your trunk to the depot, telephone 833-w and get Hoagland.

The daintly dressed woman buys at Peck's. Everything of the best in quality and price at the West Front street store. An exceptionally fine assortment of white goods.

You will start the new year right if you begin trading at Putnam & DeGraw's dry goods store. You can always get full value there and the prices are within your reach.

If you are run down by the worry and hustle of business, why not try a course of Turkish baths at the Brookside sanatarium, on Somerset street? Such treatment will do wonders.

If the suit looks too badly to wear but is still too good to throw away, take it to Mary Brown's on West Second street. A good cleaning, and perhaps dyeing, will make it look like new.

Have you got the grip, or suffering from a cough or cold? If so drop in it at C. M. Neagle's pharmacy on West Front street, and he will sell you a remedy that will effect a prompt cure.

Where there are infants or children in the family, take no chances with the milk. Marchant's milk is all milk, pure and fresh daily. Richest cream. Wagon deliveries. Office on Watchung avenue.

Timbo's restaurant on North avenue is one of the notable eating places in the State and you will make no mistake if you patronize it. A full supply of tobaccos, cigars and cigarettes always on hand.

Special department accounts draw 4 per cent. interest beginning from the first of each month in the Plainfield Trust Company. Start the new year right by opening an account with this company, and you can draw regular interest while you are saving up. Safe deposit waults for your valuables.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Reynolds, of Orange, whose marriage occurred New Year's Day, at the home of the bride's father, O. T. Waring, of Park avenue, are registered at "The Breakers," Palm Beach, Florida.

GOVERNOR'S VALEDICTORY.

On the whole the valedictory message of Governor Stokes is not up to the general high standard of his usual addresses of that nature but it should be remembered, as he himself remarks, the contents of such a document are limited by official propriety. His advocacy of municipal home rule is probably the most interesting feature of the rather lengthy epistle. When he declares that each municipality should be free to govern itself as it deems best without any intervention of the State he espouses a wholesome and democratic doctrine. The drawbacks of having to run to Trenton to get a law passed every time a city wants to do something for the benefit of its taxpayers have been felt right here in Plainfield time and again. Powers of the widest scope consistent with good government and not in contravention to the general welfare of the State at large should be conferred on the governing body of a given municipality, and this is the idea enunciated by the Governor.

Pointing out that it has been the policy of the State not to enact hysterical anti-corporation legislation but rather to deal honestly and fairly with corporate body and individual alike. "Evils and abuses there are that need the restraint of law," says the Governor, "but the motive of law should be the cure, not to kill; to punish the guilty, not the innocent; to encourage, not terrify, capital. What we need is remedial rather than punitive legislation, constructive rather than destructive policies, just, not frenzied, enactment. Abuses can be stopped, wrongs can be righted, the people can be protected, without paralyzing industrial life. The State should not legislate for receiverships.

"The successful physician cures the disease without killing the patient. Legislation should remedy the ill without threatening bankruptcy. Otherwise legislation has failed."

The real cause of the present financial stringency can be traced to the very same sort of legislation that Mr. Stokes deplores and it is a matter of extreme gratification that New Jersey has not been so foolish as some of her sister States in this respect. The two cent rate laws, for instance, have frightened the railroad managements and in turn have been the means of immeasurable financial loss for the public who, as stockholders, are the real owners of the affected properties. Whenever a radical and unfair law is passed affecting a large corporation in which the stock is widely distributed, those who are made to suffer most are not a few men who are managing the concern in question but the public who have invested in it their hard earnings. As the Governor says, "the just, conservative policy is the best." That is New Jersey's policy and should be that of all the States in the Union for frenzy legislation elsewhere is disastrous to the citizens of New Jersey almost as much as to the residents of the States guilty of such unwarranted measures.

BEVIER ON LITERATURE

Rutgers Professor Says Poetry is Lasting Expression in Words of Life's Meaning.

AN INTERESTING LECTURE.

Literature of a Nation Survives When Inventions and Discoveries Are Forgotten.

Claiming that the literature of a people survives longer than their progress in invention or their discoveries, Professor Louis Bevier, Jr., of Rutgers College, spoke on "Literature and Life" before the Men's Club of the First Baptist Church last night outlining what qualities make literature live through the ages and become the most important part of the annals of a nation.

Raising the question "Is literature worth while," the speaker showed at the outset of his remarks that the writings, and especially the poetry of a people, lasts through the ages. In connection with this statement, he called attention to the fact that while the Greeks were great mathematicians and inventors, their poetry is what has made them famous as a people, and is read widely today.

The living power of good poetry, as a representation of the best accomplishments of a people, was especially developed in the course of the lecture. According to Barrett Wendell's definition, the speaker said that poetry is the lasting expression in words of the meaning of life. To be lasting, poetry must embody three elements: truthfulness, beauty of form, and universality of application. Tennyson's poems are classic because they are so true to nature and the speaker said that this element is so important that many of the present day novelists will not acquire lasting fame because of their inaccuracy in descriptions. Such inaccuracies, due to carelessness of the writer or a lack of the poet's sight in writing, will prevent their writings from living down through the ages. In speaking of the writings of Walt Whitman, the speaker said that he had the element of truth in his descriptions but lacked the second quality of beauty of form. No poem can live that does not express the true feelings of universal man, in describing the sensations of jealousy, hatred and love. Many works of the authors and poets of this country, he said, will live because of their "true to life" depiction of these feelings.

At the conclusion of the lecture, William H. Holmes sang several songs and there were violin selections by William Dawe. A short meeting of the club was held later, at which routine business was transacted.

upon every voter in the State with the proviso that in case he voted a certificate of that fact by the election officer should be a receipt for his tax. The money paid by those who failed to exercise their right of citezenship could be used toward the expenses of the election. The wonder to me is how any citizen can fail to desire to vote. There should be some penalty for the man who fails to perform such a high duty.

"The people have high ideals. One of the most hopeful signs of the time is the keen interest the people take in the action of their public servants. Very few of them come to see you, but the knowledge of the fact that thousands of disinterested men who voted for you are interested in what you do is what counts for good government.

"There should be but one question for a public official, 'What do the people want?' Sometimes I wonder when men talk to me if their ideals of government and mine can be the same. My view is that a public official is elected by the people to represent them in legislation, in appointment and in all administrative duties; and to stand between them and all applicants for anything the government has to give, whether it be a charter for a corporation, a contract for work or an office. An official elected by the people should approach all questions presented to him as a lawyer should act for his clinent; to ge the best terms he could for the people. Surely this was the idea of the fathers.

"There are splendid things in government ahead. There is much for us to work for to get them. The use of money at election must be abolished. The appointment or removal of men from office for political reasons must be prohibited by statue. The tenure of a faithful official must be during good behavior. No more 'ripper bills.' The problem of municipal government must be grappled with and solved along lines which will relieve the people from such heavy burdens of local taxation.

"Graft in every form must be eliminated from public contracts. Every man and every boy must have a fair chance in the race of life by making it as easy for one man or boy to succeed as another, whatever his position in life."

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS

GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE

Mr. Stokes' Farewell Address to New Jersey Legislature.

CONSERVATISM THE KEYNOTE

Praise For Lawmakers' Policy of Constructive Reform—Invested Capital Is Entitled to a Square Deal—Hasty, Ill Advised Acts of Other States Criticised.

Governor Edward C. Stokes in his farewell message to the legislature recapitulates the industrial history of the state since 1870, referring particularly to the growth of the transportation systems which traverse the state, the establishment of great plants by big industrial corporations, and the increase in the savings and investments of New Jersey's citizens. Continuing, he said:

"These happy conditions are invited by the conservative character of our institutions, the wisdom of our legislators, the unimpeachable integrity of our courts, the fact that property and invested interests can be safely intrusted to our hands and the honesty and integrity of our people.

"The policy of the state has been wise in the care with which it has avoided hampering or disturbing legislation and accorded equal protection to capital and labor, to individual and corporation. Legislation, even if well meaning, that interferes with business enterprise, that halts the investment of capital, always timid and uneasy, that shocks confidence and creates uncertainty, results in the impairment of prosperity and arrested development.

"President Roosevelt in his speech at Indianapolis last May laid down a fundamental principle of safe and sane legislation when in speaking of the necessity of inducing private capital to invest in railways he said:

"But the interests of those who build, who manage and who invest in the railroads must be no less scrupulously guarded than the interests of the public. It is urgently necessary at the present time, in order to relieve the existing congestion of business and to do away with the paralysis which threatens our expanding industries because of limited and inefficient means of distribution, that our railway facilities should be so increased as to meet the imperative demands of our internal commerce. The want can be met only by private capital, and the vast expenditure necessary for such purposes will not be incurred unless private capital is afforded reasonable incentive and protection. It is therefore a prime necessity to allow investments in railway properties to earn a liberal return, a return sufficiently liberal to cover all risks. We cannot get an improved service unless the carriers of the country can sell their securities, and therefore nothing should be done unwarrantedly to impair this credit nor decrease the value of their outstanding obligations.

A New Jersey Principle.

"The economic truth enunciated by the president in the foregoing quotation has long been recognized in New Jersey and has aided our great progress in industry, trade and transportation. Our state has recognized the fact that invested capital is entitled, as President Roosevelt says, to earn 'a return sufficiently liberal to cover all risks' and has guaranteed this assurance to capital, no matter what its form of investment.

"Unfortunately this policy has not characterized the legislation of all states of the Union. Hasty, ill advised laws have been enacted, under which it has been impossible to do business without loss. Great enterprises have been compelled to withdraw from these states as possible business fields, and others have sought relief in receiverships. Such legislation checks prosperity, halts the wheels of industry and leaves the laborer without employment and exposed to want.

"Evils and abuses there are that need the restraint of law, but the motive of law should be to cure, not to kill; to punish the guilty, not the innocent; to encourage, not terrify, capital. What we need is remedial rather than punitive legislation, constructive rather than destructive policies, just, not frenzied, enactment. Abuses can be stopped, wrongs can be righted, the people can be protected, without paralyzing industrial life. The state should not legislate for receiverships.

"The successful physician cures the disease without killing the patient. Legislation should remedy the ill without threatening bankruptcy. Otherwise legislation has failed.

"In many states legislation passed in moments of frenzy, without careful investigation, much of it a mere imitation of what was thought to be popular in other sections, much of it a trespass upon the legislative domain of the national government, has undoubtedly had a depressing effect upon industrial and business activity and has done much to destroy confidence, without which enterprise and progress are impossible. Such legislation has failed of its purpose, and New Jersey cannot afford to copy it. Her just, conservative policy is the best."

Public Morals.

On the subject of "public morals" Governor Stokes says:

"The passage of a law regulating divorces in accordance with the recommendations of the conference on uniform divorce laws was a distinct advance in social morals and tends to prohibit the recognition of the easy divorces that have been encouraged by the lax laws of some of the states of the Union.

"Public morals have not been forgotten. The age at which minors may enter saloons has been increased. So called back rooms connected with barrooms, where the youth of both sexes [illegible] have been abolished and screens forbidden on the days on which the sale of liquor is prohibited by law. The sanctity of the Sabbath has been preserved and recognized in legislation.

"The state has inaugurated the policy of improving the condition of the tenement house population. The great improvement in the sanitary and moral surroundings of this class of our population has justified this beneficent law. Under it over $12,000,000 worth of new tenement houses were erected last year, each house safeguarded with every precaution against the spread of fire, every room with a window opening directly to the outer air, every apartment provided with running water and with other necessary sanitary accommodations. Add to this the record of the department for the year in improving conditions in old tenement houses by the placing of fire escapes, by the installation of lights in the hallways, by the removal of uncleanly cesspools and other disease breeding conditions, and you have in brief the story of how New Jersey has taken front rank in this work."

The governor points with pride to the limitation of public utility franchises and the law prohibiting overcapitalization of public utility corporations. The taxation of their franchises brings to the state an annual revenue of $626,000. Under the new railroad law the steam roads pay the state $4,700,000 a year. The ease with which the state collects its great revenues has led unfortunately to extravagance. The balance in the state treasury on Oct. 31, 1905, was $2,858,398.13; on Oct. 31, 1906, the balance was $2,084,831.39, a decrease of $773,566.74. On Oct. 31, 1907, the balance was $1,320,038.44, a decrease of $764,852.95. This process cannot, of course, continue without a resulting deficit. The governor thinks the time has come to curb the state's growing expense account. Every possible economy should be inaugurated.

In providing appropriations for the next fiscal year he suggests that before any action is taken information be obtained from the treasurer and the comptroller as to the sum available for use and that the appropriation bill be framed accordingly.

Advocates Municipal Home Rule.

Governor Stokes advocates a more distinct separation between state and municipal affairs. Municipalities, he declares, should govern themselves. They should not be hampered by the continued intervention of the state in local details. He therefore recommends the passage of an act that would confer upon municipalities a general charter under which they should have the broadest powers of local administration consistent with good government. He most emphatically advises the separation of state and municipal elections. He also recommends a great curtailment in the number of general laws passed by the legislature. He declares that good faith demands the fulfillment of the platform pledges of both parties to enact an efficient civil service law. The governor regrets that public sentiment has turned against the voting machines and hopes that they will not be abandoned until some form of ballot that will insure purity of the ballot has been found.

To Prevent Overcapitalization.

Governor Stokes next recommends the consolidation of state boards in the interest of economy, publicity in the management of large corporations and an extension of the overcapitalization law to cover the issue of securities by other than public utility corporations. Shares of stock, he asserts, should be measures of actual value.

"The method suggested of issuing shares without a par value would substitute real worth for the arbitrary value fixed by the organizers of the company and would leave the determination of value where it should be left—to the determination of the laws of business and trade.

"Successful business corporations with a stock issue of this character demonstrate the practicability of this method.

"I suggest this thought for your consideration. It eliminates the problem of overcapitalization, difficult to deal with by a legislature without interfering with legitimate business. It could work no injury either to the corporation, stockholder or the public, and it would free the shares of the corporation from the too often false allurements of arbitrary par value and leave their values to be determined, just as are the values of real property, by the judgment of the market."

In conclusion Governor Stokes says:

"The message of a retiring governor is limited by official propriety. To his successor is properly left the presentation of those vital issues which were considered in the campaign and of other suggestions which naturally have their inception under the next administration.

"The good people of this state have selected as their chief executive one whose experience, training and character equip him for this great responsibility and insure a wise and fruitful administration. I commend him to your co-operation and loyal support in the work before him.

"I have confined myself in this message to the presentation of a few facts concerning the condition of our state and to the suggestion of such measures as are the logical outcome of the work of the last three years. During that time the patriotic spirit of the legislature and of state officials and the unfailing support of the people of this commonwealth for the measures that were right have been ever an inspiration and a help. For whatever good has been accomplished be theirs the praise.

"I lay aside my pen, but the state goes on under wise guidance to fulfill the ideals of a sincere and conscien[illegible] people."

LOCAL BANKS HOLD ANNUAL MEETINGS

Two changes were made in the directorate of the City National Bank at the annual meeting this afternoon. Dr. B. Van D. Hedges and Thomas J. Mumford are the two new directors, one taking the place of the late Walter Scott and the other filling the vacancy caused by the declination of James T. Closson, who has served as a director for thirty-three years. He was one of the organizers of the bank and one of the original stockholders. His interest in the bank will be the same as before and the board has extended an invitation to him to attend all meetings and associate himself with the welfare of the institution as in the past. Resolutions to that effect are now being drafted by the board.

Mr. Closson's resignation was presented because of his infirmity, being very hard of hearing, and for that reason he declined to serve longer as a director. His resignation was accepted with deep regret.

The full board of directors chosen is as follows: Louis K. Hyde, William Palmer Smith, H. G. Runkle, William F. Arnold, Francis DeLacey Hyde, J. Fred MacDonald, Floyd T. Woodhull, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges and Thomas J. Mumford. The directors will meet at 5 o'clock for organization.

No changes were made in the directorate of the First National Bank at the annual meeting also held this afternoon. These directors were named: A. J. Brunson, J. A. Smith, B. Frank Coriell, D. M. Runyon, W. R. Codington, J. A. Hubbard, Elias H. Bird, C. Frank French and P. J. Zeglio.

The Trust Company election also took place late this afternoon.

BOARD OF TRADE PLANS FOR ANNUAL BANQUET

Governor-elect John Franklin Fort, State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen and State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, speakers selected for the Board of Trade banquet to be held at Truell Hall, Tuesday night, January 28, as exclusively told in The Daily Press several weeks ago, have written to the committee in charge assuring it that they will be present. Governor Fort's assurance was received yesterday. It is not known what his subject will be, but it will probably be one of state interest. Senator Frelinghuysen will speak on "New Jersey, Its Progress and Prosperity." Senator Ackerman has not yet announced his topic.

Members of the Board of Trade are reminded of the meeting to be held Thursday night, when tickets for the banquet will be ready for distribution. A large attendance is hoped for. The committee which has charge of the banquet comprises Alexander Gilbert, chairman; Mayor Samuel Townsend and William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield; Eugene M. Laing and A. E. Force. Two hundred tickets will be issued and the price will be $3 as heretofore.

Seaman Williams, who has been quite ill at his home on Sandford avenue, is convalescing and was able to sit up yesterday for the first.

Philip Swain, of Craig place, who has been seriously ill with a fever, left yesterday afternoon for Atlantic City where he will spend a couple of weeks recuperating.

GIRL IN SCANT ATTIRE DANCES ON HOUSE TOP

CAVORTS GAYLY BEFORE HORRIFIED THRONG ON BRINK OF DEATH WHILE DEMENTED.

New York.—Clothed only in her silken nightrobe, a pretty French maid-in-waiting to a prominent Fifth avenue woman, cavorted gayly on the narrow ledge of an apartment house and furnished excitement for a big crowd which soon gathered in the street early the other day. With her hair tossed by the brisk morning breeze, and her scanty covering blowing closely to her, displaying a sylph-like form, she danced about heedless of the imminent peril of her position, while frenzied onlookers called for the police.

Some one turned in a double alarm, and three patrol ambulances and one hook and ladder company quickly responded, the clanging of signal bells adding to the excitement of the crowd, now thoroughly horrified at the sight, as the apparently crazed girl swayed to and fro on the brink of death.

Policeman McShane made his way to the sixth story of the building, and raised a window opening to the three-foot ledge on which the girl was giving the startling exhibition. Just as she was about to pass in front of him McShane stretched out his arms, and, closing them about her slender waist, pulled her through the opening, as her screams floated out and mingled with the cheers of the throng.

Throwing his coat about her, the policeman carried her down six flights and placed her in an ambulance.

The girl was taken to Bellevue hospital, where it was learned her name was Lizette Cozion, and that she had become demented during the night.

BABY BRAVED DEATH ON ROOF.

It Sat on Eaves Trough While Crowd Below Was Terrified.

Chicago.—Robert, the 13-months-old child of A. Sayers, mechanical engineer, crowed delightedly while perched on the extreme edge of an eaves trough at his home on Eggleston avenue and waved his chubby hands at a terrified crowd of persons gathered on the stone pavement below. The baby had clambered down the slanting roof of the porch in close pursuit of a little red slipper which had slipped from his grasp while leaning from an open window. Shrieking with laughter, the child slid down the slippery shingles toward the precipitous edge of the roof. Two floors below was a stone sidewalk. But the tin trough at the edge of the roof stopped the progress of the baby and its plight was soon recognized by Mrs. Mary Conlin, who lives just across the street.

With a scream for help Mrs. Conlin hastened to the spot where the child was in imminent danger of toppling over the edge of the roof to the stones below. Other persons gathered about and in the crowd was Richard Hogan, detective, from the Englewood station, who quickly recognized the child's danger and climbed one of the porch columns, while Mrs. Conlin kept the baby's attention from him. At the same time Mr. Sayers appeared at the open window and cautiously approaching the edge of the roof dragged the child from the grasp of the officer, who was clinging to it with one hand and to the roof with the other.

Located by Wooden Legged Hen.

Winsted, Conn.—When Lewis Ives made a wooden leg for one of his chickens to replace one a rat had gnawed off last summer, little did he think that it would be the means of his locating a rich cousin, Charles Histed of Joy, Mercer county, Ill. Histed read about his cousin's novel work and wrote to him. The deformed chicken grew to good size. Ives said the hen was as tender as any he had ever eaten, but he did not try the wooden leg.

Has No Use for Razorback Hog.

That degenerate monstrosity, that reproach to our civilization, that shrunken, shapeless, tasteless, porcine nightmare, that hideous dream of hide and hair and horror, that allegory of starvation, that specter of want and woe known as the Florida razorback hog—to sing his praises is to encourage degeneracy; to declare him toothsome is to insult the memory of Epicurus.—Live Oak (Fla.) Democrat.

"HELP! HELP!

Mamie's in the factory,
Annie's in the store,
Bridget will not worry
With housework any more.

Mollie's in a sweat-shop,
Kate's a manicure;
No one scrubs or washes,
Wages are no lure.

Maggie's an apprentice,
Flossie's making mats,
And that is why we're living

Cautious Girl.

The modern Romeo leaped from his red flyer and climbed the vine-covered balcony.

"Who in the world is that in there with a clothes pin on his nose?" gasped the youth.

"Pa," laughed the beautiful girl, "and I attached the clothes pin."

"Why?"

"To prevent him from detecting the odor of gasoline emanating from your machine."

Resourceful girl! The next minute they were speeding toward the parsonage while poor pa lay dreaming of a giant clam that was clamping his proboscis.—Chicago News.

Costly Free Schools.

Immigrant (with large flock of children)—I came to this country because I heard that education here was free.

Native—My poor man, you were misinformed. To educate that family of children in this country will bankrupt you.

"My goodness! Are the terms so high?"

"Nothing is charged for the teaching; but you will have to buy about half a ton of new, standard, revised, improved, and otherwise mutilated school-books every month or two."—New York Weekly.

Parlor Magic.

Mr. Kybosh, who was in search of a late copy of a monthly magazine, absent mindedly stepped into the parlor.

He was just in time to see the young man hastily remove his arm from the back of the chair in which Miss Kitty was sitting.

"Pressed! Oh, Change!" he muttered, instantly stepping back into the sitting room.

For Mr. Kybosh remembered that he was a young man himself years ago.—Chicago News.

Quick Change.

Eva—Yes, that handsome young man took Edna out on the lawn to see the stars shoot. He told her every time he saw one shoot he would claim a kiss. She blushed and said she hoped none of them would shoot.

Katherine—The idea! Did she keep up that sentiment all the evening.

Eva—Oh, no. Later on when all the stars had been exhausted we heard her ask the young man if there was any chance of the moon shooting—Chicago News.

THE MUSICAL CRITIC.

"I am surprised, sir, that you write criticism of concerts you do not attend!"

"What's the difference, madam? I don't know anything about music anyway!"—Jugend.

One-Sided.

"You should give us credit for good intentions," said Mr. Dustin Stax.

"Yes," answered the discontented citizen, "but we consumers get tired of being constantly called on to give credit when we are invariably required to produce cash."—Washington Star.

A Logical Difficulty.

"Pa, how do they indict a man who makes bad money?"

"The same way they indict other people. Why do you ask?"

"But if the money is counterfeit, how can the grand jury find a true bill?——Baltimore American.

A Drawback.

"I wish my teeth were not so regular," sighed the young woman regarding herself pensively in the glass. "Every time I smile when I'm talking to Harry, he looks as if he wondered how much they cost."

The Literary Test.

"Do you think the flying machine will ever be a success?"

"A success!" echoed the scientific author. "Why, it's already a success. The magazines are full of it."—Washington Star.

Qualified.

Editor—No, take it away. I don't buy poetry.

Poet—Well, all the editors who have read this say it isn't. Won't you look at it, sir?

The Fighting Chance.

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS.

Copyright, 1906, by the Curtis Publishing Company.
Copyright, 1906, by Robert W. Chambers.

"You hint at the true reason so chivalrously, so delicately," she said, "that I scarcely recognize it." The cool mockery of her voice and the warm, quick color tinting neck and face were incongruous. He thought, with slow surprise, that she was not yet letter perfect in her role of the material triumphant over the spiritual.

"I am sorry I came," she said reflectively. "You don't know why I came, do you? Sheer loneliness, Mr. Siward. There is something of the child in me still, you see. It seems my fate to pass my life in bidding you good night," she said, straightening up and turning to him with the careless laughter touching mouth and eyes again. Then, resting her weight on one hand her smooth white shoulder rounded beside her cheek, she looked at him out of humorous eyes.

"What is it that women find so attractive in you? The man's experienced insouciance? The boy's unconscious cynicism? The mystery of your self sufficiency? The faulty humanity in you? The youth in you already showing traces of wear that hint of future scars? What will you be at thirty-five, at forty? Ah," she added softly, "what are you now? For I don't know, and you cannot tell me if you would."

"What counts with you?" he asked after a moment.

"Counts? How?"

"In your affections. What prepossesses you?"

She laughed audaciously. "Your traits—some of them—all of them that you reveal. You must be aware of that much already considering everything"—

One slim white hand held a rose against her cheek; the other lay idly on her knee, fresh and delicate as a fallen petal, and he laid both hands over it and lifted it between them.

"Mr. Siward, I am afraid this is becoming a habit with you." The gay mockery was not quite genuine, the curve of lips too sensitive for a voice so lightly cynical.

He smiled, bending there, considering her hand between his, and after a moment her muscles relaxed and bare round arm and hand lay abandoned to him.

"Quite flawless—perfect," he said aloud to himself.

"Do you—read hands?"

"Vaguely." He touched the smooth palm. "Long life, clear mind and"—he laughed—"heart supreme over reason! There is written a white lie, but a pretty one."

"It is no lie."

She suddenly flushed and attempted to close her hand, doubling the thumb over. There was a little half hearted struggle, freeing one of his arms, which fell, settling about her slender waist; a silence, a breathless moment, and he had kissed her. Her lips were warm this time.

She recovered herself, avoiding his eyes, and moved backward, shielding her face with pretty upflung elbows out turned. "I told you it was becoming a habit with you!" The loud beating of her pulses marred her voice. "Must I establish a dead line every time I commit the folly of being alone with you?"

"I'll draw that line," he said, taking her in his arms.

"I—I beg you will draw it quickly, Mr. Siward."

"I do; it passes through your heart and mine!"

"Is—do you mean a declaration again? You are compromising yourself, you know. I warn you that you are committing yourself."

"So are you. Look at me!"

In his arms, her own arms pressed against his breast, resisting, she raised her splendid youthful eyes, and through and through her shot pulse on pulse until every nerve seemed to be aquiver.

"While I'm still sane," he said, with a dry catch in his throat, "before I tell you that I love you look at me."

"I will if you wish," she said, with a trembling smile, "but it is useless."

"That is what I shall find out in time. You must meet my eyes. That is well. That is frank and sweet."

"And useless—truly it is. Please don't tell me—anything."

"You will not listen?"

"There is no chance for you if you mean love. I—I tell you in time, you see. I am utterly frivolous—quite selfish and mercenary."

"I take my chance."

"No; I give you none. Why do you interfere? A—a girl's policy costs her something if it be worth anything. Whatever it costs, it is worth it to me. And I do not love you. In so short a time how could I?"

Then in his arms she fell a-trembling. Something blinded her eyes, and she turned her head sharply, only to encounter his lips on hers in a deep, clinging embrace that left her dazed, still resisting with the fragments of breath and voice.

"Not again—I beg—you. Let me go now. It is not best. Oh, truly, truly it is all wrong with us now." She bent her head, blinded with tears, swaying, stunned, then, with a breathless sound, turned in his arms to meet his lips, her hands contracting in his, and, confronting, they paused, suspending the [illegible] sure.

"Sylvia, I love you."

For an instant their lips clung. She had rendered him his kiss. Then trembling, "It is useless even though I loved you."

"Say it!"

"I do."

"Say it!"

"I—I cannot! And it is no use—no use! I do not know myself—this way. My eyes—are wet. It is not like me; there is nothing of me in this girl you hold so closely, so confidently. I do care for you—how can I help it? How could any woman help it? Is not that enough?"

"Until you are a bride—yes."

"A bride? Stephen, I cannot"—

"You cannot help it, Sylvia."

"I must: I have my way to go."

"My way lies that way."

"No, no! I cannot do it; it is not best for me—not best for you. I do care for you; you have taught me how to say it. But—you know what I have done—and mean to do, and must carry through. Then how can you love a girl like that?"

"Dear, I know the woman I love."

"Silly, she is what her life has made her—material, passionately selfish, unable to renounce the root of all evil. Even if this—this happiness were ours always—I mean if this madness could last our wedded life—I am not good enough, not noble enough, to forget what I might have had and put away. Is it not dreadful to admit? Do you not know that self contempt is part of the price? I have no money. I know what you have. I asked. And it is enough for a man who remains unmarried. For I cannot 'make things do;' I cannot 'contrive;' I will not cling to the fringe of things or play that heartbreaking role of the shabby expatriated on the continent. My role in life is to mount to a security too high for any question as to my dominance. Can you take me there?"

"There are other heights, Sylvia."

"Higher?"

"Yes, dear."

"The spiritual; I know. I could not breathe there, if I cared to climb. And I have told you what I am—all silk and lace and smooth skinned selfishness." She looked at him wistfully. "If you can change me, take me." And she rose, facing him.

"I do not give you up," he said, with a savage note hardening his voice, and it thrilled her to hear it, and every drop of blood in her body leaped as she yielded to his arms again, heavy lidded, trembling, confused, under the piercing sweetness of contact. Then her voice, broken, breathless:

"Good night. Love me while you can and forgive me. Good night. Where are we? All—all this must have stunned me, blinded me. Is this my door or yours? Hush! I am half dead with fear—to be here under the light again. If you take me again, my knees will give way. And I must find my door. Oh, the ghastly imprudence of it! Good night, good night. I—I love you!"

CHAPTER SIX

After the first few days of his arrival at Shotover time had threatened to hang heavily on Mortimer's mottled hands. After the second day afield he recognized that his shooting career was practically over. Then Mortimer, not yet done with self indulgence in more convenient forms, cast about him within his new limits for occupation between those hours consecrated to the rites of the table and the card room.

He drove four, but found that it numbed his arms and that the sea air made him sleepy. Motor cars agreed with him only when driving with a pretty woman. Forced through ennui to fish off the rocks, he soon tired of the sea perch and rock cod and the malodors of periwinkle and clam.

Then he took up his headquarters in the reading room on the chance of his wife's moving elsewhere, which she did, unobtrusively carrying Captain Voucher with her in a sudden zeal for billiard practice on rainy mornings now too frequent along the coast.

Mortimer possessed that mysterious talent, so common among the financially insolvent, for living lavishly on an invisible income, but, plan as he would, he had never been able to increase that income through confidential gossip with men like Quarrier or Belwether or even Ferrall. What information his pretty wife might have extracted he did not know. Her income had never visibly increased above the vanishing point, although, like himself, she denied herself nothing. One short, lively interview with her had been enough to drive all partnership ideas out of his head.

He was always studying women. Years before, Grace Ferrall had snapped her slim fingers in his face, and here at Shotover the field was limited. Mrs. Vendenning had left. Agatha Caithness was still a pale and reticent puzzle. Rena, Kathryn and Eileen tormented him. Marion Page coolly au fait yawned in his face. There remained Sylvia, who, knowing nothing about his species, met him halfway with the sweet and sensitive deference due a somewhat battered and infirm gentleman of forty-eight, until a sleek aside from Major Belwether spoiled everything, as usual, for her, leaving her painfully conscious and perplexed between doubt and disgust.

Meanwhile the wealthy master of Blacks Fells, Beverly Plank, had found encouragement enough at Shotover to venture on tentative informality. There was no doubt that ultimately he must be counted on in New York, but nobody except him was impatiently cordial for the event, and so at the little house party he slipped and slid from every attempt at closer quarters until, rolling smoothly enough, he landed without much discomfort somewhere between Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Mortimer. And it was not a question as to "which would be good to him," observed Major Belwether, with his misleading and benevolent mirth. "It was which would be goodest quickest!"

And Mrs. Mortimer, abandoning Captain Voucher by the same token, displayed certain warning notices perfectly comprehensive to her husband, and at first he was inclined to recognize defeat.

But the general unsuccess which had so faithfully attended him recently had aroused the long dormant desire for a general review of the situation with his wife—perhaps even the furtive hope of some conjugal arrangement tending toward an exchange of views concerning possible alliance.

The evening previous, to his intense disgust, host, hostess and guests had retired early in view of the point shooting at dawn, for not only was there to be no point shooting for him, but he had risen from the card table heavily hit, and, besides, for the first time his apples and port had disagreed with him.

As he had not risen until midday, he was not sleepy. Books were an aversion equaled only by distaste for his own company. Irritated, bored, he had perforce sulkily entered the elevator and passed to his room, where there was nothing on earth for him to do except to thumb over last week's sporting periodicals and smoke himself stupid.

But it required more than that to ensnare the goddess of slumber. He walked about the room haunted of slow thoughts; he stood at the rain smeared pane, fat fingers resting on the glass. The richly flavored cigar grew distasteful, and if he could not smoke, what in pity's name, was he to do?

For hours he sat in his room or paced the four walls, doubtful, chagrined, furious by turns. Once he drew out a memorandum book and stood under a lighted sconce studying the figures. His losses at Shotover staggered him but he had looked to his wife heretofore in such emergencies.

Studying the figures.

His uneasiness had produced a raging thirst. He punched an electric button with his fleshy thumb and prowled around, waiting. Nobody came. He punched again and looked at his watch. It astonished him to find the hour was 3 o'clock in the morning. That discovery, however, only appeared to increase his thirst. He opened the hall door, prepared to descend into the depths of the house and raid a sideboard, and as he thrust his heavy head out into the lighted corridor his eyes fell upon two figures standing at the open door of a bedroom. One was Siward; that was plain. Who was the girl he had kissed? One of the maids? Somebody's wife? Who?

Every dull pulse began to hammer in Mortimer's head. In his excitement he stepped halfway into the corridor, then skipped nimbly back, closing his door without a sound.

"Sylvia Landis, by all that's holy!" he breathed to himself and sat down rather suddenly on the edge of the bed.

After awhile he rose and crept to the door, opened it, glued his eyes to the crack in time to catch a glimpse of Siward entering his own corridor alone.

And that night Mortimer, lying awake in bed busy with schemes, became conscious of a definite idea. It took shape and matured so suddenly that it actually shocked his moral sense. Then it scared him.

"But—but that is blackmail!" he whispered aloud. "A man can't do that sort of thing. What the devil ever put it into my head? And there are men I know—women, too—scoundrelly blackguards, who'd use that information somehow and make it pay too. The scoundrels!"

He squirmed down among the bedclothes with a sudden shiver, but the night had turned warm.

"Scoundrels!" he said, with milder emphasis. "Blackmailers! Contemptible pups!"

He fell asleep an hour later, muttering something incoherent about scoundrels and blackmail.

And meanwhile in the darkened house from all round came the noise of knocking on doors, sounds of people stirring, a low voice here and there, lights breaking out from transoms, the thud of rubber shod heels, the rattle of cartridges from the echoing gunroom. For the guests at Shotover were awaking lest the wet sky, whitening behind the east, ring with the whimpering wedges of wild fowl rushing seaward over empty blinds.

* * * * * * *

The unusual stillness of the house in the late morning sunshine was pleasant to Miss Landis. She had risen very late, unconscious of the stir and movement before dawn, and it was only when a maid told her as she came from her bath that she remembered the projected point shooting and concluded with an odd, happy sense of relief that she was almost alone in the house.

A little later, glancing from her bedroom window for a fulfillment of the promise of the sun which a glimpse of blue sky heralded, she saw Leila Mortimer settling herself in the forward seat of a motor car and Beverly Plank climbing in beside her, and she watched Plank steer the big machine across the wet lawn while the machinist swung himself into the tonneau, and away they rolled, faster, faster, rushing out into the misty hinterland where the long streak of distant forest already began to brighten, edged with the first rays of watery sunshine.

So she had the big house to herself, every bit of it, and with it freedom from obligation, from comment, from demand or exaction; freedom from restraint; liberty to roam about, to read, to dream, to idle, to remember. Ah, that was what she needed—a quiet interval in this hurrying youth of hers to catch her breath once more and stand still and look back a day or two and remember.

So to breakfast all alone was delicious; to stroll unhurried to the sideboard and leisurely choose among the fresh cool fruits; to loiter over cream jug and cereal; to saunter out into the freshness of the world and breathe it and feel the sun warming cheek and throat and the little breezes from a sunlit sea stirring the bright strands of her hair.

Out over the rain wet odorous grass she picked her way, skirts swung high above the delicate contour of ankle and limb, following a little descending path she knew full of rocky angles swept by pendant sprays of blackberry, and then down under the jutting rock, south through thickets of wild cherry along the crags, until before her the way opened downward again where a tiny crescent beach glimmered white hot in the sun.

From his bedroom window Mortimer peeped forth, following her progress with a leer.

As she descended, noticing the rifts of bronzing seaweed piled along the tide mark, her foot dislodged a tiny triangle of rock, which rolled clattering and ringing below, and as she sprang lightly to the sand a man, lying full length and motionless as the heaped seaweed, raised himself on one arm, turning his sun dazzled eyes on her.

The dull shock of surprise halted her as Siward rose to his feet, still dazed, the sand running from his brown shooting clothes over his tightly strapped puttees.

"Have you the faintest idea that I supposed you were here?" she asked briefly. Then, frank in her disappointment, she looked up at the cliffs overhead, where her line of retreat lay.

"Why did you not go with the others?" she added, unsmiling.

"I—don't know. I will, if you wish." He had colored slowly, the frank disappointment in her face penetrating his surprise, and now he turned around instinctively, also looking for the path of retreat.

"Wait," she said, aware of her own crude attitude and confused by it. "Wait a moment, Mr. Siward. I don't mean to drive you away."

"It's self exile," he said quietly—"quite voluntary, I assure you."

"Mr. Siward!"

And, as he looked up coolly: "Have you nothing more friendly to say to me? Is your friendship for me so limited that my first caprice oversteps the bounds?"

"I meant no criticism"—

"Wait, Mr. Siward!" as he moved slowly toward the path. "You force me to say other things which you have no right to hear. After last night"—the vivid tint grew in her face—"after such a night is it not natural for a girl to creep off somewhere by herself and try to think a little?"

He had turned full on her. The answering color crept to his forehead.

"Is that why?" he asked slowly.

"Is it not a reason?"

"It was my reason for being here."

She bit her bright lip. This trend to the conversation was ominous, and she had meant to do her drifting alone in still sun dreams, fearing no witness, no testimony, no judgment save her own self in court with herself.

"I—I suppose you cannot go now," she reflected innocently.

"Indeed I can and must."

"And leave me here to dig in the sand with my heels? Merci!"

"Do you mean"—

"I certainly do, Mr. Siward. I don't want to dream now. I don't care to reflect. You see what you've done, don't you—saved me from an entire morning wasted in sentimental reverie over what might have been? Now you can appreciate it, can't you—your wisdom in appearing in the flesh to save a silly girl the effort of evoking you in the spirit? Ah, Mr. Siward, I am vastly obliged to you! Pray sit here beside me in the flesh for fear that in your absence I might commit the folly that tempted me here."

His low running laughter accompanying her voice had stimulated her to a gay audacity which for the instant extinguished in her the little fear of him she had been barely conscious of.

"Do you know," he said, "that you also aroused me from my sun dreams?"

"Did I? And can't you resume them?"

"You save me the necessity."

"Oh, that is a secondhand compliment," she said disdainfully—"a weak plagiarism on what I conveyed very wittily. You were probably really asleep and dreaming of bird murder."

Mugging in New York.

A young man was taken before a New York magistrate on a charge of larceny. The policeman who made the arrest asked permission to take him to police headquarters. "What for?" asked the judge. "To mug him, of course," was the response. "There is no 'of course' about it," the judge responded with emphasis. "You have no right to take a man's picture against his will until he has been convicted. This young man has not been convicted, and there is no 'mugging' in his case. The sooner the police understand the situation the less liable they will be to get into trouble." Other New York police magistrates have expressed themselves in similar terms.—Exchange.

JULIA ON THE WARPATH

Saueracker Woman Does the "Rough-house" Act in a Borough Restaurant.

GETS FIFTY DAYS' SENTENCE.

Only Out of Jail a Few Hours When She Consumes a Whole Quart of Jersey "Red Eye."

Gaining her freedom after serving a forty days' term in the Somerset county jail, at Somerville, Julia Saueracker, the borough boozefighter whose name appears on the North Plainfield police blotter scores of times, came directly back to her Somerset street haunts yesterday afternoon, and providing herself with a quart bottle of whiskey, succeeded in developing a pink elephant jag by midnight, which ended in her arrest by Marshal Peter Kiernan after her attempt to ward off the snakes by throwing chinaware, dishes and catsup bottles around in a Somerset street restaurant. At the session of the North Plainfield court this morning, Recorder Charles Dolliver sentenced her to fifty days in the county jail and she was sent off "down the road" again this afternoon. This is the fifth time the woman has been committed for a jail term in the last ninety days.

Julia says that she has heart trouble, and takes the booze as medicine. At the hearing she pleaded for leniency. "I'll get right down on my bowing knees here, your honor, and sign the pledge for a year if you won't sent me down again." But the recorder, realizing that she cannot get "medicine" in her cell, said he thought the best way to do was to remove the temptation and thus make it easier for reformation.

The woman's spree was an exciting one and the patrons of the restaurant, including the proprietor, fled from the place for their lives when she began her general bombardment. Julia was pretty well by the board when she came to the restaurant at about midnight. She sat down at one of the tables and went to sleep. Awaking in a short time, she took another dose of her "medicine" from the quart bottle she had on the table before her and ordered a cup of coffee. This mild drug brought the attack of the strange animal hosts described in no natural history book; and with a howl, she rose to her feet and let fly with her coffee cup at the imaginary foes. There were a few men in the restaurant at the time, but when the woman seized salt and pepper cellars, catsup bottles and plates and started the bombardment in earnest, they unanimously adjourned to the sidewalk, where they awaited in fear and trembling the arrival of an officer.

When Kiernan arrived on the scene, Julia had quited down a bit, and was gathered in without much remonstrance. At police headquarters, it was seen that she had a bad cut over the left eye. She didn't know exactly how it happened, but "allowed" that somebody had hit her with a stone early in the evening. Dr. Dundon was summoned and the wound bandaged before she was committed to her cell.

NO "BLACK HAND."

Posters Committee Tabors Gun Play and Murderous Scenes on Bill Posters.

Ever since Alderman Michael Mullen, chairman of the posters committee, joined the cohorts of those who would purify the morals of Greater Newark, he has used the blue pencil without stint. With one eye on the posters and the other on the police—he is also chairman of the police committee—he has declared that he would make it hot for the fellow who dared to trifle with the morals of the citys youth.

Up to yesterday the opportunity to combine the functions of both committee tso the attainment of a single end had not presented itself in detailed form.

Yesterday the opportunity came. It appeared in the shape of a villainous-looking poster, depicting the horrors of the "Black Hand," combined with gun play from a bakers' dozen horse pistols and Colt revolvers. Nothing like it had ever graced the billboards of Newark, even in the palmy days when the poster came not beneath the censors eye.

"Here's where I act as chairman of both committees," said the Alderman, as he put a large blue mark on the objectionable poster. "I will not only protect the morals of the young, but aid the police in their fight against the spread of the "Black Hand.'" The poster went the way of six predecessors which had met with aldermanic disfavor.

Gay girls in short skirts and half-dressed soubrettes—products of a muck-rake artist—also were tabooed.

"Golfers, more than one hundred of them, come from New York, Philadelphia, the South, Chicago and Western cities to compete in the amateur meetings. What would they say if at luncheon time one of them called for his usual bottle of beer or ale or light wine and was told that nothing of that nature could be served at the tables?"

STATE WITHOUT CHANCELLOR.

Present Incumbent's Term Expired at Midnight Yesterday.

The state of New Jersey is without a Chancellor and the business of the Chancery Court will be at a standstill for a week.

The term of Chancellor Magie expired at midnight, last night and under the law Governor Stokes has no power to name his successor.

A scheme was broached to have Chancellor Magie hand in his resignation last night and be either reappointed by Governor Stokes or have someone else named to await the inauguration of Governor Fort, but it was found that the former could only appoint for the unexpired term.

To Clean Somerset Street.

The work of scraping and cleaning Somerset street, which was to have been begun this morning, has been postponed because of the frost in the ground. The roadway is to be thoroughly scraped with the street scraper and a gang of the borough street department men will be employed in putting it in first-class condition.

Board of Assessors Organize.

The Board of Assessors met for reorganization in Mayor Fisk's office yesterday afternoon. After the new members, William T. Kirk and Asa F. Randolph, were sworn in, Harry C. Runyon was made president and Harry Van Emburg, secretary. The usual requisition for books and supplies was made.

Joins the Navy.

Joseph Wisniewski, of West Third street, received word yesterday that he had passed in an examination for admission to the U. S. Navy. He will report at the Brooklyn navy yard tomorrow.

SPECIAL ELECTION SOON

Vote on Consolidation and Annexation, if Bills are Passed by Lawmakers.

MEASURES TO BE DRAFTED.

Chairman Gilbert Authorized to Retain Special Counsel for that Purpose—To Fill a Vacancy.

No time will be lost by the Bimunicipal Consolidation Commission in having proper enabling acts passed by the Legislature in order to obtain the popular sentiment on the proposed annexation of North Plainfield to Union county and the merging of the borough into a greater city, the commissioners having arranged for that object yesterday. At a meeting yesterday afternoon in Mayor C. J. Fisk's office it was decided to retain a lawyer to draft the needed referendum bills. Chairman Alexander Gilbert was empowered to select a lawyer for that purpose without delay.

As already told in The Daily Press, there will be two distinct bills; one for annexation and the other for consolidation. The annexation election will be held first, in accordance with the recommendations of the excellent report of the commissioners provided the required bills get through the Legislature.
